In a free-hitting, raggedly played game, at Crescent Oval, Saturday afternoon, Scotch Plains defeated Y. M. C. A., 16 to 5. The less said about the contest, the better.

Arrested for Hunting on Sunday.

Michael Nicho and Nicholas Mica, Italians living near Watchung, were arrested yesterday by Game Warden Freeman Straight for hunting on the mountains. They were brought to North Plainfield, and Justice Bloom fined each one $20 and costs.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, of Park avenue, who spent the summer at Lake George, have returned home.

MR. GRIGGS WILL PRESIDE

Former Attorney General to be Chairman of Republican State Convention.

A PASSAIC DELEGATE

He May Also Be the State Chairman for the Gubernatorial Campaign—Favor Bishops' Law.

Former Governor John W. Griggs will preside over the Republican State convention at Trenton on Thursday. Mr. Griggs will be a delegate from Passaic, which is singular and alone in having for its candidate Chancery Clerk Vivian M. Lewis, of Paterson.

This is a "favorite son" selection, and after Passaic shall have satisfied its pride in Mr. Lewis by giving him its delegation vote the delegation will turn to some other candidate in order to get on the band wagon.

Mr. Griggs is an old hand in political conventions and makes a good presiding officer.

United States Senator Frank O. Briggs, chairman of the Republican State committee, said that the matter of the chairmanship of the Republican State convention had not been finally fixed, but that it was likely either former Governor John W. Griggs or former Assistant Postmaster General William M. Johnson would be chosen. Mr. Johnson will not preside.

It is understood upon good authority that the convention will take a decided stand in favor of the present Bishops' liquor law.

GOLFERS ARE IN FORM

Scores Show Contestants to Be Up to Best Mark.

IN CUP COMPETITIONS

E. T. Willson Wins First Honors in Play for Golf Committee Trophy—Six Scores Posted at Park Club.

The delightful weather attracted a large field of golfers to the Plainfield Country Club, and the bracing air was conducive to good playing. The majority of the scores posted in the various competitions were low and showed that the contestants are at the top of their game.

E. T. Willson won the first honors for the Golf Committee cup with a net score of 78. His gross score of 87 showed that he was playing a good game, and that his handicap of 9 was about right. An unusual thing happened when five players tied for second and third honors for this trophy. The scores for the Golf Committee cup were as follows:

E. T. Willson, 87, 9-78; Dudley H. Barrows, 79, plus, 2-81; H. G. Lapsley, 88, 7-81; Chas. A. Stover, 90, 9-81; L. A. Chase, 91, 10-81; S. H. Patterson, 93, 10-83; W. Lester Glenney, 81, plus 3-84; Henry D. Hibbard, 81, 3-84; D. H. Rowland, 99, 14-85; C. B. Morgan, 84, plus 2-86.

Harry Williams won first honors for the Green Committee cup with a net score of 74. The scores:

Harry Williams, 100, 26-74; C. M. Church, 103, 27-76; W. F. Merrill, 100, 20-80; C. P. Hamilton, 112, 18-94.

Five contestants were tied for Autumn cup honors, Class A. According to the rules two players must qualify each Saturday this month for match play next month. As there were five tie scores these players must play off to determine the two who shall qualify. The scores for Class A were as follows:

Dudley H. Barrows, 79, plus 2-81; H. G. Lapsley, 88, 7-81; Chas. A. Stover, 90, 9-81; L. A. Chase, 91, 10-81. Harry Williams and W. F. Merrill qualified for the Autumn cup, Class B. Their scores were as followks:

Harry William, 100, 26-74; W. F. Merrill, 100, 20-80.

Although there was a large field out at at Park Golf Club, but six contestants posted their scores in the competition for the President's, Golf Club and September cups. Dr. H. K. Carroll took first honors for the President's and scratch cups, with a score of 92, 10-82, while Miss Lydia Loizeaux finished second with a net score of 86. These scores were returned for the three trophies:

Dr. H. K. Carroll, 92, 10-82; Miss Lydia E. Loizeaux, 103, 17-86; J. B. Betts, 119, 30-89; W. V. Byard, 103, 8-95; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 105, 10-95; W. E. Lowe, 122, 22-100.

The four-ball foursome resulted in a tie between H. D. Hibbard and Charles A. Stover and L. A. Chase and E. T. Willson, each pair returning a net score of 72. This event attracted a large number of players, and the scores were excellent. The result:

H. D. Hibbard and C. A. Stover, 75, 3-72; L. A. Chase and E. T. Willson, 81, 9-72; D. H. Rowland and H. F. Fox, 89, 13-76; C. B. Morgan and Dudley H. Barrows, 74, plus 2-74; S. H. Patterson and C. C. Burke, 87, 9-78; E. A. Cruikshank and A. G. Henderson, 93, 15-78; W. Lester Glenney and Frank O. Reinhart, 77, plus 3-80; R. H. Cox and W. B. Taylor, 95, 15-80; A. E. Barclay and C. C. Riggs, 95, 15-80.

Rev. and Mrs. Eli Loofboro, who were married at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last week, are now on their way to Riverside, Cal., their future home, and where Mr. Loofboro is the pastor of the Seventh-Day Btpaist church.

IT'S KATZENBACH

After Caucus Cast Majority Vote for Martine, Egenoff Brings About Farmer-Orator's Defeat.

UNION STANDS SOLID

Essex and Camden Also for Plainfielder—Surrender to the Corporations—Hudspeth Chairman.

The corporations, it appears, nominated a Democratic candidate for Governor at Trenton this afternoon, former Mayor Frank S. Katzenbach, of Trenton, being the man selected. The "Farmer Orator," the time-non-ored foe of corporate influence in politics, went down in defeat fighting to the last. Credit for the surrender of the party to the corporations is said to be due to Peter Egenoff, of Elizabeth. Thus reads the tale of a party's base ingratitude to its most fearless and loyal fighter in campaigns extending over a period of forty consecutive years.

The convention was called to order at 2 o'clock in Taylor's Opera House. State Chairman Robert S. Hudspeth, of Hudson, was selected as chairman. Long before the convention was called to order it was evident that the corporations had gotten in their work, and the minority party had made an unconditional surrender. Even Somerset county was placed in the anti-Martine column. Union stood loyal to the last.

At 1 o'clock this morning Martine's triumph looked like a certainty. Several hours later came the turn in the tide, when the insurance agent arose from his seat at a meeting of the State committee and declared he would not stand for Martine. Shortly after midnight, there was a caucus of all delegations. Martine secured 752 of the 1,203 delegates to the convention; 603 was necessary for a majority and the Plainfielder was an easy winner. His chief opponent, Mr. Katzenbach, sent a message of congratulation to the Union county candidate conceding his election. Martine retired about 3 o'clock, when the State committee was in session.

At 9 o'clock this morning when the "farmer-orator" learned of Egenoff's strange action, he accused the latter of being inspired by the corporations. Martine declared that he had been outspoken in his condemnation of the alleged methods of the Public Service Corporation and the Prudential Insurance Company. To them he laid his defeat, declaring that Egenoff's move had been inspired.

There was a general breaking away when the various delegations learned

JERSEY GRAND CIRCLE B. OF A. IN CONCLAVE

Vineland Mayor Tenders Lodgemen Hearty Welcome After Flag Shower.

A big flag of welcome, unfurled on Landis avenue, Vineland, yesterday morning, announced that the Grand Circle of the Brotherhood of America, of New Jersey, would hold yesterday and today. From the folds of the big flag dropped 500 small silk flags for the school children to scramble for, and soon the avenue presented the pretties sight seen here for years. Merchants also decorated their stores for the occasion.

Mayor W. F. Sawyer delivered an address of welcome at 9 a. m., after which the 150 delegates went into executive session. Last evening the delegates were tendered a banquet in Grange Hall. The officers elected for the ensuing year were:

G. C. W., Thomas Gage, Atlantic City; G. C. J., A. Wrensch, Mount Clair; G. C. F., George Coleman, Masonville; G. S. K., D. W. Doan, Camden; G. H., Morton M. White, Millville; G. W. D., George P. Hoffman, Trenton; G. W. N., E. H. Broadwater, Vineland; supreme representatives, Frank, Lee, Vineland; G. A. Oliver, Trenton; A. J. Royer, Atlantic City; Oliver Purnell, Camden; Francis Warren, Trenton; grand trustee, C. J. Krayer.

Atlantic City was determined as the next meeting place. The Grand Circle went on record as overwhelming opposed to any change in the by-laws by the Supreme Circle. The debate was long and earnest.

Chief Doane Treasurer.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the local fire department, was re-elected treasurer of the Fire Chiefs' Association, of New Jersey, at the convention held in Wildwood on Saturday. Chief Allen was re-elected president and Chief O'Neill, of Ridgewood, vice president.

Co. K Resumes Weekly Drills.

The members of Co. K resumed its weekly drills last night under the direction of Captain H. B. Kitchell. There was a large attendance at the first meeting, and the boys went through the tactics in a highly satisfactory manner.

FIREMEN PLAN PARADE

Preparations Are About Completed for a Big Turnout at Somerville.

"UNCLE JOE" MARSHAL

Many Companies Accept Invitation for Demonstration Planned for October 10—Supper a Feature.

Preparations are about completed for the grand firemen's parade to be held in Somerville October 10, under the auspices of the Somerville Fire Department, and the event promises to be the leading one of its kind in the history of Somerset county. Arrangements have been made to accommodate thousands of visitors on that day.

The following companies have accepted invitations and will be in line with a band of music: Exempt Firemen's Association of New York (accompanied by a famous military band); Old Jersey Blues, with hand engine; Flemington Fire Department, Raritan Fire Department, Washington Engine Company No. 1, of Washington, Warren county; Resolute Hook and Ladder Company, of Morristown; Statington Fire Department, of Statington, Pa.; Hackettstown Fire Department, of Hackettstown, with visiting chiefs and ex-chiefs from Newark, New Brunswick, Plainfield, Trenton and other cities.

The Somerville companies in the line of march will be the West End Hose Company, Central Hook and Ladder Company, Lincoln Chemical Engine Company and the Somerville Engine Company.

Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen will act as grand marshal, and he will have for his aides Clarence E. Case, Herman F. Moosbrugger, Dr. J. F. McWilliam and Captain Joel Wilson. The parade will form at 2 p. m., and the Hudson River Military Academy Cadet Corps, of Finderne, will act as escort to the grand marshal.

The visiting fire men and the other guests will be tendered supper in the different churches of Somerville.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

Primary and Junior Union Observe Twelfth Year of Its Organization.

The Primary and Junior Sunday School Teachers' Union held its first fall meeting at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, it being in the nature of a rally and celebration of the twelfth anniversary of the union. The devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Ella Lounsbury. Mrs. Lucius Wightman taught the lesson and Miss Nettie Beeching spoke on the regularly assigned topic.

After the regular order of exercises, the members enjoyed a social hour, during which refreshments were served. Short addresses were made concerning the twelve successful years of the union and the progress made.

Will Give Silver Tea.

The choir of the Church of the Holy Cross will hold a silver tea Thursday afternoon, September 19, from 4 to 7 o'clock, in the rectory, 30 Washington avenue. The mothers of the silver-voiced youngsters are exerting all their culinary ability to prepare delectable dainties such as cakes, crullers, etc., fudge and candies, which will be on sale at the tea. The members of the altar committee will assist Mrs. George A. Warner in pouring tea. The rectory will be hospitably open to all.

J. F. Ten Eyck Breaks His Leg.

Jeremiah F. Ten Eyck, one of the leading citizens of South Plainfield, and well known here, is detained at home with a fractured leg, the result of an accident a few days ago. He was walking along the street after dark, when he stepped into an uncovered coal hole. The leg was broken just above the ankle. With the assistance of neighbors he returned home and has been confined to his bed ever since.

Brick Paving Started.

Contractor C. M. Meeker started the work of laying brick pavement yesterday, beginning at Park avenue and Front street. He has a large gang of men and several horses and carts employed. The steam roller has also been pressed into service for the purpose of furnishing power to plough up the hard macadam. It is Mr. Meeker's intention to rush the work with all possible speed.

Funeral of Edwin Wright.

The funeral of Edwin Wright, who died at Fanwood last week, was held from the late home yesterday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Mulford, rector of All Saints' church, officiated. The burial was in the cemetery at Scotch Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Martin, of East Front street, have returned from their vacation spent at Niagara Falls.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF WALTER SCOTT

FOLLOWING EPISCOPAL SERVICE INTERMENT MADE AT HILLSIDE.

The funeral services of Walter Scott, who was so widely known throughout the country as an inventor and builder of printing machinery, were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock from the late residence on East Front street. There was a large attendance of friends, including many business associates from New York; also the large force of employes from the Walter Scott Printing Machine Company. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, conducted the services.

The floral tributes were many and handsome, including a large standing wreath from the directors of the City National Bank, of which Mr. Scott was one for a great many years. The employes from the works also sent a beautiful floral tribute, while there were several smaller pieces from friends and neighbors.

All but two of those who acted as pall-bearers, are directors of the City National Bank, the exceptions being Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and David E. Titsworth. The other bearers were Louis K. Hyde, James T. Closson, J. Fred MacDonald, Francis DeLacy Hyde and William F. Arnold. The burial took place in the family plot at Hillside cemetery.

Out of respect to Mr. Scott the works were closed after his death and they will probably not be re-opened until the latter part of the week.

WARREN'S MEMORIAL ORGAN IS INSTALLED

MRS. EGE'S GIFT IN MEMORY OF HER SISTER, MRS. TALMADGE.

The handsome new organ just installed by the Midmer Company in Warren chapel on Watchung avenue, the borough, was tested last night by William E. MacClymont, organist of Grace church, before an audience of about fifty members of the chapel. It is a particularly sweet toned instrument and everyone was delighted with it. The organ is a memorial given by Mrs. Emma F. Ege in memory of her sister, Mrs. Laura A. Talmadge. Its cost was $2,500.

The selections played by Mr. MacClymont was varied and afforded an excellent opportunity to judge its tone and capabilities. When the new chapel is occupied Charles Wheeler, who has been organist at Warren chapel for a great many years, will continue in that position.

The chapel is now about completed, excepting the furnishings, and it is hoped that possession will be possible soon after October 1. A striking feature of the interior is the electric chandelier. It is in the shape of a large brass ball and is studded with incandescent bulbs. The interior arrangement is especially well adapted for every need of the chapel, including the preaching services and sessions of the Sunday-school, as well as rooms for committee meetings. The women are now very busy arranging for the furnishing of the new building.

TRIED TO SAVE MAN; HURT.

Heavy Plank Dragged Trenton Carpenter from Roof.

Trenton, Sept. 17.—About to throw a heavy plank from the top story of a hotel where he was employed, Theodore Matthews, a carpenter, saw a man passing in the alley below and endeavored to hold the board, fearful that the man might be injured.

The result was that Matthews himself was dragged through the window and hurled three stories to the ground, receiving injuries from which he may die. The man in the alley was not hurt. He helped carry Matthews to an ambulance that took him to a hospital.

Home From Saratoga.

Captain and Mrs. W. C. Smith and their daughters, the Misses Mary Tomlinson Smith and Clara Barton Smith, of Grandview avenue, have returned from Saratoga, where they attended the annual encampment of the G. A. R., and Women's Relief Corps. Miss Mary Smith was on the staff of the national president at Saratoga and assisted the national officers in receiving the guests on reception day.

Borough Court Cases.

Charles Hawkins, colored, and Godfrey Williams, who were arrested in the borough Saturday night for being drunk and disorderly, were released by Recorder Dolliver last night under suspended sentence. John Traynor, of Howard street, arrested last night on a similar charge, will be given a hearing tonight.

COUNCILMANIC NOMINEES

Iremonger, Randolph and Suydam for Councilmen-at-large.

ARNOLD A CERTAINTY

Runyon Opposition Unlikely—Shellabarger a Possibility for Councilman-at-Large.

It is quite certain now that there will be no bitter contests at the Republican city convention on Wednesday night, October 10, when a city judge, three councilmen-at-large, a city treasurer and minor officers will be nominated. The organization is in absolute control and things will run smoothly. Former City Chairman Edward E. Iremonger, of the Second ward; W. W. Suydam, of the Fourth ward, and either Councilman Charles Randolph or Joseph Shellabarger, of the Third ward, are the probable candidates for councilmen at-large.

William F. Arnold.

The choice of the Colbyites, R. Henry Depew, of the Second ward; Juan Babcock, of the Fourth ward, and Duncan W. Taylor, of the Third ward, were defeated at the primaries and will not, therefore, figure at the city convention. Duncan W. Taylor is considered a splendid man for the place, but the friends of Mr. Iremonger point to him as an equally capable citizen.

There is no question about the renomination of City Treasurer William F. Arnold. He is considered an ideal official and some of the Republican leaders say that he will have the job for life. Every influence is being brought to bear by the Republican leaders on the privates in the ranks, particularly the delegates from the Fourth ward, in favor of an unanimous renomination for City Judge William N. Runyon.

The Worthy Officials.

If the Republican city convention gives a unanimous vote for the renominations of City Treasurer William F. Arnold and City Judge William N. Runyon, it will reflect the best sentiment of the community. Both are deserving and highly efficient officials, and a life tenure in their present capacities is none too much for either.

Strong Entry List for Races.

A strong entry list is being made up for the matinee races to be held at the Gentlemen's Driving Park Saturday, under the auspices of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Club. Handsome silver cups will be offered in each class and the races promise to be the best of the season.

LOCAL TAX RATE $1.47

Increase in Plainfield Tax Rate Amounts to 12 Cents on the $100.

FIGURES ANNOUNCED

Union County Board of Taxation Announces Rates in the Various Municipalities.

The Union County Board of Taxation at Elizabeth, today, announced the tax rates for the various cities, boroughs and towns in the county, excepting Rahway and Summit, about which there is some doubt at present. The rates in those places will probably be given out tomorrow.

Plainfield's rate for the coming year will be $1.47, against $1.35 last year. This increase of twelve cents is entirely due to the increased amount of money needed for State school purposes. The law provides that on every dollar of valuation in the county there shall be paid for school purposes three-quarters of a mill. The large amount of money to be received for this fund from the railroads, if the court's decision is upheld, will not be available until next year, hence the necessity of increasing the local rate accordingly.

The rates thus far determined and announced follow:

Clark Township, 83 cents; Cranford, $1.53; Elizabeth, $1.46; Fanwood Township, $1.44; Fanwood borough, $1.53; Garwood borough, $1.53; Linden township, 85 cents; Linden borough, $1.11; Mountainside, $1.24; New Providence Township, $1.56; New Providence Borough, $1.40; Plainfield, $1.47; Roselle Borough, $1.40; Roselle Township, $1.50; Springfield, $1.55; Union Township, $1.32; Kenilworth, $1.29; Westfield, $1.79; Rahway and Summit in doubt.

As stated exclusively in The Daily Press of yesterday the county rate for the coming year will be $27.73 per thousand and the State school rate $19.14 per thousand valuation. The total county valuation has been determined at $114,454,000.

GOVERNOR AND FORT DISCUSSED PLATFORM.

That Is Said to Have Been Object of Former's Visit to East Orange.

Trenton, Sept. 17.—Governor Stokes was in Newark for several hours Saturday afternoon, and during his visit took luncheon with Supreme Court Justice Fort, the Republican Gubernatorial aspirant, at the latter's East Orange home. It is not said whether the State Executive's mission was a political one or not, but it is understood he and the jurist had a talk regarding the platform of the party which is to be submitted to the State convention, Thursday. It is also said the Governor assured the jurist that South Jersey would send an almost united delegation to Trenton for his nomination.

After admitting that the Governor had called on him and taken luncheon Justice Fort declined yesterday to discuss the visit, except to say it was purely a social call on the State Executive's part.

MIDDLESEX COURT TERM.

Three Interesting Criminal Cases and a Civil Suit Listed to Come Up.

New Brunswick, Sept. 17.—The September term of court opened today by Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Swayze. The Port Reading murder case, the Metuchen crap shooting affair, and the alleged murder, in a boyish row, of a boy by five youngsters who are now in jail, will be the principal cases to come before the grand jury. On the civil list of causes in the various courts there are few new cases, although the list is a long one, from the old calendar.

The suit of the New Brunswick Publishing Company against Robert Carson, collector of customs at the port of Perth Amboy, and Charles W. Russell, postmaster of New Brunswick, brought to compel performance of an alleged subscription to a bond issue of the company, is one of the interesting cases.

John C. Lynch Improving.

John C. Lynch, of Elizabeth street, who was seriously injured on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Metuchen, Saturday night, while attempting to board a fast westbound passenger train for Buffalo, was reported at the hospital, today, as being much improved. It is now believed that unless there should be other complications Mr. Lynch will recover.

UNION FOR FISK

This County May Give Him Complimentary Vote in Republican State Convention.

A MODEL CANDIDATE

Mayor of Plainfield, Foreman of Union County's Grand Jury a Gubernatorial Probability.

When Union county is reached on the roll during the balloting for the gubernatorial nomination at the Republican State convention, it is quite probable that a solid vote will be cast for Charles Joel Fisk, mayor of Plainfield, and the first citizen of this progressive municipality. Such is the talk in political circles, and it appears to be well founded.

The argument is used that all forces can unite on Mr. Fisk, something that cannot be said of any candidate now in the field. The Plainfielder would be acceptable to both the regulars and the Colbyites, it is argued, and there is no question as to his ability to discharge the duties of the office in a most businesslike, able and conscientious manner.

When City Judge William N. Runyon, the leader of the New Idea movement in Union county, was asked today what he thought of the move to give the county's vote to Mr. Fisk, the brilliant young leader said:

"Such action on Union's part is a graceful and well merited compliment to Plainfield's first citizen. I am only sorry that twenty other counties will not do the same thing."

Mr. Runyon has been lined up against the organization which Mr. Fisk represents for several years, but the two are warm personal friends.

The regulars' county leaders would not discuss the subject, but it is quite evident that they will lend their enthusiastic support to the idea which originated among the regularly chosen delegates from the county.

Union county's delegation to the convention will go to Trenton in a special train on the Jersey Central. It will make a stop here at 9 o'clock. It is probable that both Mayor Fisk and Senator Ackerman will be among the delegates. Mr. Ackerman is anxious to have Mr. Fisk on hand and therefore is likely to accept the offer of Robert Rushmore, who wants the Senator to use his credentials.

Death of Rev. M. E. Dwight.

Many friends in this city will learn with deep regret of the death of Rev. Melatiah Everett Dwight at Mount Holyoke on Saturday morning, September 14. Mr. Dwight was a resident of Rockview avenue for a number of years, and endeared himself to a large circle of friends, who admired him for his Christian character, his generous impulses and his kindly social nature. He removed from this city to 31 Mount Morris Park West, New York, where his funeral was held this morning at 11 o'clock.

Milliner's Opening at Tepper's.

M. & A. Tepper, proprietors of the dry goods store, formerly that of I. H. Boelm, invite your attention to their fall opening in the millinery department, to be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. No expense has been spared and the newest imported pattern hats are shown. Miss Strahuber, recently engaged as designer, is now in charge and will be pleased to show the new stock. The store will be closed tomorrow on account of a holiday.

Forget Your Money Troubles—We Can Show You How

Start life afresh. Borrow from us to pay the several you owe and make payments in keeping with your income. By so doing you keep your credit good. Ease up the pressure on yourself and have a chance to "turn around" in other things needed for the family.

An Illustration

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $4 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

Do You Realize

that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.

Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.

Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?

We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.

In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.

Why not decide to get a new piano now?

Pianos to rent at moderate terms.

M. & A. TEPPER

invite you to attend their Fall Opening in their Millinery Department, Thursday, September 19th, and Friday, September 20th. Showing copies of the newest imported Pattern Hats, such as you could heretofore see only by visiting New York's exclusive Millinery Shops. We have spared no expense to bring here a Milliner of such unquestioned ability as to give this house a prestige from the start as the authority on Millinery styles in this section of the state. We believe the women of Plainfield will appreciate our efforts to serve them with the newest and best at most moderate prices. Miss Strohuber, the designer, will be on the floor and happy to meet the visitors to this department, and show them the fruits of her labors of the past thirty days—you will agree it's a most charming collection of Hats at wonderfully "Little" prices.

Come and be with us Thursday and Friday of this week.

Store will be clased Wednesday all day on account of Holiday.

FOR GOVERNOR

As the day for the Republican State convention approaches, it appears to be more and more doubtful that the various forces within the party will be able to concentrate on any one of the several splendid men who are seeking the gubernatorial nomination. Certain it is that on the first ballot there will be a much diversified expression, and it is considered extremely unlikely that any single candidate will be able to muster a majority of delegates. Even should the convention be able to decide upon any one of the avowed candidates, the question arises whether he could be elected. All of them have figured conspicuously in public life, and each is weak in some vital point.

The question, therefore, arises whether it would not be the part of wisdom to place before the people as the Republican standard bearer a man who is eminently qualified to fill the position, but one who at the same time is not the subject of antagonisms; one who would be acceptable to all divisions in the great Republican party; one who is honest, fearless, progressive and able, and one whose record shows that he is a harmonizer with honor. Such a man is Charles Joel Fisk, the honored mayor of Plainfield, the admirable foreman of the present Union county grand jury, and the Republican worker known throughout the State as a most excellent type of citizenship.

Mr. Fisk needs no word of commendation so far as the people of Union county are concerned. But for the sake of those who have not followed the public course of this model man, a few words about his career would not be amiss. During his twenty-seven years' residence in Plainfield, he has shown his deep interest in the public welfare by his self-sacrificing work not only in Plain field, but in the county. Never a man of mere words, he has given ample proof that he is one who does things and does them for the benefit of his fellows. Ten years ago he was first elected mayor of Plainfield, and his administration was so excellent that it attracted widespread and favorable comment. Frequently he has served in other capacities, for instance as the head of the congressional committee and conventions; as a delegate to State and national conventions and as chairman of county conventions. In all such positions his services have been eminently satisfactory. At the present time he is again mayor of Plainfield. The progress made by the city during his incumbency of that office is without a parallel. He has demonstrated that he is a man above party in the performance of his duty, but at the same time is a regular of regulars, though one whose energies are devoted to perfect harmony.

As foreman of the Union county grand jury, his work is known in all parts of the State. Fearless man as he is, Mr. Fisk has exposed a condition of affairs that threatens the whole republican form of government. Without regard to what effect it might have on political matters, he struck out boldly and his indictment had instant salutary effect. Such has been his whole course in life.

Mr. Fisk is the man of the hour. It is up to his party to accept that fact.

EFFECT OF MARTINE'S DEFEAT.

The Republican party owes a big debt of gratitude to Peter Egenoff and the corporations whose political influence has been consistently condemned by the "Farmer-orator" can congratulate themselves that they have such a friend as the Elizabeth man has proven himself to be.

Mr. Martine was the strongest candidate the Democrats could have named. With him as their standard bearer, they could have undoubtedly carried Hudson, Essex and Union counties. The next Governor of New Jersey will be a Republican.

IN RE IREMONGER.

It is gladsome tidings to hear that former City Chairman E. E. Iremonger is booked for a nomination as councilman-at-large. In him, Mayor Fisk will find an excellent supporter in his progressive movements.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

There are many striking scenes in Nixon & Zimmerman's new cartoon musical extravaganza, "Simple Simon Simple," which comes here September 20. The most attractive, however, is the pond lily scene in act three. The curtain rises to weird music and a view of a dismal swamp is disclosed. Pools of water shimmering in the moonlight are to be seen in the foreground, while in the distance the mist slowly rises from the boggy ground. Cat tails and rushes wave gently in the wind; the fire flies gleam in the dusk; the frogs croak and the crickets chirp is heard abroad in the land.

On Thursday Billy B. Van and his splendid acting company of dancers, singers and comedians will present "Patsy in Politics." The play is in two acts, the first showing the interior of a country hotel and the last act the exterior and surrounding grounds. In the new play Van has been given unlimited scope towards displaying those mannerisms, funnyisms and facial contortions that he alone can dispense. He is a scream from start to finish.

As Flotsam, the lighthouse keeper's daughter, in "The Girl From Out Yonder," which will be the attraction at the New Plainfield Theatre tonight, Miss Adelaide Thurston has the best opportunity for the exhibition of those sweet winning qualities by which she has endeared herself to thousands of playgoers all over the county, that she has ever had.

John Griffith is announced to appear here tomorrow in Shakespeare's tragedy, "King Richard the Third," His management promises an excellent company, complete scenery and all that is needful to insure a performance that will delight the lovers of classical plays. Mr. Griffith's portrayals are strenuous and intellectual. He has lungs, physique and discretion and many critics are very enthusiastic over him. He draws big audiences, interesting them very much and compelling admiration by his vigorous and sincere work. He is the best of our living, native born tragedians, an enthusiast in his profession, and deserves the excellent position he has attained. He will draw a very large audience here on account of his high standing as an actor and his very great personal popularity.

De Wolf Hopper in any of his numerous comic opera characters, whether it be "Wang," "El Capitan" or any one of the half dozen other parts he has played in his extended career, is an attraction always looked forward to by his many admirers, and there is a tenfold pleasure in the anticipation of seeing this jovial comedian in a new role. Thanks to Reginald De Koven and Frederic Ranken this pleasure is to be realized the present season, for we are to have among several of the year's best amusement offerings Mr. Hopper and his opera company in an entirely new piece, "Happyland," which was a tremendous success in New York and Boston, where the tall son of musical comedy played to crowded houses.

FOR WINTER EVENINGS.

Identification a Good Game for Fiction Readers.

A good game for a company of fiction readers is called identification. It is easily arranged and never fails to "take" with intelligent people.

When the amusement is about to begin the hostess distributes among her guests large cards or strips of cardboard on which are the names of fifty character, male and female, extracted from standard or popular novels, who must be identified.

This is done by writing opposite the name of the character th title of the novel in which it figures. Each player may have a separate list, or one list may be given to each pair ofpartners who work together to complete it.

In preparing a set of characters avoid selecting those which fill title roles or who are too familiar to the reader.

A good beginning for such a list would be:

Babbie ("The Little Minister").
Dinah Morris ("Adam Bede").
Nydia ("The Last Days of Pompeii").
Kate Hardcastle ("She Stoops to Conquer").
Adam Moss ("A Kentuck Cardinal").
Little Eve ("Uncle Tom's Cabin").
Blanche Amory ("Pendennis").
Rosamund Lydgate ("Middlemarch").
Sir Lucius O'Trigger ("The Rivals").
Josephine March ("Little Women").
Sancho Panza ("Don Quixote").
Edward Fairfax Rochester ("Jane Eyre").
Miss Euphemia Dundas ("Thaddeus of Warsaw").
Noddy Boffin ("Our Mutual Friend").
Mrs. Malaprop ("The Rivals").
Lady Teazle ("The School for Scandal").
Quilp ("Old Curiosity Shop").
Eugene Marchbanks ("Candida").
Lucy Dashwood ("Charles O'Malley").
Phineas Fletcher ("John Halifax").

A popular or standard novel would make a good choice in prizes, to be awarded for the longest list of correct answers.

COLLEGE AND SCHOOL.

The University of Berne, in Switzerland, possesses a lady professor in Mlle. Gertrude Woker. She is only twenty-six and lectures on physics and chemistry.

England is not a good field for school-teachers looking for situations. Some months ago the authorities in a town advertised for two teachers and received more than 11,000 applications.

C. B. J. Snyder, superintendent of school buildings in New York city, reports that about 45,000 additional sittings have been provided in the elementary schools in all boroughs, with 3,000 more in the high schools. Mr. Snyder says that many of the new buildings are far from finished.

PIANOS GOING FAST AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

Extremely Easy Terms Offered to All. 'Twill pay you to get your piano now; Save 1-3 to 1-2 the regular price and "Play while you pay." Terms Convenient to You.

Open Evenings During Sale, 170 East Front St.

Do you need a piano? Have you promised your daughter, wife or son an instrument? If so, now is the time to buy, now while we are positively and permanently closing out the Hallet & Davis Branch Store at 170 East Front Street.

All we are asking or expect to get for any instrument at this stock is the wholesale cost, and many of them are offered at much less than cost. This is not fiction or fancy, but facts, cold, bare facts. You may be sure this is a popular event.

You may be sure also that the pianos, organs, etc., are going fast; that is, large numbers are being sold daily.

Never before in the piano selling history of Plainfield have so many instruments been sold in so short a time.

The reason for this extraordinary piano selling and the wonderful enthusiasm this sale has produced lies wholly in the fact that the best of instruments are being closed out at the greatest money-saving prices ever known, and the terms offered to all are so very easy that none need hesitate; everybody can have a piano and music in the home while you lay by the money little by little to complete the payment.

Stock Going Rapidly.

When this stock is sold, and they are going rapidly, no more can ever be furnished at these factory-price figures. It will be your last chance to get a piano at wholesale cost and on easy payments.

Pianos Shipped Anywhere.

I will send pianos anywhere, to be paid for on our easy payment plan, if desired; so write today, if you can't call in person. The stock, mostly new, a few second-hand, consists of such well-known makes as the Hallet & Davis, Kimball, Conway, Bowen, Wellman, and many others.

Several New York made $250 pianos will be closed out at $137. Upright Pianos, regular $225, $250, $275, to be closed out at $137, $157, and $187.

Terms, $10 or more down, $5 to $8 monthly.

Upright Pianos, comprising various good makes; new, but some little store worn; regular values $325, $350, to $375, to close at $175, $200 to $237.

Terms, $10 to $20 down, $6 to $10 monthly.

Upright Pianos of the highest class, regular $400, $450, $500 and $600 styles, to close out at 1-3 to 1-2 off. This is the opportunity of a lifetime to get one of the best pianos for even less money than you'll pay regularly for the ordinary kind.

Your terms will undoubtedly be our terms.

Your credit will buy lower now by far than you can ordinarily for cash; just come and see.

This entire stock will be absolutely and quickly closed out.

You should not miss this sale if you contemplate purchasing an instrument in the next two or three years.

Square Pianos and Organs Given Away.

I will give away a number of square pianos and nice cabinet organs; all that will be charged for them is the cartage and the repairs put on them.

Store open evenings until 9 o'clock to accommodate those who cannot get in during the day.

Sale positively lasts but 10 days.

this morning of Egenoff's strange conduct. Somerset county decided to cast its first ballot for former State Senator S. S. Child, of that county, and then to go over to Katzenbach. Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer is one of the Somerset delegates, and it has been declared all along that he was opposed to Martine.

Union remained to the last, as did Essex and Camden counties. Essex has 186 votes, Union 70 and Camden 85, about a third of the entire convention vote. Hughes was oneof the chief Katzenbach boomers.

Brigadier General D. F. Collins was chosen chairman of the Union county delegation. Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., of this city, was made a member of the committee on credentials. Somerset organized by choosing former Congressman A. A. Clark chairman. Horace Coddington was made secretary and S. S. Swackhamer a member of the committee on resolutions.

The special train carrying the Union County Democratic delegation reached this city at 9:10. The train was made up of seven coaches, about four of which were filled. The delegation from Elizabeth and other towns between that place and Plainfield numbered over a hundred, a majority being from the county seat.

The following members of the Plainfield and North Plainfield delegation got aboard the "special.":

David J. Carney, S. S. Swackhamer, J. A. Staats, John P. Owens, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., Clarence E. Teel, Levi Kline, Patrick J. Reville, J. V. F. Dilts, Edward Lynch, De Witt C. Ivins, Walter Linbarger, Joseph Sheppard, W. H. Harding, Stephen H. Schleif, John H. Van Winkle, Jr., William A. Coddington, Ira Hurlbut, Edward M. Van Buren and Richard A. Boyce. It is expected that William L. Saunders, of the borough, will join the local delegation at Trenton.

Each member of the Union county delegation was provided with a handsome badge, bearing the picture of James E. Martine, their choice for the gubernatorial nomination. There was a feeling among the whole delegation that the "Farmer Orator" would receive the nomination, and before the train left Plainfield Mr. Swackhamer remarked: "It certainly does look like Martine."

Delegations were picked up at Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville, after which the train ran through to Trenton. There was great enthusiasm among the Democrats and a strong feeling of harmony seemed to prevail.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon Martine conceded his defeat. Egenoff's reasons for opposing Martine were that he was a friend of William J. Bryan and that he was not a winner. He added that he was too radical.

It is said that Governor Stokes made the remark yesterday that Katzenbach would be nominated and that Senator Smith was really for Fort, the Republican candidate. It is rumored that the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Prudential Insurance Company and the Public Service Corporation were back of the fight to defeat Martine. These corporations it is alleged, favor Fort for Governor.

The platform to be adopted declares, among other things, flatly for direct nomination, including that for United States Senators, for the abolition of the voting machine, and the County Board of Assessors; for a franchise tax and for the regulation of public utilities, similar to that adopted in New York.

PERSONAL.

Miss Gorsline, of Park avenue, who recently underwent an operation at Muhlenburg hospital, has fully recovered and returned home today.

W. L. Gavett, father of Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett, has returned home from Kennebunkport, Me., where he spent a delightful summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Martin, of Jersey City, who were called to Plainfield by the death of Mr. Martin's grandmother, Mrs. Frances Beach Martin, have returned home.

GAME WARDEN AND THE LIAR.

A Colorado man who is visiting in Wellington told H. L. Woods this story: The game warden of Colorado was walking out in the mountains the other day when he met a hunter with his gun. The officer suggested that that ought to be a good country for hunting.

"It certainly is," said the hunter, proudly. "I killed one of the finest bucks yesterday I ever saw, and he weighed over 200." It was the season when deer may not be shot without subjecting the hunter to a heavy fine.

"Well, that is a fine one," said the warden, "and do you know who you are talking to?"

Being assured that he did not, the officer said:

"Why, I am the chief game warden of Colorado."

The hunter was only taken back a moment, when he said:

"And do you know who you are talking to?" The warden did not know.

"Well, sir," said the hunter, apparently much relieved, "you are talking to the biggest liar in the whole state of Colorado."—Kansas City Star.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

She—Before you married me, you used to say there wasn't another woman like me in the world.

He—Yes, and now I shouldn't like to think there was!—Chicago Journal.

The Dominant Sex.

Vain men are like roosters who crow and who shirk
While the hens lay the eggs and do all of the work;
And, like roosters, men think they must govern the rest,—
That their sisters are only lay members, at best.
—Puck.

Trampless Era.

"Ah, but dis mythology is interesting," yawned Sandy Pikes, from the shade of the water tank. "I was just reading about old Pluto and his three-headed dog."

"Three-headed dog!" gasped Gritty George, with a start. "Well, I'll wager a dollar against a tomato can dat dere wasn't any tramps in dem days.—Chicago Daily News.

Puzzled.

She—Do you think a girl should allow a man to kiss her before they become engaged?

He—No. I hold it to be the height of impropriety.

Then she began to wonder if he was just naturally slow or whether he intended to propose, but didn't dare.—Detroit Free Press.

Not Exactly That Kind.

"Did you get a complimentary ticket to the show?" inquired the pass fiend.

"Well," answered the man with influence, "it's a free ticket, but if you had heard the remarks of the manager as he was filling it out you wouldn't call it very complimentary."—Washington Star.

A Great Influence.

"Do you regard the railways as a benefit to the public?"

"Certainly," answered the commuter. "There's nothing reconciles a man to being at work, or which makes him appreciate getting home so much as a ride on the cars."—Washington Star.

Human Perversity.

"Tennis," remarked the active man, "is great exercise."

"Yes," answered the insolent person; "it illustrates the perversity of human nature; when a man is supposed to be working he wants to idle, and when he is supposed to be idling, he wants to work."—Washington Star.

Her Belief.

"Do you believe in the Darwin theory of evolution?"

She—Yes—and after the monkey became a man he was given the power of speech in order that he might again make a monkey of himself.—Chicago Daily News.

Her Sally.

Carsone—When I was a small boy I used to laugh at the girls for being afraid of the dark.

Muriel—And I suppose now that you are grown up you are afraid of the girls.—Judge.

Knew What Was Coming.

Mr. Boofer (meditatively, over her book)—How true this is!

Mr. Boofer (bracing himself)—Well, Maria, don't keep me in suspense. What is it about us men?—Puck.

THE INGENIOUS MAN.

Once there was a very ingenious man who believed in utilizing everything according to its intended use as indicated by its label.

One day he sat thoughtfully picking his teeth with the point of his jaw and trying to count the twigs in his family tree. Also he was giving some thought to the number of tiles in the roof of his mouth and the leaves in the palm of his hand. He spent a lot of valuable time looking for the visor and earflaps on the cap of his knee. He wondered, casually, why the bridge of his nose had not been made on the suspension principle instead of using abutments, and how many stones were in the arch of his foot—connecting this vaguely with the tendency of the sole in its vicinity to contract stone-bruises. He marveled by the hour why the pilgrim's progress would not have been more rapid without bunions, and as he pondered he absently played toss-and-catch with the ball of his eye, occasionally throwing it across the base of his brain, as if he were catching a runner at second.

He spent a week trying to make an arrow he could shoot from the bow of his legs, whittling it out painfully with his shoulder-blade, and filing down portions of his finger-nails for points. Wherever he went he carefully kept step to the drum in his ear, and he almost went insane wondering why all his food did not make a full stop when it reached his colon. On Hallowe'en he suspended his adam's apple from one of his vocal cords and tried in vain to bite a piece out of it. One day he ran pell-mell for three blocks to try to get a policeman to arrest the crook in his elbow.

Naturally this sort of person would meet a unique death. One day he discovered his funny-bone and laughed himself to death at it.—Strickland W. Gillilan, in Judge.

Sporting Blood.

"Land's sakes, Hiram!" exclaimed Mrs. Hardapple Cider, as they emerged from the Ultra-Tony lunchroom. "Do remove those particles of yaller egg from yeour whiskers. Folks will notice it."

"That's just what I want them to do, Mandy," drawled Hiram, as he gazed at himself in a store mirror. "When I go into a swell place where they charge 25 cents for two eggs I want folks to know it, by gum. Nothing cheap about me.—Chicago Daily News.

Not Wise.

"Did you say that man who just went out was a government food expert?" asked the Washington waiter.

"That's what he is," replied the proprietor of the restaurant.

"Well, he doesn't know his business."

"Why not?"

"Why, he asked me how old those eggs were I served him!"—Yonkers Statesman.

If.

If all the trips I've had at sea
Should take effect at once on me
In one huge nauseated spell,
Gee! wouldn't I be sick! Well, well!
—Judge.

ACCOUNTED FOR.

Wifey—George, I dreamed of planting sweet peas last night.

Hubby—Oh, yes, and of course you dreamed you made me dig up the ground for you, and that's the way I got this awful cold.

Surely!

Speak gently to the husband, though
Brain-stormy is his gaze.
He will be sane again, you know,
After house-cleaning days.
—Judge.

Symptoms.

"Maybe that boy of yours will be famous some day," said the friend.

"I shouldn't be surprised," answered Farmer Corntossel; "he does like to wear curious clothes an' say things that sound more surprisin' than sensible."—Washington Star.

Need of Haste.

Clerk—I see by the papers that Mr. Bliffers is going to be married.

Employer — Great snakes! Run around to his office and collect this bill before it is too late.—N. Y. Weekly.

Its Effects.

He (reading the paper)—Here's the furniture trust been dissolved.

She (looking at a hiatus in the torso of the bureau)—Yes, the glue they use will do that.—Baltimore American.

A Fright.

Miss Ann Teek—He's a good-looking horse, but does he scare easily?

Dealer—No, mum; but perhaps you'd better not get round in front of him.—Harper's Weekly.

BOB HAMPTON of PLACER

By RANDALL PARRISH AUTHOR OF "WHEN WILDERNESS WAS KING" "MY LADY OF THE NORTH" "HISTORIC ILLINOIS" ETC.

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY A.C. McCLURG & CO.

and hence you request this pleasant conference," broke in Hampton, coolly, "to inform me, from your calm eminence of respectability, that I was no fit companion for such a young and innocent person, and to warn me that you were prepared to act as her protector."

Brant slightly inclined his head.

"I may have had something of that nature in my mind."

"Well, Lieut. Brant," and the older man rose to his feet, his eyes still smiling, "some might be impolite enough to say that it was the conception of a cad, but whatever it was, the tables have unexpectedly turned. Without further reference to my own personal interests in the young lady, which are, however, considerable, there remain other weighty reasons that I am not at liberty to discuss, which make it simply impossible for you to sustain any relationship to Miss Gillis other than that of ordinary social friendship."

"You—you claim the right—"

"I distinctly claim the right, for the reason that I possess the right, and no one has ever yet known me to relinquish a hold once fairly gained Lieut. Brant, if I am any judge of faces, you are a fighting man by nature as well as profession, but there is no opportunity for your doing any fighting here. This matter is irrevocably settled—Naida Gillis is not for you."

Brant was breathing hard. "Do you mean to insinuate that there is an understanding, an engagement between you?" he faltered, scarcely knowing how best to resent such utterance.

"You may place your own construction upon what I have said," was the quiet answer. "The special relations existing between Miss Gillis and myself chance to be no business of yours. However, I will consent to say this—I do enjoy a relationship to her that gives me complete authority to say what I have said to you. I regret having been obliged by your persistence to speak with such plainness, but this konwledge should prove sufficient to control the actions of a gentleman."

For a moment the soldier did not answer, his emotions far too strong to permit of calm utterance, his lips tightly shut. He felt utterly defeated. "Your language is sufficiently explicit," he acknowledged at last. "I ask pardon for my unwarranted intrusion."

"Naida Gillis Is Not for You."

At the door he paused and glanced back toward that motionless figure yet standing with one hand grasping the back of the chair.

"Before I go, permit me to ask a single question," he said, frankly. "I was a friend of old Ben Gillis, and he was a friend of my father before me. Have you any reason to suspect that he was not Naida Gillis' father?"

Hampton took one hasty step forward. "What do you mean?" he exclaimed fiercely, his eyes two coals of fire.

Brant felt that the other's display of irritation gave him an unexpected advantage.

"Nothing that need awaken anger, I am sure. Something caused me to harbor the suspicion, and I naturally supposed you would know about it. Indeed, I wondered if some such knowledge might not account for your very deep interest in keeping her so entirely to yourself."

Hampton's fingers twitched in a nervousness altogether unusual to the man, yet when he spoke his voice was like steel. "Your suspicions are highly interesting, and your cowardly insinuations base. However, if, as I suppose, your purpose is to provoke a quarrel, you will find me quite ready to accommodate you."

An instant they stood thus, eye to eye. Suddenly Brant's memory veered to the girl whose name would be smirched by any blow struck between them, and he forced back the hasty retort burning upon his lips.

"You may be, Mr. Hampton" he said, standing like a statue, his back to the door, "but I am not. As you say, fighting is my trade, yet I have never sought a personal quarrel. Nor is there any cause here, as my only purpose in asking the question was to forewarn you, and her through you, that such a suggestion had been openly made in my hearing. I presume it was a lie, and wished to be able to brand it so."

"By whom?"

"A fellow known as Silent Murphy, a government scout."

"I have heard of him. Where is he?"

"He claimed to be here waiting orders from Custer. He had camp up the creek two days ago, but is keeping well out of sight for some reason. Telegrams have been received for him at the office, but another man has called for them."

"Who?"

"Red Slavin."

"The cur!" said Hampton. "I reckon there is a bad half-hour waiting for those two fellows. What was it that Murphy said?"

"That he knew the girl's real name."

"Was that all?"

"Yes; I tried to discover his meaning, but the fellow became suspicious and shut up like a clam. Is there anything in it?"

Hampton ignored the question. "Lieut. Brant," he said, "I am glad we have had this talk together, and exceedingly sorry that my duty has compelled me to say what I have said. Some time, however, you will sincerely thank me for it, and rejoice that you escaped so easily. I knew your father once, and I should like now to part on friendly relations with his son."

He held out his hand, and scarcely knowing why he did so, Brant placed his own within its grasp, and as the eyes of the two men met, there was a consciousness of sympathy between them.

CHAPTER XVIII.
A Slight Interruption.

The young officer passed slowly down the dark staircase, his mind still bewildered by the result of the interview. His feelings toward Hampton had been materially changed. He found it impossible to nurse a dislike which seemingly had no real cause for existence.

Yet Brant was far from being satisfied. Hampton had not even advanced a direct claim; he had dodged the real issue, leaving the soldier in the dark regarding his relationship to Naida, and erecting a barrier between the other two. It was a masterpiece of defense, puzzling, irritating, seemingly impassable. From the consideration of it all, Brant emerged with but one thought clearly defined—whoever she might prove to be, whatever was her present connection with Hampton, he loved this dark-eyed, auburn-haired waif. He knew it now, and never again could he doubt it. He paused, half inclined to retrace his steps and have the matter out. He turned just in time to face a dazzling vision of fluffy lace and flossy hair beside him in the dimly lighted hall.

"Oh, Lieutenant Brant!" and the vision clung to his arm tenderly. "It is such a relief to find that you are unhurt. Did—did you kill him?"

Brant stared. "I—I fear I scarcely compehend, Miss Spencer. I have certainly taken no one's life. What can you mean?"

"Oh, I am so glad; and Naida will be, too. I must go right back and tell the poor girl, for she is nearly distracted. Oh, Lieutenant, isn't it the most romantic situation that ever was? And he is such a mysterious character!"

"To whom do you refer? Really, I am quite in the dark."

"Why, Mr. Hampton, of course. Oh, I know all about it. Naida felt so badly over your meeting this morning that I just compelled her to confide her whole story to me. And didn't you fight at all?"

"Most assuredly not," and Brant's eyes began to exhibit amusement; "indeed, we parted quite friendly."

"I told Naida I thought you would. People don't take such things so seriously nowadays, do they? But Naida is such a child and so full of romantic notions, that she worried terribly about it. Isn't it perfectly delightful what he is going to do for her?"

"I am sure I do not know."

"Why, hadn't you heard? He wants to send her east to a boarding school and give her a fine education. Do you know, Lieutenant, I am simply dying to see him? he is such a perfectly splendid western character."

"It would afford me pleasure to present you," and the soldier's downcast face brightened with anticipation.

"Do—do you really think it would be proper? But they do things so differently out here, don't they? Oh, I wish you would."

Feeling somewhat doubtful as to what might be the result, Brant knocked upon the door he had just closed, and, in response to the voice within, opened it. Hampton sat upon the chair by the window, but as his eyes caught a glimpse of the returned soldier with a woman standing beside him, he instantly rose to his feet.

"Mr. Hampton," said Brant, "I trust I may be pardoned for again troubling you, but this is Miss Spencer, a great admirer of western life, who is desirous of making your acquaintance."

Miss Spencer swept gracefully forward, her cheeks flushed, her hand extended. "Oh, Mr. Hampton, I have so wished to meet with you ever since I first read your name in Aunt Lydia's letters—Mrs. Herndon is my aunt, you know—and all about that awful time you had with those Indians. You see, I am Naida Gillis's most particular friend, and she tells me so much about you. She is such a dear, sweet girl! She felt so badly this morning over your meeting with Lieut. Brant, fearing you might quarrel! It was such a relief to find him unhurt, but I felt that I must see you also, so as to relieve Naida's mind entirely."

"I most certainly appreciate your frankly expressed interest, Miss Spencer," he said, standing with her hand still retained in his, "and am exceedingly glad there is one residing in this community to whom my peculiar merits are apparent."

Miss Spencer sparkled instantly, her cheeks rosy. "I do wish you would some time tell me about your exploits. Why, Mr. Hampton, perhaps if you were to call upon me, you might see Naida, too. I wish you knew Mr. Moffat, but as you don't, perhaps you might come with Lieut. Brant."

Hampton bowed. "I would hardly venture thus to place myself under the protection of Lieut. Brant, although I must confess the former attractions of the Herndon home are now greatly increased. From my slight knowledge of Mr. Moffat's capabilities, I fear I should be found a rather indifferent entertainer; yet I sincerely hope we shall meet again at a time when I can 'a tale unfold.'"

"How nice that will be, and I am so grateful to you for the promise. By the bye, only this very morning a man stopped me on the street, actually mistaking me for Naida."

"What sort of a looking man, Miss Spencer?"

"Large, and heavily set, with a red beard. He was exceedingly polite when informed of his mistake, and said he merely had a message to deliver to Miss Gillis. But he refused to tell it to me."

The glances of the two men met, but Brant was unable to decipher the meaning hidden within the gray eyes. Neither spoke, and Miss Spencer, never realizing what her chatter meant, rattled merrily on.

"You see there are so many who speak to me now, because of my public position here. So I thought nothing strange at first, until I discovered his mistake, and then it seemed so absurd that I nearly laughed outright. Isn't it odd what such a man could possibly want with her? But really, gentlemen, I must return with my news; Naida will be so anxious. I am glad to have met you both."

Hampton bowed politely, and Brant conducted her silently down the stairway. "I greatly regret not being able to accompany you home," he explained, "but I came down on horseback, and my duty requires that I return at once to the camp."

"Oh, indeed! how very unfortunate for me!" Even as she said so, some unexpected vision beyond flushed her cheeks prettily. "Why, Mr. Wynkoop," she exclaimed, "I am so glad you happened along, and going my way, too, I am sure. Good morning, Lieutenant; I shall feel perfectly safe with Mr. Wynkoop."

CHAPTER XIX.
The Door Opens, and Closes Again.

In one sense Hampton had greatly enjoyed Miss Spencer's call. Her bright, fresh face, her impulsive speech, her unquestioned beauty, had had their effect upon him, changing for the time being the gloomy trend of his thoughts.

But gradually the slight smile of amusement faded from his eyes. Something, which he had supposed lay securely hidden behind years and distance, had all at once come back to haunt him—the unhappy ghost of an expiated crime, to do evil to this girl Naida. Two men, at least, knew sufficient of the past to cause serious trouble. This effort by Slavin to hold personal communication with the girl was evidently made for some definite purpose. Hampton decided to have a face-to-face interview with the man himself; he was accustomed to fight his battles in the open, and to a finish. A faint hope, which had been growing dimmer and dimmer with every passing year, began to flicker once again within his heart. He desired to see this man Murphy, and to learn exactly what he knew.

He entered the almost deserted saloon opposite the hotel, across the threshold of which he had not stepped for two years, and the man behind the bar glanced up apprehensively.

"Red Slavin?" he said. "Well, now, see here, Hampton, we don't want no trouble in this shebang."

"I'm not here seeking a fight, Jim," returned the inquirer, genially. "I merely wish to ask 'Red' an unimportant question or two."

"He's there in the back room, I reckon, but he's damn liable to take a shot at you when you go in."

Hampton's genial smile only broadened, as he carelessly rolled an unlight cigar between his lips.

He walked to the door, flung it swiftly and silently open, and stepping within, closed it behind him with his left hand. In the other glittered the steel-blue barrel of a drawn revolver.

"Slavin, sit down!"

The terse, imperative words seemed fairly to cut the air, and the red-bearded gambler, who had half risen to his feet, an oath upon his lips, sank back into his seat, staring at the apparition confronting him as if fascinated.

Sealed Proposals for Sewer Bonds for the City of Plainfield, N. J.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, at a meeting thereof held Sept. 3rd, 1907, notice is hereby given that the Common Council will meet on Monday, the 7th day of October, 1907, at 8 o'clock P. M., at the Council Chamber, No. 151 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, at which time and place said Common Council will receive and open sealed proposals for the purchase of sewer bonds to the amount of Sixty-eight Thousand Dollars to be issued by the City of Plainfield under the Ordinance of said City, entitled "An Ordinance for the Further Issue of Sewer Bonds under Chapter CXXXI of the Laws of 1890 and Acts Amendatory Thereof and Supplemental Thereto," Approved May 16, 1906, and the Acts of the Legislature of New Jersey entitled "An Act to provide for drainage and sewerage in cities of this State," approved April 7th, 1890, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Said bonds will bear date the First day of May, 1907, and be payable as follows; that is to say: On the first day of May Nineteen Hundred and Eight, two bonds; and on the First day of May of each and every year thereafter, down to and including the year 1941, two bonds; said bonds shall bear interest at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum, payable semi-annually.

Said bonds are to be coupon bonds and to be in the form approved by the Common Council, and now on file in the office of the City Clerk of said City.

Upon the receipt of the bids or proposals the Council will immediately proceed to unseal same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided said parties or agents choose to be then and there present, and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Council.

The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved by the Common Council.

All proposals must be endorsed "Proposals for purchase of sewer bonds," and should include the accrued interest from date of bonds. A certified check or cash for 5 per cent of the amount must be deposited with each bid. No bid for less than par will be accepted.

By order of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.
Dated September 3, 1907.
J. T. MAC MURRAY,
9 10 17 10 7 City Clerk.

AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY BY THE LEGISLATURE OF 1907.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 1.

BE IT RESOLVED (the House of Assembly concurring), That the following amendment to the constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly, the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State:

The Legislature shall, in the year one thousand nine hundred and nine, and at its first session after each United States decennial census thereafter, and not oftener, divide and arrange the counties of this State into districts for the election therein of members of the General Assembly. Each assembly district so constituted shall contain, as nearly as practicable, an equal number of inhabitants, and shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory, in a compact form; provided, that each county shall, at all times, be entitled to at least one member, and the whole number of members to be chosen shall never exceed sixty.

The Court of Errors and Appeals is hereby invested with exclusive original jurisdiction and with full power under such procedure as it may by rules prescribe to review any division and arrangement made by the Legislature into assembly districts of the counties of this State, for the purpose of determining whether such arrangement and division or any part thereof is in accordance or in conflict with this section, and if in conflict herewith, to adjudge the same, or such part thereof as may be in conflict herewith, null and void. In case said court shall determine such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, to be null and void, the Legislature shall proceed to make a new arrangement and division, entire or partial, as the action of the court may require.

FOR THE COMFORT OF CHILDREN.

Children's shoes are a bug-bear to most shoe dealers because they don't go about it right. They don't like children to start with and they don't appreciate the requirements of little feet. Here it is different. We believe if we start in with the youngsters that we are pretty sure of holding the trade until they have youngsters of their own to shoe. This has been our experience and that is why we shall always continue to give unusually strong values in this department. Although the margin of profit is practically wiped out we believe it is better to charge it up to "good will." That is why you always find here sturdier, better made and more thoroughly dependable footwear for the little folks than you can get in other places. That's why we do the Children's Shoe business of the town.

Our "Steel Shod" shoe at $1.40 to $2.00 will please any youngster and economy in buying them wearing "Van Arsdale's Steel Shod" buy a pairnext time. They have been the solution of many a family's shoe troubles.

DIAMOND DUST.

The Potter A. C. defeated the Highlanders at Netherwood Saturday afternoon by a score of 16 to 9. The Highlanders were claimants for championship honors, but the Potter A. C. were much too strong for them.

The West Ends went down to defeat on Saturday before High Bridge by the score of 4 to 3, and the Somervillian fan is sorrowful. Even Egner, the crack Trenton pitcher, could not ward off defeat. After holding High Bridge safe for the best part of the contest the Hunterdon county boys touched him up for a home run and extra bases. High Bridge was strengthened with five Atlantic League players.

The Clinton Avenues will meet Westfield on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, and judging by the last contest between these teams, the game should be full of ginger from start to finish.

The Clinton Avenue team is out for the county championship, and made a good start on Saturday by defeating Rahway in one of the best contests of the season. They will meet Rahway in this city on Saturday, September 28, and the Rahwegians will come over prepared to turn the tables, if possible. They do not relish their defeat on Saturday.

Although Scotch Plains and Bound Brook are scheduled to play one more game in the Inter-City League series before the season closes, the contest will probably not be played, as the result would not affect the standing.

Manager Dorflinger, of the Clinton Avenues, says that he has repeatedly tried to arrange a series of games with Manager Kenyon, of the West Ends, of Somerville, and has been unsuccessful. It begins to look as though the county seat aggregation is not anxious to meet the Plainfield boys. However, the local fans still have the right to believe that the Clinton Avenues could beat Somerville.

This has been the most successful season financially the Brooklyns have had in a number of years. The club will make about $40,000 on the season.

In Birmingham last Saturday Wilhelm, pitching for the Shreveport team, shut out his opponents in both games of a double header. Statisticians declare this to be a record, and it is said furthermore than Wilhelm has a record of fifty-nine consecutive innings without a run by opponents.

If Mike Donlin plays with the New York Nationals next season, which he probably will do, and play the outfield, a question that agitates New York fans is, which outfielder will be supplanted.

GOLF.

"Marty" O'Loughlin and Charles A. Stover, of the Plainfield Country Club, played a match game yesterday with Professional Collins and William Knowlton, amateur, of Bayside, L. I., at the Oakland Country Club. The Plainfield pair won the match by 7 up and 6 to play, displaying excellent form. Mr. Knowlton is now endeavoring to arrange a match to be played by himself and Alec Smith against O'Loughlin and Stover within the next few weeks.

The New Brunswick Golf Club has elected these officers for the coming year: President, James Neilson; vice president, Dr. E. R. Payson; secretary, H. Brewster Willis; treasurer, J. B. Kirkpatrick. The club numbers 196 members, twenty-three being secured this year.

TENNIS.

Women's singles, tennis championship, were started on the courts of the Plainfield Country Club Saturday, with the following results: First Round—Miss Barbara Fleming beat Miss Merrill, 6-1, 6-0; Miss Goddard beat Miss Carpenter, 6-3, 6-0; Miss Grace Kaufman beat Mrs. Daniel Runkle, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3; Miss Hope Ivins beat Miss Louise Booth, by default; Mrs. S. Fullerton Weaver beat Miss Florence Stewart, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1; Miss Sarah E. Schuyler beat Miss Brown, by default; Miss Burke beat Mrs. W. L. Righter, by default. Second Round—Miss Barbara Fleming beat Miss E. Goddard, 6-4, 6-3; Miss Burke beat Miss A. Barclay, 7-5, 6-2. The remaining sets will be played this week.

Members of the Plainfield Country Club and the Park Club are entered in the invitation tennis tournament for women's doubles, to be played on the courts of the Ilderan Outing Club, Rahway, beginning Friday.

H. G. BILLINGS' HOME ROBBED.

Burglars Ttake Lace and Silver Valued at $3,000.

Long Branch, Sept. 17.—Silverware and lace to the value of about $3,000 were stolen from the summer home of H. G. Billings, a broker, here Sunday. Mrs. Billings is a daughter of Sanford P. Ross, of Newark.

A few weeks ago Mr. Ross' home was entered, and shortly before that the house of his brother-in-law was visited by burglars. At the Billings home a window in the dining room was forced, and from the tracks that were left, two men entered. They looted the dining room and drawing room.

There were stolen eight silver vases, each one worth $200. They were of French workmanship and of a rare Louis XVI. design. Five cups, prizes won at bench shows by Mr. Billings' bulldogs, were also stolen.

Some beautiful covers taken from one of the drawers in the buffet were of rare old Swiss lace, and were wedding gifts to Mr. and Mrs. Billings.

The Attendance Was 415.

In yesterday's account of the rally day exercises at Trinity Reformed church Sunday school on Sunday, The Daily Press stated that the attendance was 15. It should have been 415.

Entertained at Corn Roast.

Thirty young people from the Seventh-Day Baptist church were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ellis, of Watchung, at a corn roast, Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. F. Randolph, formerly of this city, but now of Westfield, have returned from an automobile trip through New York State.

Anti-Corrupt Practises Society Head Writes to Democratic State Convention.

Trenton, Sept. 17.—James Steen, of Eatontown, as president of the New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Corrupt Practises at Elections, has addressed a letter to the Democratic State convention, to meet here today.

"The men who make up the party which you represent, however differing in views, policies and principles from the rank and file or other political parties, are one with them in patriotic desire to safeguard the ballot. The ultimate defense or American liberty will be the ballot box. And there must be made the stand against the corrupting influence of conscienceless wealth and the assaults of anarchistic violence. Upon this question all parties can and should unite, and the proper methods of co-operation in this important civic duty can only be a matter of detail.

"The New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Corrupt Practises at Elections has perfect confidence in the political virtue of the great mass of the party which you represent. It views with peculiar satisfaction the growth of popular resentment against 'commercialized politics,' and the desire for a new and better system of conducting elections, but it cannot ignore the fact that criminal methods still obtain among men of high and low degree in both great parties.

"Believing that your convention will gladly welcome any means of relieving your candidates from the real or fancied necessity of becoming criminals, that they may become elected, and, that you will be ready to join hands in a movement that will deliver our elections from the control of predatory wealth and that will make the capable poor man the peer at the ballot box of her wealthier brother, we respectfully urge the appointment by your convention of a committee to co-operate with a similar committee from the other party and from our organization in eliminating, at once and forever, from New Jersey politics the corrupting influence of large sums of money employed in debauching the voter and disgracing the State."

PUBLIC SERVICE BACKS DOWN.

Its Employes, Threatened With Arrest, Give Up Street Work in New Brunswick on Sunday.

New Brunswick, Sept. 17.—The Public Service Corporation backed down Sunday, when it faced a Methodist minister and the Mayor. George street is being paved, the city doing part of the work and the corporation the rest. Rev. Dr. J. F. Shaw, pastor of the First Methodist church, awoke Sunday to find two gangs at work, one in front of his parsonage, the other in front of the Pitman Methodist church, of which Rev. M. W. Valiant is pastor.

Dr. Shaw advised the foreman of the gangs to quit, as a protest would be made against Sunday work. The foreman told him they had orders not to obey him. Then Dr. Shaw called up Mayor Drury M. Cooper. The Mayor at once ordered the men to quit. They made a show of resisting, but when the Mayor threatened to call out the police reserves and arrest the men they quit.

EPISCOPALIANS INTERESTED.

Looking Forward to the Convention

Widespread interest is being taken by the members of the Episcopal parish, which includes Bernardsville, Basking Ridge, Millington, Mine Mount, Far Hills, Peapack and Gladstone, in the New Brunswick convention, which meets at St. Bernard's church here today. Rev. Dr. A. B. Barber, dean of the convention of Trinity church, Princeton, will preside in the absence of the bishop, who cannot be present on account of previous engagements. The program for the day will be as follows:

Miss Ella Serrell, of Plainfield avenue, has returned from a visit with her niece, Mrs. William Briggs, of Milwaukee.

Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Struthers, of West Front street, returned last night from a two weeks' vacation at Ocean Grove.

Miss Abbie Van Cleef, of West End avenue, has returned from a two weeks' vacation spent at Jersey City and Millstone.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Laing, of Truell Court, returned last night from Orr's Island, Maine, where they have been enjoying their outing.

Mrs. H. Weeks, Miss Florence Weeks and Elvin Weeks, of Oswego, N. Y., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry VanName, of Madison avenue.

John Hand Camp No. 28, Sons of Veterans, will meet tonight and initiate several new members. Other business of importance will be considered.

FATEFUL MORNING AFTER

Martine Boom Melted to Nothing As He Slept in Trenton Hotel.

EGENOLF WIELDS KNIFE

Union County State Committeeman Starts the Stampede from Plainfielder.

Philosophic as usual, showing no bitterness in his disappointment, James E. Martine returned shortly after 6 o'clock last night from the scene of the unkindest blow that the political fates have ever dealt him. He left at Trenton the grave of the most alluring, the most promising hope of his whole political career.

The end of that hope came so suddenly, its annihilation was so complete, that only a Jim Martine could have met the reverse without being stunned and embittered. When he went to bed at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, Trenton echoed with his name and the nomination for Governor was in his grasp. When he arose four hours later Katzenbach was on everybody's lips, and the shouts for Martine sank to murmurs of sympathy. By 10 o'clock the streets and hotel corridors were surcharged with Katzenbach enthusiasm, and Martine saw his fate working relentlessly out. When the convention met it resolved itself into a Katzenbach ratification meeting. The "Martine boom" so overpowering the fateful night-before, took on the shrinking appearance of a complimentary vote.

Of the 1,274 votes in the convention, Martine polled only 104½. That half-vote was the only ballot from the Essex delegation, which had been so dramatically "turned over" to Martine the night before, that came to the Plainfielder; Morris county gave him 33 of its 43 votes, and one came from Hunterdon. Katzenbach got 1,093½. Then came the scramble for the Katzenbach bandwagon. All the favorite sons—Congressman William Hughes, put forward by Bergen; Senator George Silzer, of Middlesex; Senator Hinchcliffe, of Passaic; former Senator S. S. Childs, of Somerset—were shoved aside and the votes transferred to the victor. Even Martine's name was withdrawn, and Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., of Trenton, became the unanimous candidate of the Democratic State convention on one ballot.

The original Katzenbach vote was as follows: Atlantic, 43 votes; Bergen, 69; Burlington, 42; Camden, 100; Cape May, 19; Cumberland, 33; Essex, 185½; Gloucester, 24; Hudson, 238; Hunterdon, 27; Mercer, 67; Middlesex, 49; Monmouth, 63; Morris, 10; Ocean, 24; Salem, 18; Somerset, 27; Sussex, 27; Warren, 28.

It is not customary for candidates before the convention to watch the delegates at work. Martine was at the Sterling while the convention sat, and Katzenbach remained in his room at the Trenton House. Both learned the result of the balloting as soon as it was accomplished. After the convention the successful candidate was surrounded by congratulatory friends and delegates. He held a levee for an hour or more. Martine's congratulations were conveyed to him.

The dominant characteristics of the convention were confidence and deep earnestness of purpose. When the State chairman, Robert E. Hudspeth, called the convention to order at half-past twelve o'clock he looked into the faces of as intelligent, sincere and hopeful a body of Democrats as ever assembled in Taylor's Opera House, where the State gatherings of both parties have been held for forty years.

Not since Chancellor McGill was defeated for Governor by John W. Griggs, more than a decade ago, has the party come together to select a Gubernatorial standard bearer in such a happy and confident frame of mind. To the gathered representatives of New Jersey Democracy, from Sussex to Cape May, the very air seemed surcharged with the portents of coming victory. The spirit of the convention reflected this feeling. It was bubbling over with enthusiasm and roared and cheered at the slightest invocation.

After the work had been finished and the great gathering had poured into the streets the delegates shook hands with and congratulated one another on the auspicious character of the work that had been done. The candidate nominated and the platform adopted seemed to give universal satisfaction and were hailed as presaging almost certain victory at the polls.

With the convention out of the way, Martine and his friends had time to give thought to "What did it?" Martine laid the biggest share of the blame—practically all of it—on the action of Peter Egenoff, the Union county state committeeman.

REFER THE UTILITIES BILL

Senate Adjourns After Receiving Act Providing for Corporation Supervision.

MEASURE'S SYNOPSIS

Six Commissioners Will Have Full Power to Probe All Alleged Wrongs.

Members of the Senate and House met at Trenton yesterday, but out of deference to the Democratic members who desired to attend the convention of their party an adjournment was taken, but yesterday afternoon the long looked for public utilities bill was introduced in the Senate. Following this the Senators went home until next Wednesday. The bill provides for the appointment by the Governor of six commissioners, men of more than 30 years of age, to serve for terms of six years each, at $5,000 per annum.

There are also to be two inspectors, one a civil engineer ond the other a mechanical or electrical engineer. These men must hold no other State office and must own no stock in the corporations under their jurisdiction. The total expenses of the commission, including clerical help, must not exceed $30,000 per year.

Supervision is given over all gas, electric light, heat, power, water, telegraph, telephone, street railway, pipe lines, etc. Power is given to compel witnesses at investigations, and the giving of false information is made a misdemeanor. For refusal to testify a witness may be sent to jail. The commission is also to inquire into the matter of rebates and transportation charges, and to make reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The act empowers the commission, whenever an accident shall occur upon any property owned, operated or controlled by any corporation subject to the act, to investigate the cause of the accident and to meet in the locality kwhere the accident occurred. Every corporation is bound to give notice of any accident.

Further, the commission is required to inquire into the condition and operation of all corporations coming under the act and to examine complaints touching rates, rebates, charges or demands for services rendered, and all discriminations in service rendered in the transportation of personal property or otherwise. The commission is authorized to make recommendations of writing to any corporation touching the improvement of its service and the betterment of its conditions and affairs.

No corporation subject to the act shall issue any stock or bonds, merge or consolidate, sell, transfer or lease its franchise or contract for use of same, except upon the approval of the commission.

Any corporation subject to the act violating his charter provisions or general laws of the State or any order of this commission may be proceeded against in the Court of Chancery, on a bill filed in the name of the commission by the attorney general for an injunction and adequate relief from said court. Violations to be reported to the attorney general within thirty days after information by the commission.

UNION REPUBLICANS MEET.

Complete Plans for Attending State Convention.

The Union county Republican executive committee held a meeting at its headquarters at Elizabeth Monday night. County Chairman Frank H. Smith, of Plainfield, presided, and said arrangements were completed for attending the State convention at Trenton on Thursday.

Postmaster A. M. Jones, of Summit, resigned as a member of the committee, and recommended that Seaman Williams, of Summit, be elected in his place. Short speeches were made by former County Chairman Hamilton Fish Kean and by John W. Clift eulogizing the good wodk of Committeeman Jones and advocating earnest labor toward the election of the county and State tickets.

Senators at Convention.

Among the interested spectators at the Democratic State convention at Trenton yesterday were State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of Union county, and State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county. "Uncle Joe," the friend of the farmers, sat on the stage away in the rear.

W. S. ANGLEMAN CHAIRMAN

Lawyer Chosen As Head of Republican City Committee to Succeed E. E. Iremonger.

BY A UNANIMOUS VOTE

County Chairman F. H. Smith Declines Place—Selection a Popular One.

Winfield Scott Angleman, one of the brightest lawyers in Union county, was elected chairman of the Republican city committee last night at a meeting held at the Casino. His selection was unanimous, showing the esteem in which he is held by the party workers generally. He succeeds Edward E. Iremanger, the efficient chairman, who resigned after being slighted by the Colbyite powers in his own ward. He will take office immediately.

Mr. Angleman's selection was made after County Chairman Frank H. Smith and Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell and declined to allow their names to be used in connection with the office. Mr. Smith was strongly urged last night to accept the position, but he declared that his time was fully occupied with his duties as county chairman. He had held the office before, being the predecessor of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who was succeeded by Mr. Angleman.

The choice of Mr. Angleman is a happy selection, and it is believed that it will meet with general approval. He has been a member of the committee from the Fourth Ward for many years, and has always been a hard worker for his party. He is prominent in the Jr. O. U. A. M. and other fraternities. His name was suggested by Factory Inspector McCardell and met with favorable response.

FREEHOLDER FIGHT INTERESTS SOMERSET

PRE-ELECTION SITUATION IN NEIGHBORING COUNTY.

Just what the political complexion of the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders will be after the coming election in November is now pretty much a matter of a conjecture. The board is at present comprised of six Republicans and five Democrats, and the latter have a chance to secure a majority of the members, but it is not generally believed they will be able to do so. It is quite probable that the board will be divided the same politically as it is now, and should the Rrepublicans elect their candidate in North Plainfield borough they may gain one on the whole county.

Bedminster, Branchburg and Hillsborough townships and North Plainfield borough elect Freeholders this fall, and in each of these municipalities a hot fight is being waged. In Bedminster, which is usually in the Democratic column, William C. Paulson is the Democratic candidate, and George Crater has been nominated by the Republicans.

In Branchburg township Henry W. Baird, the present director of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, is the candidate of the Republican party, and the Democrats have not placed any one in the field in opposition to him. He is sure of re-election.

There is a hot fight on in Hillsborough township between Richard W. Hoagland, the present member of the board, who is a Republican, and is seeking re-election, and John S. Everett, who has been placed in the field by the Democrats. Mr. Everett was formerly a member of the board.

In North Plainfield borough John Emmons, Democrat, wishes to be re-elected. He is opposed for membership on the board by Andrew Lutkins, Republican, who was a freeholder not so many years ago.

Will Entertain Machinsits.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus McKechnie, of Plainfield avenue, are parents of twins, a boy and girl, born to them Sunday morning. Each weigh nine pounds. In honor of the event, Mr. McKechnie, who is financial secretary of the local branch of the nIternational Association of Machinists, will entertain the members on Monday night.

John Callahan, of Allentown.

Investigation of a rumor in circulation yesterday to the effect that John Callahan, of Richmond street, was fatally injured at the Allentown Fair proved to be another Callahan, of Allentown. Mr. Callahan, of this city, did not attend the fair.

Mrs. Robert Lowry and her niece, Miss Katharine Lee, who have spent the summer at Lake MinneWaska, N. Y., have gone to Belmar for a short stay.

LANDSCAPE ARTIST WEDS

Jonas Lie Takes Beautiful Norwegian Young Woman As His Bride.

AT A QUIET CEREMONY

Marriage Takes Place at All Souls' Church, Rev. A. C. Nickerson Officiating—To Reside Here.

Miss Charlotte Egede Nissen, daughter of Dr Oscar Nissen, of Christiana, Norway, and Jonas Lie, of Plainfield, formerly of Christiana, were married at 8:30 o'clock last night at All Souls' Unitarian church, Rev. A. C. Nickerson, the pastor, officiating. The affair was void of any ostentation, the bride and groom being unattended; neither were there any ushers. However, it was one of the prettiest of weddings and was the second to take place in this church.

The church was beautifully decorated with the season's flowers, being banked about the pulpit platform. The prevailing colors were green and white and combined to make an effective arrangement.

The bride was richly gowned in white silk, embroidered with white roses, princess style. She wore a tulle veil, caught up with white roses and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses.

Stephen Haff, the organist of the church, rendered a program of unusual interest. The selections were chiefly those of Norwegian composers, and included several that were dedicated to the mother of the bride, who herself was celebrated throughout Norway and many other European countries as a brilliant pianist.

The invitation list was limited to a very few intimate friends of the couple, and the affair was extremely informal. Previous to the ceremony Mr. Lee received his guests, and afterwards he and Mrs. Lee were the recipients of the congratulations of their friends. An informal reception followed at the studio of Mr. Lie, where for the present the couple will make their home. The bride received many costly gifts, and both she and Mr. Lie were generously remembered with congratulatory messages from abroad, as well as many relatives and friends in this country.

The wedding is the culmination of a pretty romance, which had its beginning in the Norwegian mountains during the summer of 1906, where the couple were two of a party which spent fourteen days traveling on foot about the mountains.

Dr. Oscar Nissen, father of the bride, is one of the best known physicians in Christiana, and her mother, who died two years ago, was famed throughout Norway as a pianist.

The bride possesses exceptional beauty and isaccomplished. She is interested exceedingly in Mr. Lie's work as an artist. He is undoubtedly one of the best known among the younger artists of this country. His paintings have been hung in nearly all of the prominent galleries of the country.

14 YEAR OLD DIES AFTER AN OPERATION

MISS DUMONT'S FATAL COLLAPSE WHEN ADENOIDS ARE REMOVED.

Miss Jean Dumont, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Dumont, of Prospect place, North Plainfield, died suddenly this morning following an operation for the removal of adenoids performed by Dr. G. W. Endicott, assisted by Dr. DuBois and Dr. D. C. Adams. The adenoids were successfully taken out, when the patient collapsed and died within an hour.

Miss Dumont had suffered considerably from the adenoids and because her physical condition was not strong enough to stand an operation, it was delayed until such time as in the opinion of the physician she could successfully pass through it. The heart action was good, but death was due to the stagnation of blood of the lymphatic. The physicians did all in their power to bring the patient out of the collapse, but all efforts failed. Announcements of the funeral will be made later.

Fifteen Years Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno, of Coddington avenue, have issued invitations for the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding, which will be formally observed at their home on Saturday night, September 28. Mr. Ryno is business manager of The Daily Press.

Not After Surrogateship.

Assistant Postmaster Abram A. Reger, of Somerville, announced today that he is not a candidate for the Republican nomination for surrogate of Somerset county.

MARTINE WELL SATISFIED

Bows Cheerfully to Will of Party, He Says After Convention.

WILL WORK FOR TICKET

Lays Defeat to Influence of the P. S. C. and Prudential High Finance Politicans, Through Peter Egenoff.

"I am satisfied," said James E. Martine to a Daily Press reporter after the convention at Trenton yesterday. He had known since early in the forenoon that the nomination would be Katzenbach's, and he had had time to think over the situation. "I am disappointed, yes; the change that met me this morning startled and surprised me, but I have grown used to bowing to the will of the majority, and now that the representatives of my party have made their choice I cheerfully accept it.

"I will most certainly work for the ticket. I would have expected Mr. Katzenbach to do it for me, and I will do it for him. They need not come to me and ask for my assistance. I will go out and work in places where he probably could not get votes himself.

"What did it Why, the Prudential and P. S. C. influence was at work, through that man Egenolf. Of course, they didn't want me. I have always called them a band of highwaymen, and I would have gone on regarding and treating them in that light, and they knew it. Oh, I am satisfied. I would not swap my independence for all the pelf they represent. I rejoice in being a free lance in politics.

"You may say this for me, that I feel richly compensated by the loyalty and fidelity shown by my friends. As for Egenolf, I will say that if ever a man owed me gratitude, he does. When he wanted to run for mayor of Elizabeth, he asked me to speak for him, and I did; I campaigned for him on the street corners, at the shop doors and wherever my voice and my convictions might do him good. He should, I think, have stood my friend."

PLANS APPROVED FOR ADDITION TO HOSPITAL

LAUNDRY TO BE BUILT WITH FUND BEQUEATHED INSTITUTION.

The executors of the estate of the late Mrs. Catherine E. Hegeman, which was settled in August last, will soon make the contemplated improvements at Muhlenberg Hospital a possibility. These improvements will be in the shape of a much-needed laundry, which will be complete in every detail. The plans, which was drawn by A. L. C. Marsh, have been approved by the estate and will be submitted at the next meeting of the Board of Governors for their approval. Afterwards bids will be asked for the work.

When Mrs. Hegeman died she bequeathed her estate to her husband, Benjamin A. Hegeman, Sr., and by reason of his death later, the estate was left in such a shape that Mrs Hegeman's intended bequest to the hospital could not be carried out at the time. The executors have since been engaged in settling the estate, and knowing the wish of Mrs. Hegeman to assist the hospital, have arranged to give the institution a complete laundry. The estimated cost cannot be stated until the bids have been received and the contracts awarded, but it is known that it will be a substantial sum.

At Essex Court Opening.

Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, of the First National Bank building, attended the opening of the September term of the Essex County Court at Newark yesterday. He has a case on the calendar. Mr. Runyon heard Chief Justice Gummere deliver a strong charge to the picked grand jury, of which some startling things are expected. Mr. Runyon's case was laid over for the term. The principals in it are Newarkers.

REPUBLICANS ALL AT SEA

State Gubernatorial Convention Tomorrow But It's Hard to Pick a Winner.

FORT IS A FAVORITE

Lewis, Sommer and Pitney Are Also In Race—Talk As to Boom For Mayor Fisk.

Although less than twenty-four hours will elapse before the Republicans of New Jersey will select their candidate for Governor, the politicians are all at sea over the probable outcome. On the face of things, Justice J. Franklin Fort appears to have a strong lead, but there are many uncertain quantities at the eleventh hour. The selection of former Attorney General John W. Griggs as presiding officer and his candidacy for the State chairmanship leads some to believe that the leaders have picked Vivian Lewis, of Passaic county, where Lewis hails from. Justice Pitney has also a powerful following. Hudson is almost solid for Fort, while Essex county, it is believed by the Colbyites, will give a majority of its vote to Sheriff Frank H. Sommer.

Unless it is quite certain that a solid vote can be obtained in his favor it is said today that the Republican leaders will not urge that Mayor Charles J. Fisk be the choice of the Union county delegation for the Gubernatorial nomination at Trenton tomorrow. It is generally admitted that the delegates from Plainfield would be unanimous for him, but that there might be some division in the sentiment among the delegates from Elizabeth. In other sections of the county it is said that he would be a popular choice.

County Chairman Frank H. Smith and a party of friends left this afternoon for Trenton to be on the scene early. Mayor Fisk is also expected to put in an appearance there before nightfall, but this morning he said it was doubtful if he could get there by that time. Tomorrow morning a large delegation of workers will board the Union county special when it stops here. A caucus will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning by the Union delegates, and at that time a vote will be taken on the choice for Governor.

Alden Freeman, this afternoon sent out two circulars referring to Justice J. Franklin Fort and Justice Mahlon Pitney. These circulars will be distributed at the Republican State convention tomorrow.

The circular on Judge Fort reiterates the charges that have been brought against him. The circular which refers to Justice Pitney consists of extracts from the will of the late George Richards, who was a politician in Morris county.

The Essex county New Idea delegates to the Republican State convention met in Newark last night and mapped out a program governing their action at tomorrow's session in Trenton. It was decided to fight hard to obtain the nomination of Frank H. Sommer for Governor. Members of the conference expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the outlook, declaring that they have 110 of the 236 Essex delegates pledged to support Sommer, and that they have assurances of help from Hudson, Morris, Middlesex, Passaic, Union and Bergen.

A "fighting committee" was named to urge New Idea principles on the State convention. This committee consists of William P. Martin, Frank H. Sommer, Judge Benjamin F. Jones, Herman B. Walker, Jerome Congleton and Senator Everett Colby. Senator Colby was selected to make the speech nominating Sommer.

BICYCLIST'S SACRIFICE.

George H. Isaac Wrecks His Wheel to Save Another.

At the risk of severe injury and the cost of a wrecked wheel and a bad fall, George H. Isaac, registrar of the Plainfield Business College, saved Warren B. Travell, 816 Third place, from hurt yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Isaac was riding his bicycle eastward on West Front street, shortly after 5 o'clock, when Mr. Travell, coming from the opposite direction, on the same side of the street, on a bicycle, turned suddenly toward Elmwood place, directly across Mr. Isaac's path. The latter saw only one thing to do to avoid crashing full into Mr. Travell, and did it, turning his wheel sharply for the sidewalk. The bicycle jumped the curb and ran against a fence. Mr. Isaac was thrown off, and the wheel was completely wrecked. Mr. Isaac's hand was skinned and he received a painful shaking up. Mr. Travell offered to make good the damage to the wheel, but Mr. Isaac refused to accept any compensation.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Elliott, of Summit avenue, are parents of a daughter, born to them recently.

METHODIST FLOCK'S ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM

Compleie Order of Exercises to Mark Seventy-Fifth Year of the First M. E. Church.

SOME NOTED SPEAKERS

Bishop Vincent, President Reed and Rev. Dr. Whitney Among the Distinguished Men to Take Part.

Plans were completed today for the seventy-fifth anniversary of the First Methodist Episcopal church, to be celebrated October 6 to 20. The program is an elaborate one, and will be full of interest not only to the members of the church and congregation, but all church-going people in the city.

First M. E. Church.

The pastoral record extends from 1832 to 1907, the present pastor, Rev. A. C.McCrea, being chairman of the committee of arrangements, and assisting him are James W. Jackson, Henry A. McGee, James R. Joy and George M. Rittenhouse.

The celebration will begin on Sunday morning, October 6, when Rev. Dr. G. H. Whitney, the oldest living pastor, and president-emeritus of Centenary Institute, Hackettstown, will deliver historical sermon. On Sunday morning, October 13, there will be a sermon by Rev. A. H. Tuttle, of Summit, a former pastor, and in the evening Rev. Dr. C. B. Mitchell, a former pastor, but now of the First M. E. church, Cleveland, O., will preach.

Tuesday evening, October 15, there will be several addresses by former pastors, including Rev. Dr. G. H. Whitney, Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, Rev. Dr. A. H. Tuttle, Rev. Dr. Van Meter, Rev. Dr. C. B. Mitchell, Rev. Dr. Barnes and Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass James W. Jackson will preside and a reception will follow, to be in charge of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Rev. Dr. Daniel Halleron, presiding elder of the Elizabeth district, will preside at the service, and there will be addresses by pastors and laymen of the local Methodist churches. No service will be held Thursday night, but on Friday night a young people's meeting will be the attraction. All the young people's societies of the city will be invited to hear an address by Rev. Dr. Reed, the scholarly president of Dickinson College. James R. Joy will preside at this service.

On Sunday morning, October 20, Bishop John H. Vincent, former pastor of the church, will deliver the sermon, and in the evening Rev. Dr. W. F. Anderson, secretary of the Board of Education of the M. E. church, will preach.

The pastors of the church now living include the following: Rev. Dr. G. H. Whitney, Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, Rev. Dr. J. B. Van Meter, Rev. Dr. A. H. Tuttle, Rev. Dr. C. B. Mitchell, Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass and the present pastor, Rev. A. C. McCrea.

These are the officers of the church:

Rev. A. C. McCrea, pastor; trustees, J. W. Jackson, president, James R. Joy, Henry A. McGee, W. R. Coddington, John Cory, J. C. Peck, C. H. Rugg, G. M. Rittenhouse, Samuel Bingaman; superintendent of Sunday school, James R. Joy; president Epworth League, A. P. Atwood; stewards, F. W. French, C. W. McGee, J. M. McNaughton, L. M. French, D. E. Davis, W. H. Larrabee, A. E. Crone, Nelson A. Miller, Henry A. McGee, E. S. Alpaugh, George H. Williams, S. S. Swackhamer and A. H. Stiles.

SAYS HE IS SWINDLER.

Elizabeth Men Positive That Prisoner Is Man Who Robbed Them.

Elizabeth, Sept. 18.—George W. Robinson, who was arrested at Elizabethport Monday, on a charge of swindling a number of people in this city by means of bogus checks, was brought out of a cell at police headquarters yesterday morning by Chief Tenney, who confronted him with eight business people of Elizabeth, all of whom he was accused of having buncoed or tried to. He was positively identified by every one of them as the man who visited their stores.

Among the number were former President John P. Hanafin, of Elizabeth's Board of Education, and former Freeholder Edward S. Newbury, both of whom run grocery stores in this city.

Owing to the absence of Police Justice Owen P. Mahone, who is attending the Democratic State convention at Trenton, Robinson will not be arraigned until tomorrow morning in police court.

—Charles Ward, formerly of this city, is now engaged in the automobile business at Wilkesbarre, Pa.

—Mrs. F. H. Ball and daughters moved yesterday from 97 Rockview avenue, the borough, to 325 Franklin place.

—City Engineer A. J. Gavett has removed the old catch basin at Park avenue and West Front street, and built a new one on West Front street near Park avenue.

—James Patterson, Jr., of Mariners place, is now in charge of the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company store at Somerville, having been transferred from Long Branch.

—The work of laying a concrete surface over the Somerset street bridge has been completed, and the street in the vicinity has received a top dressing of stone.

—The Plainfield Opera Company will hold its first meeting early in October to determine upon its plans for the coming season. There is some talk of giving "Robin Hood."

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wynne and son, of East Seventh street, who have been sojourning at Lebanon, Hunterdon county, have returned home.

An Illustration

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $5 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

De Wolf Hopper's new opera, "Happyland," is in two acts and two scenes. The first scene represents the courtyard of the Imperial palace of Elysia, the other depicts the Elysian Fields, painted by Ernest Albert. There is a plot in the new work, not deep laid or complex, but interesting, entertaining and consistent. The Messrs. Shubert, who are responsible for the production and the selection of the company, have surrounded Mr. Hopper with a large and efficient aggregation of singers, comedians and comediennes. The cast includes such prime favorites as Marguerite Clark, Ada Deaves, Nella Shayne, William Wolff, Detmar Poppin, Josephine Phillips, George Odell and the chorus is made up of a selection of the most beautiful young women of New York Casino fame, including the dozen noted beauties, who as "Wang's" daughters were the talk of Broadway when Mr. Hopper's famous revival of "Wang" held forth in New York last year. "Happyland" will be seen next Saturday afternoon and night.

"Simple Simon Simple" will make its initial bow to Plainfield theatregoers in its new form Friday night, and its coming promises to be the big event of the present theatrical season. The show has been praised so highly by local people who have seen it in the large cities that theatregoers are familiar with the title if not with the furious fun and catchy music.

Lovers of the legitimate will be delighted with the performance of John Griffith, the greatest living tragedian, as "King Richard the Third." Many able and distinguished critics claimed that he would reach the highest pinnacle of fame, and so he has, for today he is the leader in the front ranks of legitimate stars. In every city where he has appeared enthusiastic audiences have greeted this dramatic genius, and proclaimed him America's most brilliant tragic star. He will be seen here tonight.

"Patsy in Politics," which it is claimed ranks with the best of musical farces, is underlined as one of the important attractions of the season at the New Plainfield. In its star and comedian Billy B. Van leads the fun rendering as well as some of the most tuneful numbers. "Patsy in Politics" is said to belong to a distinct and novel type of entertainment, and much has been said in praise of its worth from the standpoint of fun and music combined. It will come here tomorrow night.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Gibson, of Putnam avenue, are sojourning in the Catskills.

Sale and Show of the Newest Mourning Millinery.

BUT MORE THAN JUST A SALE. Autumn's latest fashion developments that mark the beginning of the season and leave no doubt as to what is correct. The influence of the world's greatest authority in mourning millinery. Mangin Maurice of Paris, permeates the ensemble—her originality and good taste imparts a new air to toques, turbans, bonnets, and dress hats. One of her greatest achievements to be seen here is her adaptation of the Empire style—an unobtrusive creation particularly for mourning. Add to this exposition the fact of special prices in MOURNING TRIMMED HATS, MOURNING VEILS and MOURNING ACCESSORIES and there presents itself an event of unusual importance.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The Japanese golf players of the Westfield Golf Club are conspicuous these days in the various events at the club, showing their ability to play the game well. On Saturday, S. Opki played eighteen holes with R. E. Perry and the latter won by 1 up and 2 to play. S. Taiska and T. Tetsuka played nine holes, the former winning by 3 up and 2 to play.

George Cruse and Maurice McCarthy defeated Joseph Sherman, Jr., and W. H. Townley in a foursome by 1 up at the Westfield Golf Club, Saturday. McCarthy comes from the Forest Park Golf Club, of Brooklyn, and was formerly professional of the Westfield club. Cruse and McCarthy's best ball for the eighteen holes was 65.

The Women's Golf Association, of Boston, began its fall tournament yesterday at the Allston Golf Club. Mrs. J. E. Mullen will have charge of the affair. On Tuesdays following matches will be played at Salem, Lexington, Arlington, Weston, Oakley and Concord, while on Saturday, September 28, the association will have a tournament at the Essex Country Club, Manchester, Mass.

According to the conditions of the team matches, two teams are to be arranged by the captain of the day. The players are to engage in match play, each match to be played to a finish. The method of scoring is as follows: One point for being on the winning team, two points for being present, three points for player winning her match.

The play for the Autumn cups at the Plainfield Country Club is proving very popular. On Saturday there were five players tied to determine the two who shall qualify for match play in October. This tie will be played off this week.

The active season at the Plainfield Country Club will conclude on Saturday, September 28, with a cross-country golf tournament for cups. This is according to the usual custom.

Robert Abbott will return to Yale next week to resume his studies. Of late he has not been playing much on the Plainfield Country Club course, but has been devoting his spare time to visiting other courses in the Metropolitan district.

"Marty" O'Loughlin has been very anxious to get in a match with Alec Smith and it now looks as though this would happen. Mr. Knowlton, of the Oakland Country Club, is endeavoring to arrange a match between himself and Smith against O'Loughlin and C. A. Stover, of the Plainfield Country Club.

FOOTBALL.

Captain Ray Biglow, of the Yale football team, reported at New Haven, yesterday, a few days in advance of the squad, and at once began the work of practice. Although the usual hard-luck stories have been sent out from Yale, it is the belief that she will have a mighty strong team this season.

Brown University will start early season football practice in a novel way next week. The candidates will spend a week camping out on a farm under the eyes of their trainer and coaches. The object of the practice will be more to get the men in condition than to teach them football.

The daily schedule for preliminary practice is as follows: 6 a. m., rise and take a cold bath, followed by breakfast and a period of relaxation; 10 a. m., run of one and one-half to two miles across country roads to athletic field, rough practice, falling on the ball, passing and kicking; 11:30 a. m., cross-country run to quarters, one and one-half to two miles over fences, through woods and fields, etc.; 12:30 p. m., dinner, followed by period of rest; 2 p. m., punting practice for kickers, practice in running punts by the backs and quarterback practice; 6 p. m., supper, followed by study of the rules, lectures by coaches and examination of the players by the head coach; 9:30 p. m., all players turn in.

Reports from the West say that Dartmouth will receive a valuable addition this season in Tub Morris, the 200-pound centre of Colorado College, last fall. Morris, who was considered the best centre west of the Mississippi, became dissatisfied last year and decided to come to Dartmouth. He will not be eligible this season under the one year rule, but will be able to compete next year.

CONVENTION NOTES

Martine's headquarters on the fateful night-before, where he received the congratulations of everybody who was anybody in the party in the neighborhood, on the apparent certainty of his nomination, was in the famous room 100 at the Trenton House. It is said that more political surprises, slates, changes and rascality have been hatched in Room 100 than in any other section of the State between walls.

Speeling room was at premium in the hotels. The Farmer Orator shared his couch with a young delegate from South Jersey. The delegate voted against him in the convention.

Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, made the speech nominating former Senator S. S. Childs, of Bernardsville, Somerset's favorite son. It was an eminently Swackhamerian speech, with carefully chiselled references to the Fathers of the Republic, and choice excerpts from Thomas Jefferson's words of wisdom. Mr. Swackhamer delivered it from the balcony, where the Somerset delegation was placed.

The Somerset delegation couldn't give former Senator Childs the Gubernatorial nomination, but they gave him what they could. They re-elected him a State committeeman.

Martine met Katzenbach at the Trenton House early Monday morning, and they exchanged greetings. "This is a friendly fight on my part," said the Farmer Orator, "but I am going to beat you if I can." The Mercer man smiled and passed on.

S. S. Swackhamer was named for chairman of the Somerset county delegation at the caucus yesterday morning, but he withdrew in favor of former Senator Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville. It was the first time in twelve years that Mr. Clark had attended a State convention, and the delegation were delighted to do him honor.

One of the State committeemen came to Martine after the drift to Katzenbach had set in so strongly that there was no doubt of its force, and tried to salve his feelings. "By Heaven, Martine," he cried, "the party must do something to make this up to you. You shall have the best office in the gift of the new administration." Martine threw out his hand with an impatient gesture. "Oh thunder," he said, or words to that effect, "I am not seeking office for the sake of office-holding. I don't need the miserable money that goes with office. I can raise enough corn and potatoes at Cedar Brook to keep me as well as I want to be kept. I want office only for the opportunity it may offer for work in the interest of the party and the people."

When W. L. Saunders gets back from the West he may seek an explanation from John H. Van Winkle, Jr., of the North Plainfield part of the Somerset delegation. Mr. Saunders, as whose proxy Mr. Van Winkle acted, was elected, and sought the election as a Martine supporter to the last ditch. Mr. VanWinkle was for Katzenbach. Mr. Saunders' proxy did not go directly to Mr. VanWinkle. It was wired to W. J. Conroy, but the latter could not attend the convention, and designated Mr. VanWinkle in his place.

Walter Linbarger, of North Plainfield, was North Plainfield township's delegate, acting as a proxy.

who threw a bombshell in the committee and the Union county delegation by declaring against him. Martine said unhesitatingly that Egenoff represented the Prudential-P. S. C.-Pennsylvania Railroad influence, and that the high finance political bosses would not hear of anybody but Katzenbach. Their power proved to be strong enough to dominate, Martine declared, and that was all there was to it.

Survey of the field in the quiet of the day after, however, leads to the conviction that other influences besides the bitter work of Egenoff contributed to the collapse of the Martine boom. Look to South Jersey for part of the explanation, at least. The heart of the delegates from the southern counties was not in the Martine cry, and the leaders could not deliver the vote. The delegations got away from them overnight, and even the redoubtable Billy Thompson could not hold them to the standard of his choice. The southern delegations were not so large, but their votes totalled sizeably, and the effect of the swing was strong in its impulse toward the reverse stampede.

The Union delegation was bitter toward Egenoff as they returned home. If the promise of their sentiment is carried out, there is an hour of reckoning ahead for the man who defeated the wishes and the hopes of his county. One significant thing developed almost immediately after the convention. General Dennis F. Collins, who managed the Martine campaign, announced that he would be a candidate against Egenoff for election to the State committee next spring.

It was generally reported yesterday morning that Egenoff had gone before the State committee and made a flat declaration against Martine, but this Egenoff denied, and brought other members of the committee forward to substantiate the denial. He acknowledged, however, that he did speak against Martine to James Nugent, and there is no doubt at all that he spoke against the Plainfielder in the caucus of the delegation. However he made his sentiments known, he instilled them into the minds of the State committee, for members came to Martine in the morning with tidings of what Egenoff had said.

CLINGS TO FENCE AS TRAIN TEARS OFF COAT.

Somerville Man So Near Death at Cranford That He Faints.

Cranford, Sept. 18.—A narrow escape from a horrible death was experienced by T. J. Busch, of Somerville, at the Central railroad station about 9 o'clock yesterday morning, the peril being so imminent that Busch fell in a faint beside the fence that divides the east and west bound tracks.

He went to the station intending to purchase a ticket to Somerville, and found that to reach the west bound track he would have to cross to the opposite platform. A gate is located in the dividing fence between the tracks, and Busch supposed it was unlocked, but upon reaching it found it was fastened. He failed to observe that the Philadelphia flier was approaching on the eastbound track, and, as he turned to retrace his steps, the blasts from the locomotive greeted him. The express was then less than a dozen feet away.

Busch sprang to the fence, and, seizing the pickets in a desperate hold, clung as closely to them as he could. His coat caught upon projections from the cars and the garment was completely ripped from his back, along with a portion of his shirt. His body, however, was not touched, and the express whizzed by without stopping. As the rear car passed, Busch turned, staggered a few steps and fell across the tracks in a faint. The baggageman, who had observed his predicament, ran to Busch and dragged him to the station platform, where he was revived in time to take the train for Somerville. The distance between the fence and the car sides is about three feet.

The Sundial.

The first historical mention of a sun-dial is that in II Kings in the description of Isaiah causing the sun to go back ten degrees on the dial of Ahaz. Archaeologists who have looked into the matter agree that the sundial as we know it was probably invented about 747 B. C., at the time of the rectification of the Babylonian calendar.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

Their Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong and Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. they work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

Mrs. Julia Haynes, of 523 Sixth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For nearly a year I was suffering with a severe pain in the loins, or what is generally called backache. I was also afflicted with a stiffness or lameness of the limbs and the kidney secretions were highly colored and contained some sediment. Any remedies that I took to clear up the kidney secretions and rid me of my aches and pains did me apparently no good or benefit. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills doing so much for people suffering as I was, and began using them, getting a supply at Randolph's drug store. Though at first I saw no change in my condition, I soon began to have less pain in my back and my limbs were not stiff any more. I kept right on with the bills and took them several months, with the result that they cured me of my trouble and I am glad to endorse them."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's and take no other.

BIBLE SOCIETY ELECTS.

Ninety-first Annual Meeting at Peapack.

Somerset County Bible Society held its ninety-first annual meeting in the Reformed church at Peapack yesterday. Rev. P. C. Bascom, of Bound Brook, preached the sermon, and the special address was made by Rev. Henry O. Dwight, recording secretary of the American Bible Society in New York.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Rev. Thomas M. Simanton, of Peapack; vice president, Rev. John T. Scott, of Lemington; secretary, Arthur P. Stuphen, of Somerville; treasurer, Rev. Dr. William H. De Hart, of Raritan; depositary, John D. Case, of Somerville; executive committee, the above, with Rev. Dr. James Le Fevre, of Somerville; Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, of Somerville; Rev. P. C. Bascom, of Bound Brook; Rev. Dr. William S. Cranmer, of Somerville, and C. Martin Wyckoff, of Bedminster.

Eighteen Pounds of Baby.

Mrs. Angus McKechnie, of 223 Plianfield avenue, wife of a machinist, gave birth on Sunday to twins weighing, together, eighteen pounds. The twins are boy and girl. One weighed nine and a half pounds and the other eight and a half pounds.

Had No License.

J. J. Campbell, of this city, was arrested yesterday for peddling vegetables without a license. He promised to take out a license without delay, this morning, and Judge Runyon released him under suspended sentence.

—Mr. Frederick F. Dawes, assistant teacher with T. George Dodsworth, Forty-ninth street, New York city, will open his twelfth season in classes in dancing and polite training, at the Plainfield Seminary Hall, commencing Tuesday, October 15, 1907. Mr. Dawes urgently requests parents to enter pupils' names before October 15th, as the best work is accomplished the first part of the term, especially with the young children.

For the Toilet

you need a soap that softens the water, clears and cleanses the skin. You will find these requisites in Randolph's Medicated

Benzoin Witch Hazel Soap.

It is absolutely pure, containing only the best, mild, healing products. As a shampoo for the hair or shaving, it is very superior. Try it.

Price 10c a cake, 25c for box of 3 cakes.

GAVE HIS NAME TO STEAK.

How the Famous Porterhouse Came to Be So Termed.

On almost every bill of fare are seen the words "porterhouse steak." Now, most people know what a porterhouse steak is, having on some occasion eaten one, or at least a piece of beef that went by that name, but few people know how the name itself originated. Years ago there was a hostlery near Harvard university kept by a man named Porter. Soon this tavern became famous for its viands, especially for its cuts of meats. The stranger stopping there for a meal and not knowing exactly what to order would be advised by his genial host, Mr. Porter, to order a steak. So good were his steaks that travelers often spoke of them, and gradually began referring to them as the "steak you get at Porter's house." From that it was but a short time before they were referred to as the "porter house steak." Since then butchers all over the country have found out the way in which Mr. Porter cut his famous steak, and have been making the same cuts themselves, hence the porterhouse steak has been served the country over. Only a month or so ago the old Porter house was moved back to make room for a row of tenement houses that are now being built in front of it.

WAS SOON TO BE CHANGED.

Young Woman's Name of Little Benefit to Conductor.

A young colored woman tripped herself in leaving a street car out near the edge of the city a few days ago and fell into the street, relates the Denver Post. She was not hurt, but, following the company's custom, the conductor asked her for her name. "Ah isn't huht," she said. "I know that," said the conductor, "but I must have your name, please." "Well, mah name is Miss Pansy So-and-So," she said. The conductor thanked her and she started away. Before reaching the curbing she turned with a grin on her face: "Say, white man," she called, "dat name won't do yo' no good." "Why not? Isn't it your right name?" asked the conductor. "Yassah," she said, "but it won't be aftah to-night. Ah'm goin' to git mahried to-night." Then she disappeared around a corner.

Takes His Bride's Surname.

Dr. Annie R. Copelan was married to Abraham Erott Copelan, formerly Abraham Erott, in the parsonage of Rev. Dr. H. W. Schneeberger the other day after a peculiar romance, says the Baltimore Sun. Instead of the bride changing her name, it was vice versa, the man changing his name. Dr. Copelan was graduated from the Maryland university four years ago, and in the meantime has built up a practice in her neighborhood. Not wishing to lose any of her practice by changing her name when she married Mr. Erott, who is a student in the dental department of the Maryland university, they decided that the best thing to do was to have the court change his last name to Copelan.

Literary Associations.

She was sitting next the window, gazing at the landscape. "Dearest," she murmured, "do you realize the significance of the scenes through which we are being so unsympathetically whirled? This is the land of song and story—the realm of old romance. Do not these changing vistas call up in you thoughts of daring knights and endeared damsels—of joust and jest, of feast and fray?" "Yes, darling," answered husband, earnestly, but withal anxiously, for he was not even near-literary, and knew it. He was, therefore, not unrelieved by the interruption when the brakeman stuck his head in at the door and yelled: "Indianapolis!"—Puck.

Doctor Sets Cat's Shoulder Blade.

Bellevue hospital, New York, recently adopted a patient and gave it a life berth as chief mouse catcher of the institution. The reception room was crowded when a stranger entered with a rather aristocratic cat under his arm. Dr. Leroy Smith paused in his work to inquire. He learned that the stranger had picked the cat up on the street, where he had noticed it in apparent agony. Dr. Smith found a broken shoulder blade constituted the trouble. He set it and the cat was placed on a blanket in an outdoor tent. The cat purred its gratitude. Many of the hospital doctors dropped in to take a look at Dr. Smith's patient and each voted for adoption.

Consul's Lonely Post.

About the most lonesome place for an American consul is in the Falkland islands. This is where J. E. Rowan is and has been since 1898, and receives a salary of $2,000 a year. Originally he was from Connecticut, but he went west and was state senator in Iowa for four years. Then he went into newspaper work. Longing for a change he asked to be sent to some place far from civilization. Evidently he is well satisfied to remain on an island where he is the only American representative.

A Long-Felt Want.

"I wish my novel printed with the lines wide apart," declared the authoress. "Leaded, you mean?" "Whatever you call it. I want people to have a chance to underscore the parts they like."

HARDLY A CORRECT COSTUME.

Dean Stanley Once Entered Palermo Wearing a Nightshirt.

The voice of the church went forth full early against the proposal that La Milo should ride through the streets of Coventry in raiment too closely copying the birthday attire in which the original Lady Godiva rode. But the church itself was once in danger of being scandalized by one of its illustrious members in what appeared much the same way. The culprit was none other than Dean Stanley, who was driving with a friend from Monreale to Palermo. Both men were reading. Stanley suddenly discovered that he was shivering with a cold. He mentioned the matter to his friend. "Well, hadn't you better put something on?" said the latter, pointing to the dean's bag, which was close at hand. Stanley thought it rather a good idea, and the friend went on reading. As they entered Palermo there were shouts of astonishment. Stanley was placidly reading. His friend found that the distinguished churchman had absent-mindedly drawn out a nightshirt from his bag, and put it on over his other clothing, and, thus arrayed, was riding triumphantly into the city.

WHERE ANIMALS BEAT MEN.

Many Species Are Incredibly Nice About Their Food.

"Nature faking aside," said the zoo keeper, "mice won't eat oleo. It is a fact. Lay a pat of oleo and a pat of butter side by side, and in the morning the butter will be gone, but the oleo will remain untouched. Oh, yes, some animals are incredibly nice about their food. The otter, when living wild, will only eat one piece, one mouthful, out of each fish he catches. He will land a beautiful trout, but only one bite of it, from the back, just behind the neck, is good enough for him. The rest he tosses aside. This epicure often kills a dozen fine big trout to make one meal. Chimpanzees have very delicate tastes. A banana or a pineapple that to you seems delicious, to a chimpanzee may be revolting. His taste is keener. Grapes grown in hothouses where sulphur fumes are used as an insecticide taste all right to a man, but a chimpanzee will have none of them. The ichneumon loves eggs. He can tell a fresh from a stale one simply by tapping the shell."

Pottery of the Ree Indians.

W. R. Ferguson, while on a trip up the Missouri river recently dug up in old Ree village one of the few pieces of unbroken pottery work of the Rees. The piece is a bowl which will hold about a quart and is in a perfect state of preservation. Plenty of broken scraps of this pottery work of the residents of this part of the northwest before the coming of the Sioux are to be found at the location of their old towns along the Missouri river, but scraps are about all which the searcher can secure by digging and searching. The bowl in its present state is a rare find and will be presented by Mr. Ferguson to the state historical society to be retained in the collection of that society.—Pierre Letter to the St. Paul Dispatch.

Ring Sickness.

The clown staggered from the ring; he threw himself, groaning on the grass in the dressing tent. A shout of laughter followed him. "Let them laugh," the poor fellow muttered. "They think, because I ran out with my hands clutching my stomach, that I am joking. Little do they know the agonies of ring sickness that are now racking me. Pass that bottle, will you? Ring sickness is like sea sickness. You get it from continually running round and round and round a circus ring. Ring masters get it more frequently than clowns, and I have even seen horses with a touch of it."

Buried Coffee Kept Hot.

During field operations of the British troops at Aldershot it was desired to serve hot coffee during the hours of darkness to the soldiers lying in the trenches. As it was found impossible to light fires during the night or early morning for fear of betraying the position to the enemy, the coffee was made in the evening, and, while still boiling, was buried in camp kettles with close-fitting lids a few feet in the ground and slightly packed with earth. When the pits were opened in the early morning the coffee was found to be still hot and ready to serve.

New Guinean War Canoe.

At Matupi is preserved the last of the great New Guinean war canoes. This is an immense and wonderful structure, 70 feet in length, which besides several hundred natives could carry 6½ tons of cargo upon the deck joining the canoe proper and the outrigger. At either end is a quaintly carved wooden figurehead (or tail), covered with cassowary feathers, and the immense outrigger consists of a whole palm tree, hollowed out and sharpened fore and aft.

Easy When You Know How.

Haven—"I tell you what, Young: I have the sharpest wife you ever saw in your life. Why, the other day I gave her just barely enough money to go out and buy one dress, and if you'll believe it, she came home with two." Young—"That is sharp. How did she manage it?" Haven—"Why, she bought one, and the other she had on when she went out."—Stray Stories.

"Put your hands on the table, and keep them there!" he said. "Now, my dear friend, I have come here in peace, not war, and take these slight precautions merely because I have heard a rumor that you have indulged in a threat or two since we last parted, and I know something of your impetuous disposition. I regret the necessity, but trust you are resting comfortably."

"Oh, go to hell!"

"We will consider that proposition somewhat later." Hampton laid his hat with calm deliberation on the table. "No doubt, Mr. Slavin,—if you move that hand again I'll fill your system with lead—you experience some very natural curiosity regarding the object of my unanticipated, yet I hope no less welcome visit."

Slavin's only reply was a curse, his bloodshot eyes roaming the room furtively.

"I suspected as much," Hampton went on, coolly. "Indeed, I should have felt hurt had you been indifferent upon such an occasion. It does credit to your heart, Slavin. Come now, keep your eyes on me! I was about to gratify your curiosity, and, in the first place, I came to inquire solicitously regarding the state of your health during my absence, and incidentally to ask why you are exhibiting so great an interest in Miss Naida Gillis."

Slavin straightened up, his great hands clinching nervously, drops of perspiration appearing on his red forehead. "I don't understand your damned fun."

Hampton's lips smiled unpleasantly. "Slavin, you greatly discourage me. The last time I was here you exhibited so fine a sense of humor that I was really quite proud of you. Yet, truly, I think you do understand this joke. Your memory can scarcely be failing at your age.—Make another motion like that and you die right there! You know me.—However, as you seem to shy over my first question, I'll honor you with a second—Where's Silent Murphy?"

"You devil!" Slavin roared, "what do you mean?"

With revolver hand resting on the table, the muzzle pointing at the giant's heart, Hampton leaned forward, utterly remorseless now, and keen as an Indian on the trail.

"Do you know who I am?"

The horror in Slavin's eyes had changed to sullenness, but he nodded silently.

"How do you know?"

There was no reply, although the thick lips appeared to move.

"Answer me, you red sneak! Do you think I am here to be played with? Answer!"

Slavin gulped down something which seemed threatening to choke him, but he durst not lift a hand to wipe the sweat from his face. "If—if I didn't have this beard on you might guess. I thought you knew me all the time."

Hampton stared at him, still puzzled. "I have certainly seen you somewhere. I thought that from the first. Where was it?"

"I was in D Troop, Seventh cavalry."

"D Troop? Brant's troop?"

The big gambler nodded. "That's how I knew you, Captain," he said, speaking with greater ease, "but I never had no reason to say anything about it round here. You was allers decent 'nough ter me."

"Possibly"—and it was plainly evident from his quiet tone Hampton had steadied from his first surprise,—"the boot was on the other leg, and you had some good reason not to say anything."

Slavin did not answer, but he wet his lips with his tongue, his eyes on the window.

"Who is the fellow Murphy?"

"He was corporal in that same troop, sir." The ex-cavalryman dropped insensibly into his old form of speech. "He knew you too, and we talked it over, and decided to keep still, because it was none of our affair anyhow."

"Where is he now?"

"He left last night with army dispatches for Cheyenne."

Hampton's eyes hardened perceptibly, and his fingers closed more tightly about the butt of his revolver. "You lie, Slavin! The last message did not reach here until this morning. That fellow is hiding somewhere in this camp, and the two of you have been trying to get at the girl. Now, damn you, what is your little game?"

The big gambler was thinking harder then, perhaps, than he had ever thought in his life before. He knew Hampton would kill him if he needed to do so, but he likewise realized that he was not likely to fire until he had gained the information he was seeking. If he only knew how much information the other possessed it would be easy enough. As he did not, he must wield his weapon blindly.

"You're makin' a devil of a fuss over little or nothin'," he growled, simulating a tone of disgust. "I ain't never hed no quarrel with ye, except in' fer the way ye managed ter skin me at the table 'bout two years ago. I don't give two screeches in hell for who you are; an' besides, I reckon you ain't the only ex-convict a-ranging Dakota either fer the matter o' that. No more does Murphy. We ain't no bloomin' detectives, an' we ain't buckin' in no business o' yourn; ye kin just bet your sweet life on thet."

"Where is Murphy, then? I wish to see the fellow."

"I told you he'd gone. Maybe he didn't git away till this mornin', but he's gone now all right. What in thunder do ye want o' him? I reckon I kin tell ye all that Murphy knows."

For a breathless moment neither spoke, Hampton fingering his gun nervously, his eyes lingering on that brutal face.

"Slavin," he said at last, his voice hard, metallic. "I've figured it out, and I do know you now, you lying brute. You are the fellow who swore you saw me throw away the gun that did the shooting, and that afterwards you picked it up."

There was the spirit of murder in his eyes, and the gambler cowered back before them, trembling like a child.

"I—I only swore to the last part, Captain," he muttered, his voice scarcely audible. "I—I never said I saw you throw—"

"And I swore," went on Hampton, "that I would kill you on sight. You lying whelp, are you ready to die?"

Slavin's face was drawn and gray, the perspiration standing in beads upon his forehead, but he could neither speak nor think, fascinated by those remorseless eyes, which seemed to burn their way down into his very soul.

"No? Well, then, I will give you, today, just one chance to live—one, you dog—one. Don't move an eyelash! Tell me honestly why you have been trying to get word with the girl, and you shall go out from here living. Lie to me about it, and I am going to kill you where you sit, as I would a mad dog. You know me, Slavin—now speak!"

So intensely still was it, Hampton could distinguish the faint ticking of the watch in his pocket, the hiss of the breath between the giant's clinched teeth. No wretch dragged shrieking to the scaffold could have formed a more pitiful sight, but there was no mercy in the eyes of the man watching him.

"Speak, you cringing hound!"

Slavin gripped his great hands together convulsively, his throat swelling beneath its read beard. He knew there was no way of escape. "I—I had to do it! My God, Captain, I had to do it!"

"Why?"

"I had to, I tell you. Oh, you devil, you fiend! I'm not the one you're after—it's Murphy!"

For a single moment Hampton stared at the cringing figure. Then suddenly he rose to his feet in decision. "Stand up! Lift up your hands first, you fool. Now unbuckle your gunbelt with your left hand—your left, I said! Drop it on the floor."

There was an unusual sound behind, such as a rat might have made, and Hampton glanced aside apprehensively. In that single second Slavin was upon him, grasping his pistol-arm at the wrist, and striving with hairy hand to get a death-grip about his throat. Twice Hampton's left drove straight out into that red, gloating face, and then the giant's crushing weight bore him backward. He fought savagely, silently, his slender figure like steel, but Slavin got his grip at last, and with giant strength began to crunch his victim within his vise-like arms. There was a moment of superhuman strain, their breathing mere sobs of exhaustion. Then Slavin slipped, and Hampton succeeded in wriggling partially free from his death grip. It was scarcely an instant, yet it served; for as he bent aside, swinging his burly opponent with him, someone struck a vicious blow at his back; but the descending knife, missing its mark, sunk instead deep into Slavin's breast.

Hampton saw the flash of a blade, a portion of an arm, and then the clutching fingers of Slavin swept him down. He reached out blindly as he fell, his hand closing about the deserted knife-hilt. The two crashed down together upon the floor, the force of the fall driving the blade home to the gambler's heart.

We are open daily until 8 p. m. Saturdays until 10:30 p. m.

Do You Realize

that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.

Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.

Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?

We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.

In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.

Why not decide to get a new piano now?

Pianos to rent at moderate terms.

CHAPTER XX.

The Cohorts of Judge Lynch.

Hampton staggered blindly to his feet, looking down on the motionless body. For a moment the room appeared to swim before his eyes, and he clutched at the overturned table for support. Then, as his senses returned, he perceived the figures of a number of men jamming the narrow doorway, and became aware of their loud, excited voices. Back to his benumbed brain there came with a rush the whole scene, the desperation of his present situation. He had been found alone with the dead man. Those men, when they came surging in attracted by the noise of strife, had found him lying on Slavin, his hand clutching the knife-hilt. He ran his eyes over their horrified faces, and knew instantly they held him the murderer.

The shock of this discovery steadied him. He realized the meaning, the dread, terrible meaning, for he knew the west, its fierce, implacable spirit of vengeance, its merciless code of lynch-law. The vigilantes of the mining camps were to him an old story; more than once he had witnessed their work, been cognizant of their power. This was no time to parley or to hesitate. He grabbed the loaded revolver lying upon the floor, and swung Slavin's discarded belt across his shoulder.

"Stand aside, gentlemen," he commanded. "Step back, and let me pass!"

They obeyed. He swept them with watchful eyes, stepped past and slammed the door behind him. Men were already beginning to pour into the saloon, uncertain yet of the facts, and shouting questions to each other. Totally ignoring these, Hampton thrust himself recklessly through the crowd. Half-way down the broad steps Buck Mason faced him, in shirt sleeves, his head uncovered, an ugly "45" in his uplifted hand. Just an instant the eyes of the two men met, neither doubted the grim purpose of the other.

"You've got ter do it, Bob," announced the marshall, shortly, "dead er alive."

Hampton never hesitated. "I'm sorry I met you. I don't want to get anybody else mixed up in this fuss. If you'll promise me a chance for my life, Buck, I'll throw up my hands. But I prefer a bullet to a mob."

The little marshal was sandy-haired, freckle-faced, and all nerve. The crowd jammed within the Occidental had already turned and were surging toward the door. Hampton knew from long experience what this meant; these were the quickly inflamed cohorts of Judge Lynch—they would act first, and reflect later. His square jaws set like a trap.

"All right, Bob," said the marshal. "You're my prisoner, and there'll be one hell of a fight afore them lads git ye. There's a chance left—leg it after me."

Just as the mob surged out of the Occidental, cursing and struggling, the two sprang forward and dashed into the narrow space between the livery stable and the hotel. Moffat chanced to be in the passageway, and pausing to ask no questions, Mason promptly landed that gentleman on the back of his head in a pile of discarded tin cans, and kicked viciously at a yellow dog which ventured to snap at them as they swept past. Behind arose a volley of curses, the thud of feet, an occasional voice roaring out orders, and a sharp spat of revolver shots. One ball plugged into the siding of the hotel, and a second threw a spit of sand into their lowered faces, but neither man glanced back. They were running for their lives now, racing for a fair chance to turn at bay and fight, their sole hope the steep, rugged hill in their front. Hampton began to understand the purpose of his companion, the quick, unerring instinct which had led him to select the one suitable spot where the successful waging of battle against such odds was possible—the deserted dump of the Shasta mine.

With every nerve strained to the uttermost, the two men raced side by side down the steep slope, ploughed through the tangled underbrush, and toiled up the sharp ascent beyond.

At the summit of the ore dump the two men flung themselves panting down, for the first time able to realize what it all meant. They could perceive the figures of their pursuers among the shadows of the bushes below, but these were not venturing out into the open—the first mad, heedless rush had evidently ended. There were some cool heads among the mob leaders, and it was highly probable that negotiations would be tried before that crowd hurled itself against two desperate men, armed and entrenched. Both fugitives realized this, and lay there coolly watchful, their breath growing more regular, their eyes softening.

"Whut is all this fuss about, anyhow?" questioned the marshall, evidently somewhat aggrieved. "I wus just eatin' dinner when a feller stuck his head in an' yelled ye'd killed somebody over at the Occidental."

Hampton turned his face gravely toward him. "Buck, I don't know whether you'll believe me or not, but I guess you never heard me tell a lie, or knew of my trying to dodge out of a bad scrape. Besides, I haven't anything to gain now, for I reckon you're planning to stay with me, guilty or not guilty, but I did not kill that fellow. I don't exactly see how I can prove it, the way it all happened, but I give you my word as a man, I did not kill him."

Mason looked him squarely in the eyes, his teeth showing behind his stiff, closely clipped mustache. Then he deliberately extended his hand, and gripped Hampton's. "Of course I believe ye. Not that you're any too blame good, Bob, but you ain't the kind what pleads the baby act. Who was the feller?"

"Red Slavin."

"No!" and the hand grip perceptibly tightened. "Holy Moses, what ingratitude! Why, the camp ought to get together and give ye a vote of thanks, and instead, here they are trying their level best to hang you. Cussedest sorter thing a mob is, anyhow; goes like a flock o' sheep after a leader, an' I bet I could name the fellers who are a-runnin' that crowd. How did the thing happen?"

Both men were intently observing the ingathering of their scattered pursuers, but Hampton answered gravely, telling his brief story with careful detail, appreciating the importance of reposing full confidence in this quiet, resourceful companion.

"All I really saw of the fellow," he concluded, "was a hand and arm as they drove in the knife. You can see there is where it ripped me, and the unexpected blow of the man's body knocked me forward, and of course I fell on Slavin. It may be I drove the point further in when I came down, but that was an accident. The fact is, Buck, I have every reason to wish Slavin to live. I was just getting out of him some information I needed."

Mason nodded, his eyes wandering from Hampton's expressive face to the crowd beginning to collect beneath the shade of a huge oak a hundred yards below.

"Never carry a knife, do ye?"

"No."

"Thought not; always heard you fought with a gun. Caught no sight of the feller after ye got up?"

"All I saw was the crowd blocking the doorway. I knew they had caught me lying on Slavin, with my hand grasping the knife-hilt, and, somehow, I couldn't think of anything just then but how to get out of there into the open. I've seen vigilantes turn loose before, and knew what was likely to happen!"

"Sure. Recognize anybody in that first bunch?"

"Big Jim, the bartender, was the only one I knew; he had a bung-starter in his hand."

Mason nodded thoughtfully, his mouth puckered. "It's him, and half a dozen other fellers of the same stripe, who are kickin' up all this fracas. The most of 'em are yonder now, an' if it wusn't fer leavin' a prisoner unprotected, darn me if I wudn't like to mosey right down thar an' pound a little hpss sense into that bunch o' cattle. Thet's 'bout the only thing ye kin do fer a plum fool, so long as the law won't let ye kill him."

"I'm really sorry that you got mixed up in this, Buck," said Hampton, "for it looks to me about nine chances out of ten against either of us getting away from here unhurt."

"Oh, I don't know. It's bin my experience thet there's allers chances if you only keep yer eyes skinned. If we kin only manage to hold 'em back till after dark we maybe might creep away through the bush to take a hand in this little game. Anyhow, it's up to us to play it out to the limit. Bless my eyes, if those lads ain't a-comin' up right now!"

A half-dozen men were starting to climb the hillside, fallowing a dim trail through the tangled underbrush. Mason stepped up to the ore dump where he could see better, and watched their movements closely.

"Hi, there!" he called, his voice harsh and strident. "You fellers are not invited to this picnic, an' there'll be somethin' doin' if you push along any higher."

MAN GONE, WIFE DIES OF A BROKEN HEART.

Millville Civil War Veteran is Believed to Have Been Murdered.

Grieving until the last because her husband had not returned to her, Mrs. Phoebe Thomas died at Millville yesterday of broken heart. Six weeks ago George Thomas, a Civil War veteran, disappeared after having drawn his three months' pension. It is now thought that he may have been murdered, as a thorough search of all South Jersey has failed to reveal his whereabouts.

It is positively known that the man was robbed of his watch, as that was returned several days after his disappearance. His friends who were with him on the night of his disappearance state that he became intoxicated and wandered away from them.

Some of the man's friends believe that Thomas does not return home because he is ashamed to face his family and afraid of the ire of his stepsons. A thorough investigation will be made immediately.

Insurance Agent—Possibly, maam, you might like to insure your husband's life. Mrs. Grogan—Insure me husband's life, it is? Faith, a big fool I'd be to insure his life. He's no good on earth at all! His life ain't worth a sixpence to me!—Illustrated Bits.

Value of Tact.

Women have more constant need of exercising the gift of tact than men. Theirs is, as a rule, essentially the day of little things, and a little of it serves to leaven most of the heaviest lumps of life.

Was—Is—Will Be

IT WAS, only about a year ago, just a pretty farm.

IT IS to day the finest building site in Plainfield, with broad avenues macadamized their entire width, concrete curb, sidewalks, trees, gas, electric light, in fact all improvements. Nearly $100,000 expended in new and handsome dwellings, now ready for the market.

WHAT IT WILL BE we hardly dare predict, with contracts out for even more extensive improvements and twelve more handsome residences.

Central Park is that beautifully situated tract bounded by Park, Prospect, Hillside and Thornton Avenues.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT OPENS SEPTEMBER TERM.

Newarker and East Orange Man Among Those on Grand Jury.

Trenton, Sept. 18.—The September term of the United State District Court was opened here yesterday. The grand jury was empaneled with John J. Toffey, of Jersey City, as foreman. The petit jury was also called and a jury selected to retry the case of the United States against 117 barrels of olive oil. This cause was up last term, when the jury disagreed.

Judge Lanning charged the grand jury, but not specially. The jurors are Oliver Brown, Spring Lake; John J. Toffey, Jersey City; J. Bayard Kirkpatrick, Newark; Charles A. Allen, Cassville; Andrew A. Slingerman, Pompton Plains; Henry C. Kafer, Trenton; J. Swing Willis, Cape May Courthouse; Edward Mount, Asbury Park; Daniel Johnson, Point Pleasant; John L. Suydam, Jamesburg; Edward Ross, Cape May Courthouse; Samuel Himerick, Jr., Jersey City; George H. Vannote, Barnegat; Charles N. Codding, Westfield; Clarence Birdsall, Toms River; Lewis T. Stevens, Cape May City; H. F. Stetson, Gloucester; Clifford Mills, Morristown; William W. Trimpi, East Orange; Charles P. Vannaman, Dias Creek; John J. Cleary, Trenton.

John Bell, a negro, was ordered removed to Washington for trial, on a charge of larceny of a watch. Bell, it is said, stole the watch in Washington, but was arrested in Atlantic City.

NAVAL ACADEMY QUIZ.

Representative Charles N. Fowler Will Hold Examination.

Elizabeth, Sept. 18.—A competitive examination, for the purpose of determining a suitable person to be nominated by Representative Charles N. Fowler as mid-shipman at the United States Naval Academy, will be held at the Pingry school building, this city, on Saturday, October 12, at 10 a. m.

The examination will be along the lines of the requirements for admission into the academy, and will be open to all the young men of the Fifth Congressional District eligible for appointment.

FOR THE COMFORT OF CHILDREN.

Children's shoes are a bug-bear to most shoe dealers because they don't go about it right. They don't like children to start with and they don't appreciate the requirements of little feet. Here it is different. We believe if we start in with the youngsters that we are pretty sure of holding the trade until they have youngsters of their own to shoe. This has been our experience and that is why we shall always continue to give unusually strong values in this department. Although the margin of profit is practically wiped out we believe it is better to charge it up to "good will." That is why you always find here sturdier, better made and more thoroughly dependable footwear for the little folks than you can get in other places. That's why we do the Children's Shoe business of the town.

Our "Steel Shod" shoe at $1.40 to $2.00 will please any youngster and the economy in buying them will please every parent. If your children aren't wearing "Van Arsdale's Steel Shod" buy a pair next time. They have beenthe solution of many a family's shoe troubles.

FORT RECORDS CLOSED TO FREEMAN.

Attorney General Holds That Riker's Refusal to Make Them Public Was Proper.

Attorney General McCarter submitted a formal opinion yesterday to William Riker, Jr., clerk of the Supreme Court, advising him that he should not make public certain affidavits on file in his office which were intended to serve as a basis for disbarment proceedings contemplated more than twenty years ago against J. Franklin Fort, now a justice of the Supreme Court and a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor.

The application for access to the papers was made to Mr. Riker by Alden Freeman, of East Orange. Mr. Riker refused to give out the papers upon the ground that they were not official records of the court, and therefore not public property.

The candidates for the Plainfield High School football team will meet on Hope Common tomorrow for the first practise. As there is plenty of new material in the school this year a strong eleven is assured. A temporary captain will also be elected tomorrow.

A PLAINFIELDER ABROAD

Some Random Thoughts of Local Man Touring in Foreign Climes.

NOTES OF INTEREST

American Travelers Should Beware of Bad Coins—Quaint Signs Which Amuse the Foreigner.

BELLAGIO, September, 1907.

If a traveler desires to get really cooled off in the summer time he should visit the Italian lakes. This statement seems to partake of a paradox, yet if any one of your readers had been with me a short time ago at a famous hotel in Como he would have, I am sure, willingly set his seal of approval as to the veracity of my remark as above cited. That evening the wind howled and blew as it does during a March cyclone in New Jersey, and the next day saw many men wearing overcoats for comfort.

Sheltered as the lakes of Como, Lugano and Maggiore are from the glacial blasts of wind that are wafted over the Lepontine hills, yet they absorb just enough of the iciness of them to radiate a temperature both crisp and invigorating. That the season now is pleasant must sound a note of gladness to the hotel proprietors, who have managed to financially survive the very rainy earlier months of the year, for the wet season was prolonged to an extent far beyond the memory of the oldest hotel keeper. It was not so only in England, Belgium, Germany, France, Switzerland, Spain and Portugal I hear the same thing. In beautiful Devonshire during the months of May Italy, but everywhere in Europe. In and June it rained almost continuously, and while it depleted the pocketbooks of the bonifaces yet it produced a luxuriance of foliage, a wealth of flowers and an abundance of crops hardly ever excelled.

As to the Autos.

While in France, Italy and Spain the automobile is still in the eyes of those able to afford them. The conveyance par excellence, yet in England, Belgium, Baden and Switzerland they are not now regarded with the favor originally bestowed, and many stringent regulations mst be complied with at the present moment that only a few years ago were not considered desirable to suggest on account of the pleasant possibilities that it was hoped the auto would develop. Although the season is now on the wane the mention of the first auto in the St. Moritz region is announced, and the Herald item states "rigorous restrictions to its coming were imposed by the Grisons government," that being the governing body of the Canton in which St. Moritz is located. Recently on a protected track at Weybridge, in England, an automobile was driven 1,261 miles in twenty-four hours, so the press reports state, and while a few stops were made yet while running it averaged sixty-six miles per hour. Many are reasoning that if such vehicles are allowed to use the highway why not allow trams controlled by tracks the same privilege, and the reasoning being in favor of the locomotive because of its slower speed, you now see trains moving in streets heretofore unaccustomed to the sight; notably is this so in Ostender, Bruge, Brussels, Luxemburg and Switzerland.

Traveling Americans are prone to notice anything out of the ordinary in foreign countries while passing over with toleration any eccentricity obtaining in their own. Owing to the many ties that bind us to Great Britain, I am sure John Bull will not be offended if I remark on some of the signs which were prominently observed while passing through various English cities. "The Spotted Cow Hotel" was the sign that hung above a very respectable appearing hotel in the north of England, and a few minutes later we read, "Shaving, Hair Cutting and Repairs," endeavoring to attract the attention of those more seriously inclined to pay heed thereto than ourselves.

"The Hen and Chickens" Hotel is a well kept inn in the west of England, while "Hogg & Hogg," butchers and provision dealers, do a very large business within a stone's throw of the Caledonian depot of a large northern centre, while the sign "Our prices are like a sinking ship, going down, down, down," must have originated during the period when accidents upon the sea were of more frequent occurrence than at the present time. Mr. E. Trickey holds himself out to be an honest hotel proprietor, while there is a Quiet street in Bath where "Sick Cats are Attended," while a "Botanical Brewer" in Maidenhead and "Godliman" and "Bread" street in London did not escape our observation.

Much attention is being paid to the British working man at the present time. His hours of labor are shorter.

KNEW HOW TO GET BACK LOST ARTICLES

MISS TOWNLEY RECOVERS WATCH AND PIN—MR. BEERS A BRACELET.

Miss Townley, of Grandview avenue, lost a silver open-faced watch and pin, and sought the quickest means of recovering the property by advertising her loss in The Daily Press. The watch and pin were found by Edward Kenney, an employe of J. A. Smith & Bros., who, of course, reads Plainfield's leading paper. They were promptly returned to the owner.

Just another striking illustration of how The Daily Press advertisements pay. A member of A. B. Beers' family lost a bracelet. It was advertised in this paper. S. A. Krom, of Watchung avenue, found the bracelet and naturally looked into The Daily Press columns to learn who lost it. Mr. Krom found the "lost ad." all right and then sent the bracelet to this office, where Mr. Beers obtained it.

FRIENDS OF MISSIONS IN ALL DAY SESSION

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN HOLD INTERESTING MEETING.

For the purpose of enthusing the members in the fall and winter work for foreign and home missions, an all-day rally meeting of the Women's Foreign and Home Missionary Societies was held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church yesterday. The services were largely attended.

The Foreign Missionary Society met in the morning, and Miss Noll, the president, was in charge. The usual exercises were held and reports were received from all parts of the foreign mission field, showing what has been accomplished during the past year. There was a discussion as to the advisability of forming missionary study classes, and a committee comprising Mrs. Peter B. Bodine, Mrs. W. F. Hamilton and Mrs. Howard A. Pope, was appointed to look into the matter and report later. It was the opinion that the classes would be formed.

Luncheon was served at noon by a committee from both societies, after which the afternoon session was taken up with a discussion of matters pertaining to home mission work. Mrs. Howard A. Pope, the president, was in the chair. After receiving reports from the home mission field, the members enjoyed an interesting talk by Mrs. William Ludlow, of Westfield, who presented extensive notes on the missionary conference held at Silvry Bay, Lake George, during the past season. The talk enthused the members and encouraged them to greater efforts.

Last evening the members of both societies, together with other members of the church and congregation, attended a meeting in the chapel, which was addressed by Mrs. Cochrane, a missionary to Persia. She is engaged in medical mission work in that country, and she gave a concise and comprehensive account of her labors among the natives of that country.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING.

Salvation Army Will Hold Three Days' Celebration.

The harvest thanksgiving services of the Salvation Army will be held Saturday, Sunday and Monday in the Army Hall on East Second street. The services will be conducted by Captain and Mrs. Hopkins, the resident officers of the city, assisted by Lieut. T. Johnson. An aggressive work has been in progress since their advent to Plainfield two months ago, and they are now busily engaged in preparing for the coming winter's campaign. The hall will be tastefully decorated this week-end with flowers and fruits. Appropriate music will be rendered, also solos by Mrs. Capt. Hopkins.

The harvest program arranged is: Saturday, 8 p. m., "Bringing in the Sheaves;" Sunday, 11 a. m., "Spiritual Lessons from Nature;" 4 p. m., "Harvest Song Service;" 8:00 p. m., "Sowing and Reaping;" Monday, 8 p. m., "Harvest Home Demonstration," for which the platform will be made to represent a harvest field, and the various processes connected with seed-time and harvest will be realistically portrayed by the workers, interspersed with harvest songs. Contributions of any kind, flowers, fruit, vegetables, or cash will be gratefully received by Capt. Hopkins or his band of workers.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of James M. Leonard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver B. Leonard, of Mercer avenue, to Miss Marion Thompson, daughter of Mrs. William Thompson, of this city.

KATZENBACH TO STUMP

The Democrats' Gubernatorial Nominee to Get in the Saddle After Notification.

CONGRATULATIONS HIS Former Senator James Smith, Jr., Wishes Him Success—Membership of Notification Committee.

Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., the Democratic candidate for Governor, said yesterday that he had yet made no plans for the campaign, but that he would visit all portions of the State during his stumping tour. Among the messages of congratulation he has received was one from ex-United States Senator James Smith, Jr., wishing his success.

Mr. Katzenbach declined to discuss the situation until after the official notification of his nomination is received and he has issued a formal letter of acceptance.

The notification committee selected by the convention consisted of the following members: M. A. Cobine, Atlantic; George Van Buskirk, Bergen; George Montgomery, Burlington; David Peterson, Camden; M. H. Burns, Cape May; Speaker Edgar E. Lethbridge, of the Assembly, Essex; Edward G. Grosscup, Gloucester; Robert Davis, Hudson; John J. Matthews, Hunterdon; Prof. William M. Daniels, Mercer; Robert Adrain, Middlesex; R. B. Lawrence, Monmouth; Winfield B. Gillen, Morris; Senator John Hinchliffe, Passaic; John H. Frick, Somerset; Senator J. C. Price, Sussex; General Dennis F. Collins, Union, and Senator Johnston Cornish, Warren.

The Democratic State headquarters will probably be located in Newark or Jersey City, with auxiliary offices in this city, probably at 137 East State street, the Mercer county headquarters.

JERSEY WATERMELON CROP IS A WHOPPER

PRICES TUMBLING AND FRUIT SELLING AT $9 A HUNDRED.

Burlington county's watermelon crop, taken as the standard of Jersey's output, is turning out to be a whopper, if not a record-breaker, despite predictions otherwise, made earlier in the season. Farmers were joyful over high prices obtained for the first melons of the year, but the public is now having its inning.

Where the housewife was paying 50 cents for any sort of a melon three weeks ago, prices have tumbled until the fruit is now selling in the market at $9 a hundred, with prospects of a still further decline from the ripening crops.

Many farmers are shipping their entire melon crop by canal to the upper Delaware valley, where prices, such as obtained here early in the season, are still steady.

New Mail Boxes Installed.

Twelve new private mail boxes of the large size were installed at the postoffice this morning, taking the place of those put in when the improvements were made. The new boxes are equipped with Yale locks, the only kind that have proved satisfactory. It was claimed that the other boxes could be opened without a key. The new boxes are not provided with glass fronts and it is impossible for a person to see the mail in them as was the case with the old ones.

Using Macadam for Repairs.

The macadam which is being taken out of Park avenue to make way for the brick pavement, is being used on other streets needing repair. Some of it has been placed on Park avenue below Fourth street and some on West Third street. Unless the weather interferes the work of laying brick will begin on Park avenue the last of this week or the first of next.

Funeral of Miss Blyth.

The funeral of Miss Katrina Blyth, aged nine years, was held from the residence of the parents on Terrill road, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Father Smith, of Westfield, conducted the service. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, and the pall-bearers were William Manning, James Lamberson, Robert Boroth and Edward Allen.

Beautifying Vine Street.

William C. Krausse has purchased the two dwelling houses northwest of his own property on Vine street, the borough, and is moving one of them back several feet in order that the front will be on a line with the other houses, and he then intends to put both the properties in good condition and rent them to only desirable tenants.

WEDDING CEREMONY AT "TRUELL HALL"

JOHN F. POUND TO BECOME A BENEDICT THERE ON SEPT. 25.

Invitations have been issued to the wedding of Miss Helen Sparks, of Philadelphia, and John Fowler Pound, of West Front street, which will take place on Wednesday night, September 25, at Truell Hall, Netherwood. The affair will be one of social importance and will mark the first one of the kind held there since Mrs. J. R. Truell became the owner.

The invitation list is a large one and will include people from Philadelphia, New York and distant points. Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the same place.

The ceremony and reception will take place in the large and handsome ballroom at the Hall, which is particularly well adapted to such functions.

The groom, who is a well known traveling salesman, is the son of Daniel S. Pound, of 1328 West Front street. The bride is prominent in social circles in the Quaker City, where she has a large number of friends.

After the wedding tour the couple will reside in this city.

HORSE FALLS ON BOY, RIDER THROWN 10 FEET

BALKY HORSE CAUSES MUCH EXCITEMENT FOR A TIME.

While watching the antics of a fractious horse which Henry Peterson, of East Third street, was riding, this morning, his son, aged 15 years, stumbled in the path of the balky animal and at the same time the horse slipped and his entire weight fell on the lad. The rides was thrown a distance of ten feet, and for a few minutes there was much excitement.

The lad's cries could be heard a block away and attracted the attention of the whole neighborhood. After considerable difficulty the boy was rescued and hustled to his home nearby, where a physician was summoned. Although the extent of his injuries are not known, they are not believed to be serious. Mr. Peterson escaped injury.

AUSTEN HALL M'GREGOR A 33rd DEGREE MAN.

Supreme Council of Masonry Confers Honor on Well Known Jerseyman.

At Tuesday night's session of the Supreme Council of the Ancient Accepted Scottish rite of the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States of America, at Boston, the unusual distinction was conferred upon Most Worshipful Grand Master Austen Hall McGregor, of Newark, of electing and crowning him an honorary member of the thirty-third degree, Sovereign Grand Inspector General.

There is usually an interval of at least a year between electing and crowning members of this, the highest and last of all Scottish rite grades.

It is also worthy of note that Mr. McGregor is the first thirty-third degree Freemason ever credited to the city of Newark, so far as is recalled.

Birthday Anniversary Surprise.

Adelbert Edell, of East Third street, was given a birthday surprise party at his home last night. The young man having attained his eighteenth year. Lawrence O'Neill and Theodore Pruden planned the surprise. A company of fourteen young people met at Mr. Pruden's and then proceeded to Mr. Edell's home. The evening was spent in dacing, singing and playing games, after which refreshments were served. Mr. Edell received a number of presents.

Oscar C. Zugbaum, Jr., Weds.

Miss Minnie H. Holcer, of this city, and Oscar C. Zugbaum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar C. Zugbaum, Sr., of Clinton avenue, were married Saturday afternoon at the home of the groom's parents. Rev. C. W. F. Attlee, pastor of the Baptist church, South Plainfield, performed the ceremony beneath a large floral arch arranged on the lawn. The couple were unattended. After a wedding journey the bride and groom will reside here.

Theresa Edith Matthews.

Theresa Edith Matthews, the 11 months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Matthews, died this morning at the home of the parents, 23 Pearl street, the borough. The funeral service will be held from the parents' residence Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

FISK IN FOWLER'S PLACE

Plainfield's Mayor Slated to Succeed Congressman as State Committee Member.

IS A POPULAR CHOICE

Party's Nominee For Governor Will Make the Change In Compliance With Leaders' Request.

Charles Newell Fowler, the absentee member from the Fifth Congressional district, will take another fresh slide into political oblivion when the candidate named by the Republicans today appoints his allotment of members for the State committee. As well known beyond the confines of Union county, Mr. Fowler is unpopular with the masses of party workers, and they have lost no opportunity to help put him out of the way, and have frequently demanded his head from the powers that be. Now the rank and file demand that Mr. Fowler receive no reappointment to his present berth, whic hhe has held ever since his personal friend and political colleague, Foster Voorhees, of Elizabeth, placed him on the committee when himself the nominee of the party for Governor.

Unless the people on the inside are much mistaken, Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, of Plainfield, will be his successor. Mr. Fisk's name will be presented for the place by the regularly recognized leaders of the county, and it is said that there will be no alternative for the Gubernatorial nominee inasmuch as Voorhees would be his only champion within the county for reappointment. United States Senator John Kean is an appointive member on the State committee. His brother, Hamilton F. Kean, is also a member by virtue F. Kean, the regular county member.

RAILROAD EVADED TAX IN MIDDLESEX COUNTY

ASSESSOR FINDS SOUTH AMBOY COAL PILES SMALLER THIS YEAR.

The Middlesex County Tax Board has fixed the rate of taxation for the several townships throughout the county. In South Amboy the assessor last year found $450,000 worth of coal stored there by the Susquehanna company. He assessed it, and the railroad company appealed, but the assessment was sustained by the courts. The coal company this year cut down the supply, so that only half of the amount of last year was there when the assessor visited the place this time. The tax rate of the several townships is as follows:

New Brunswick, $1.90; South Brunswick, $1.84; East Brunswick, $1.56; North Brunswick, 87 cents; Cranbury, 92 cents; Monroe, $1.28; Madison, $1.26; Sayreville, $1.20; South Amboy, $1.85; Perth Amboy, $1.72; Woodbridge, $1.64; Piscataway, $1.24; Raritan, $1.60; Dunellen, $1.83; Helmetta, $1.28; Jamesburg, $1.54; Milltown, $1.70; South River, $1.64, and Highland Park, $1.67.

GEN. COLLINS TO BE MARSHAL.

Will Head Parade on Opening Day of Elizabeth's Old Home Week.

All building and carpenter shops in Elizabeth will be closed on Monday, October 7, in honor of the opening of Old Home Week in that place. The Builders' Exchange have decided on this move, and also appointed a special committee to assist in furthering the plans for the big celebration. The committee consists of Joseph Eilbacher, L. Davis and Michael Beglan.

General Dennis F. Collins has accepted the appointment as grand marshal of the big civic parade which will be held on the first day. He will announce his staff in a few days

Stole Copper Wire.

The storage house of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company at Summit was broken into Monday night and several coils of wire were carted away. The local police and several detectives who have guarded the facts of the robbery with much secrecy, have been at work on the case during the week, and today a part of the wire was found in the woods near the Chatham turnpike. The detectives are said to be close on the trail of the thieves, and expect to make arrests soon.

Sneak Thief at Work.

While his rig was standing under the sheds at the Farmers' Hotel on Somerset street, Wednesday night, a sneak thief stole a lap robe and whip belonging to J. E. Mathews, of the borough.

NELSON RUNYON MADE OFFICER OF VETERANS

CHOSEN VICE PRESIDENT OF 30TH N. J. VOLS. ASSOCIATION.

Former City Judge Nelson Runyon, of this city, was elected vice president of the Thirtieth New Jersey Volunteer Regiment Veteran Association at the seventeenth annual reunion held at Rahway, yesterday, in the rooms of Barry Post, No. 27, G. A. R. Captain James V. Vanderveer was re-elected president. It was decided to hold the next reunion of the association at Somerville on the third Wednesday in September, 1908.

Seventy survivors of the regiment attended yesterday's reunion. The veterans were welcomed by Captain N. V. Compton and Acting Mayor Dr. A. J. Westlake. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the veterans were entertained at a banquet at the Hotel Wyndham. One of the principal speakers at the banquet was Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Mayham, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, himself a veteran, and member of the G. A. R.

ROBERT MANTELL USES 14 COACHES ON TOUR

GREAT TRAGEDIAN TO APPEAR HERE IN "KING LEAR".

Robert Mantell's equipment for his repertoire of Shakespeare is the most extensive of any English speaking player of the day. When, next Tuesday night, October 1, he appears in the New Plainfield theatre as King Lear, those present will see a magnificent scenic production of the play, with a variety of correct costumes, with properties that go to make verisimilitude, and with all the paraphernalia one expects to find in a theatrical performance of the first class. Well, what is done for one play is done for all the plays in Mr. Mantell's repertoire, and it contains at present not fewer than ten. They are:

"King Lear," "King Richard III.," "Othello," "Hamlet," "Macbeth," "The Merchant of Venice," "King John," "Julius Caesar" and "King Richard II.," of Shakespeare's, and "Richelieu," which he is compelled to keep in readiness, because of frequent requests for it.

This means that when Mr. Mantell is on a tour of the big cities, he travels with eight sixty-foot baggage cars for scenery and costumes, with a special car for himself, with a special car for the stage crew, with two sleeping cars for the members of his company, and with two coaches for daytime use.

Yet, with all this immense outlay on tour, Shakespeare does not spell "ruin" for this fine actor, who has been immensely successful ever since his return to New York city in December of 1904, when he acted in "King Richard III.," and his revival there of "King Lear" a year later.

TAILORSHOP FIGHT.

W. G. Tunison and Others Lectured by Court.

William G. Tunison, a North avenue tailor; Norman Ammerman and another young man were arraigned before City Judge William N. Runyon in police court this morning on a charge of scrapping at Mr. Tunison's place of business yesterday afternoon. According to the story told in court, Mr. Tunison had been "picking" at Ammerman, when a third party jumped in and took his part. A general mix-up followed. There were no serious consequences. After giving the young men a warning they will not forget, Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

Approaching Wedding.

Announcement is made of the approaching wedding of Miss Euphemia J. Johnson, daughter of Alexander Johnson, of Grant avenue, and William Whitwell Robison, of New Rochelle, N. Y. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's father on Grant avenue, Thursday evening, October 10, at 7:30 o'clock. The bride has been a resident of this city but a short time. Mr. Robison is engaged in the practice of law in New York city.

Funeral of Miss Dumont.

G. O. P. PICKS GOVERNOR

Griggs Chairman at Gathering of Republican Clans in Trenton Today.

UNION MUCH DIVIDED

But Somerset Plays "Foxy Grandpa" Game—Plainfield Delegates Are Split Over Nomination.

When former Attorney General John W. Griggs, of Passaic county, called the Republican State convention to order shortly after noon today at Taylor Opera House, Trenton, it was pretty well conceded that Justice J. Franklin Fort, of Essex county, will be chosen as the party's nominee for governor. Fort appeared to have a majority of the delegates before the convention convened although there was strong sentiments for Justice Pitney, of Morris, and Vivian Lewis, of Passaic.

The Colbyites mustered 200 votes for Sheriff Frank Sommer, of Essex, and declared that they would stick out to the last for their candidate. State Senator Everett Colby was chosen to place him in nomination. They look for help from the regulars should there be more than one ballot taken.

Wilbur A. Mott, of Essex county, placed Justice Fort's name in nomination. He delivered a ringing speech in which he paid a glowing tribute to the worth of the man and predicted that he would sweep the State. Lewis was named by General Congeon, of Passaic, who presented him as the ideal of the young Republicans.

There are 1,157 delegates, making 579 necessary for a choice. It was freely whispered early in the day that Pitney could win if the delegates were left free to act as they please. Senator Frelinghuysen, Senator Ackerman, County Chairman F. H. Smith and Mayor C. J. Fisk opposed the arguments of those who wanted the unite rule enforced in the various delegations.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city, was chosen chairman of the Union county delegation which went into caucus at 10 o'clock this morning. The delegation selected Assemblyman Randolph Perkins as their representative among the vice presidents of the convention. An informal poll showed an overwhelming sentiment for Justice Fort. This was the approximate poll for the county: Fort, 50; Lewis, 10; Sommer, 5; Pitney, 4.

Plainfield's delegates were much divided. "Viv" Lewis was the favorite. This was the poll of Plainfield's members: Lewis, 6; Pitney, 3; Sommer, 3; Fort, 1. For membership on the convention committees the following were selected: Credentials, George F. Vreeland, of Summit; permanent organization, Henry Clauss, of Elizabeth; rules, John M. Randolph, of Rahway, and resolutions, Augustus F. Crane, of Elizabeth.

There was a warm time in the Union caucus when former County Chairman Charles Codding offered a resolution providing that the votes of all absent delegates should be cast for Fort. City Chairman W. S. Angleman, of Plainfield, jumped to his feet to make a strenuous kick, but when the resolution was put to a vote it was carried. There is only one absentee.

Somerset county's delegation chose State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen as chairman. "Uncle Joe" had everything just as he wanted it and when the caucus was held the Strong Man From Somerset saw to it that the county should cast its vote for either Pitney or Lewis. Whichever is in the lead when Somerset is reached on the roll call gets its vote. Thus saith Mr. Frelinghuysen and his delegation shouts approval. Joe Mets, of Somerville, a trusty of "Uncle Joe," was made vice president of the convention. Fort gets not a look-in from Somerset. Frelinghuysen also saw to it that former State Senator C. A. Reed, of North Plainfield, should be placed on the convention's committee on resolutions.

$2,000 FOR INJURED ANKLE.

Mrs. John A. Young Wins Her Suit Against Railway Company.

Mrs. John A. Young, of Teaneck, N. J., was yesterday allowed $2,000 by a jury in the Hackensack courts for injury to her ankle, alleged to have been sustained while alighting from a Hudson River trolley car at Teaneck nearly a year ago.

It was contended by the trolley company that Mrs. Young must have fallen after leaving the car, for no one saw the accident.

Dr. G. H. McFadden, of Hackensack, said that the injury was simply a sprain, but a Passaic physician said the injury is a permanent one.

Seely Edsall will conduct a praise and testimony meeting at the West End Tabernacle tonight at 8 o'clock.

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

ACCUSES A GIPSY.

Westfield Man Says He Bought Horse That Was Sick.

Elizabeth, Sept. 19.—Michael Lovell was arrested Monday night at the gipsy camp, on the Newark-Elizabeth boulevard, on a warrant obtained against him in the police court here by Joseph Innarowe, of Westfield, who charges that Lovell, several months ago, sold him a horse, which Lovell warranted to be perfectly sound and in first-class condition. The animal, Innarowe says, was sick at the time, and died a couple of weeks later.

The complainant says he paid Lovell $102 for the horse, and when he went to look for the latter at the gipsy camp he found that Lovell had vanished. The Westfield man, a couple of days ago, learned that Lovell had returned to his tribe, and decided to have him taken into custody. He is a son of "Old Gipsy Chief" Joe Lovell, for many years head of the tribe of that name.

RAILROAD COMMISSION ASKS FOR MORE POWER.

The State Railroad Commission, in session at Trenton yesterday, decided to ask the Legsilature for more power relative to the abolishing of nuisances. This action was taken largely because of complaints that have been received from Passaic that the smoke from soft coal burned on the Erie railroad is an intolerable nuisance to people living along the line of the road.

Representatives of the Lehigh and Hudson railroad appeared to protest against the order directing them to place safety devices at Franklin Junction, the statement being made that the road is a small one and unable to stand for expensive improvements.

No action will be taken on the grade crossing question until additional power is conferred on the commission by the Leislature.

British Navy Salutes.

A salute in the British navy between two ships of equal rank is made by firing an equal number of guns. If the vessels are of unequal rank, the superior fires the fewer rounds. A royal salute consists of first in firing twenty-one great guns, second in the officers lowering their sword points and third in dipping the colors.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

"Lou" Wiltse, after a successful wind-up of the baseball season with the Newark Eastern League team, has returned to Plainfield and with his family will live in the New Madison. Although he pitched but a few games for Newark, since joining the Sailors, he proved that he is in the best condition again and able to do fine work. Sinve leaving the Tri-State League, "Lou" has mastered the spit-ball, which he used effectively in all his games. He feels sure that next season he will lead the Eastern League twirlers. He has not yet decided just what he will do this winter, but in the future he will make Plainfield his home.

The Eastern League season will close next week. It is now a certainty that Toronto will be the pennant winner. After playing two games with Newark on Monday at the latter place, the Canadians will go to Columbus, Ohio, to play the team at that place, winners of the Western Association League pennant.

The fans will be interested in the game to be played on Crescent Oval Saturday between Clinton Avenue and Westfield. This will be a return contest and the Westfield team will be accompanied by a large band of rooters. The locals will have to extend themselves if they want to win.

Another hard game for the Clinton Avenues will be that with Rahway at Crescent Oval on Saturday, September 28. The Rahwegians were completely surprised last Saturday when they went down to defeat before the locals and they now are looking for revenge. They will come to Plainfield prepared to do the trick, if such a thing is possible.

Frank Barberich, a New York State boy, who has been the crack pitcher of the Lawrence Club, of the New England League, made his debute for the Boston Nationals against the Giants on Tuesday, and won his game by a score of 6 to 3. He pitched against the great Mathewson.

Despite the statements of fans to the contrary, "Christy" Mathewson has pitched just as good ball this season as last, when the Giants made a better showing. The fielding of the team has been far below the average and has not been fair to the pitching staff.

The West Ends, of Somerville, have about closed their season. They possibly may play one more game, but aside from that the schedule is finished.

FOOTBALL.

Weather permitting the candidates for the Plainfield High School football eleven will report at Hope Common this afternoon for the first practise. The boys are enthusiastic over the outlook and believe that the school will have the best team in years.

A call was issued for football candidates at Princeton Tuesday and about twenty-five men responded. Head Coach Roper and Jim Cooney put the Tigers right to work on the customary preliminaries stunt. The pigskin was booted hither and thither and the players practised passing and running down under kicks until the perspiration rolled down in torrents. Of the men who came out that afternoon four are wearers of the 'varsity "P." Captain McCormick was on hand, as were Eddie Dillon, quarterback; Tibbott, halfback, and Phillips, centre. Five of last year's freshmen team showed up in the persons of Barr, Reed, Dawson, Bamman and Jones, and several of the scrubs also were there. They were Pfeiffer, Waller, Chambers, Scott, Connods, Booth, Wagner and King. The only new player was G. Brown, who for the last two years has been under the scholarship ban. Several promising chaps are now wrestling with examinations, the passing of which will brighten the outlook considerably. McFadden, the big guard, probably will be on hand tomorrow, while it is very likely that Wister, Harland and a couple of others will be along soon.

GOLF.

Professional golfers of national reputation delighted an appreciative gallery in a four-ball match at the Hackensack Golf Club, Tuesday. Alec Smith, of the Nassau Country Club, the former national open champion, had Jack Hobens, of Englewood, for a partner, and this combination fitted so well that the opposing pair, George Low, of Baltusrol, and Davy Hunter, of Essex County, were rather badly beaten by 7 up and 6 to play at thirty-six holes. The record of 73, previously held by R. B. Smith, one of the club members, was twice beaten. In the morning round Hobens made a 70 and later in the day Smith reeled off a 69.

In addition to playing for a $200 purse, $25 extra was offered for the best individual score, both morning and afternoon. Hobens and Smith gathered in the extra cash. Not forgetting the success which attended the efforts of Low and Hunter in a four-ball match at Bernardsville on Saturday, the spectators were divided among themselves at the start as to the probable outcome of Tuesday's match. Hunter, however, played well only in spots, while Low was decidely off his game. In fact, the metropolitan open champion failed to get going at anything like his usual pace.

George Pearson, the Yountakah Country Club professional, holds the best record for the Nutley course, going out in 34 and home in 37 for a 71. This is a stroke better than the old record made by Hobens three years ago. Par for the course is 72, and in getting his record Pearson made every hole in par or better.

A mixed four-ball foursome was played at the Forest Hill Field Club, Tuesday. Mrs. J. Campbell Cory and George Turnbull, the Highland Golf Club professional, defeated Mrs. C. A. Woodruff and Tom Gormley, the home "pro," by 4 up and 2 to play. Turnbull had an individual score of 76.

In the women's team match at the Scarsdale Golf Club, Tuesday, the home players won from the Siwanoy Country Club players by 13 to 6.

Match play will begin Saturday for the Governor's cup at the Forest Park Golf Club. There is also a beaten sixteen trophy and a runner-up prize in each set.

Dudley H. Barrows, one of the crack players of the Plainfield Country Club, has returned to Princeton.

"Marty" O'Loughlin still continues to play good golf and every few days he makes a low score. He is looking forward to several private matches this fall, when he hopes to be able to establish a new record.

Twenty-five of the thirty-five chorus girls with "Simple Simon Simple" are natives of Pennsylvania and an even dozen of them reside in Philadelphia. Only three of the thirty-five are out of their teens and fourteen have not yet reached the age of seventeen. Nine of the girls are of German descent, six are Irish, seven are French, four are of Jewish parentage, four are Scotch and five are Welsh. The average weight of the chorus girls is one hundred and nine pounds. The average height of the girls is five feet and one inch. They are all expert dancers and it is doubtful if there ever was a chorus with so many really fine voices. Twelve have golden hair, four have auburn tresses and nineteen of them are dark haired beauties. "Simple Simon Simple" will be at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night.

Thirty notable musical numbers are programmed in De Wolf Hopper's "Happyland," the comic opera by Reginald De Koven and Frederic Ranken, which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday, matinee and night. Half of these are in the first act—the courtyard of the Imperial Palace of Eylsia—and the other half in the second act—the Elysian Fields. About twenty numbers are songs—single voice ballads, duets, trios, etc., and the remaining numbers constitute the melodies that accompany the various marches, ensembles, dances, entrances and exits. Of the solos and light titled melodies we are to hear are "A Sickening Sadness Sits On Me," "The Black Sheep" and "Mimette, My Human Mermaid," by Mr. Hopper; "Robin," "The Wishing Cap" and "It Was a Rose," by Marguerite Clark; "What's a Maiden?" by Mr. Hopper, Miss Clark and Mr. Wolf; "Pretty Maiden" and "Victoria" by Mr. Phillips.

Billy B. Van, who has proved such a popular favorite in the Eastern district in previous years, will present his new play, "Patsy in Politics," at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. This musical comedy has been greatly improved, there are new situations that are worked out in a farcical way by Van, the songs are new, as are the musical numbers and scenery and costumes worn by a large chorus of good singers and dancers. Van is funny in a natural way. His mannerism being odd, his humor keen and his dancing ability being of a high order he has a number of songs that are easily remembered. Skidoo especially being a clever bit of parody set to music. Rose Beaumont, who gained fame in the big musical comedy success of Broadway, appears in the principal feminine role. She acts spiritedly and sings daintily. The other supporting members of the company are Florence Brooks, Blanch Latell, Frank C. Evans, Chas. Saxon and William Carroll.

RAILROAD TRAVELERS ANGRY.

Order to Keep Loiterers From Summit Station Creates Trouble.

Summit, Sept. 19.—The promulgation of an order by Chief of Police Brown to the effect that the Lackawanna railroad station here must be kept clear of loiterers and the strict enforcement of the order by the policemen is causing trouble. Sunday evening one of the policemen approached two prominent citizens of the city who were standing in the station and demanded to know if they were awaiting a train.

One of the men approached is a daily commuter and had in his possession a monthly ticket, while the other is a daily traveler over the Lackawanna. The gentlemen declined to give the officer the desired information and he promptly ordered them to vacate the station waiting room, which they did after giving vent to their pent-up indignation and declaring they would ascertain whether they could be prevented from standing in the station.

The late Mayor Wilcox agreed with the Lackawanna officials when they placed a partition in the new station shutting off the passageway between the east and westbound tracks and which was later torn down by a small army of angry commuters to assist in preventinfi loitering in and about the station, and it is declared by the police officials that this agreement is to be strictly enforced and only those having tickets and awaiting trains will be allowed to stand about the station.

Diamond Cutting.

Diamonds are cut in three different forms—the rose, the brilliant and the table, of which the second is the prettiest. It is a double pyramid or cone of which the top is cut off to form a large plane and at the bottom, directly opposite, to a small plane.

THE FORUM.

Martine's Defeat.

Editor, The Daily Press:

As a Democratic voter, voicing the sentiments of many other Democratic and Republican admirers of James E. Martine, I should like, through your columns, to ask any intelligent delegate to the State convention at Trenton, why the outspoken, fearless champion of Democratic principles above named, the only man who could have carried Union county, and as we believe the whole State, Democratic, the only man whose nomination the Republican campaign managers feared, in fact the people's candidate, why, I ask, was he turned down at the ninth hour, and the nomination given to another, after Mr. Martine had retired with the practical assurance of the nomination by a majority of the delegates in caucus? What, I ask, brought about this sudden change? While Mr. Katzenbach may be an estimable man, where does he stand concerning the principles so clearly enunciated by Mr. Martine, and why has he not declared them. Can it be possible that those 750 delegates were completely switched to the Katzenbach standard by the eloquent persuasion that one man from Elizabeth, after declaring for Martine, or, were the people's interests subserved to those of the corporations whose methods Mr. Martine had so honestly and openly fought? Be the motive what it may, an irreparable blunder was made that will bring defeat to the Democratic party at the coming election, just as surely as an election comes, for a great number of voters feel that they have been duped. That Katzenbach does not represent the people, that the corporation interests dominate the candidate and the situation, and that the whole grandstand play was directly in their hands. With James E. Martine at the head f the ticket, were confident of victory, or at the worst, honorable defeat. But we feel that existing conditions are not an honest expression of the people's choice or will, and as an inevitable result, at least, two years of political oblivion stares the Democratic party in the face.

Respectfully yours,
GEORGE S. DUFFORD.

H. J. GRANT'S $3,000 VERDICT.

Wins Damage Suit for Road Cut by Haworth Borough.

Hugh J. Grant, formerly mayor of New York, who has a large country estate at Oradell, was a successful plaintiff in a suit tried in the Hackensack courts yesterday, when he received a verdict of $3,000 damages from the borough of Haworth.

The officials of this borough cut a road through the middle of Mr. Grant's golf grounds, and the commissioners appointed to award damages allowed him $1,340. Mr Grant appealed from this award and yesterday the jury more than doubled the damages for him.

COLLINS A CANDIDATE TO OPPOSE EGENOLF

COUNTY LEADER ACCEPTS CHALLENGE FOR A FIGHT.

When the Democratic committee of Union county will elect a member of the State committee next April to succeed Peter Egenolf, there will be a contest for the place, and the opposing candidates will probably be Mr. Egenolf himself and General Dennis F. Collins.

After Mr. Egenolf had made his speech in the Union county caucus at Trenton Tuesday prior to the State convention it developed that Mr. Egenolf is not yet reconciled to the leadership of General Collins. Egenolf was one of that wing of the Democracy which strenuously opposed Collins a few years ago and sought to read him out of the party, but against which faction the general has steadily made his way to the front till he grasped the undisputed leadership both in city and county, and came within an ace of making himself the most prominent State figure by the nomination of Martine for the Governorship. No other ground for Egenolf's present opposition to the general could be thought of by those who discussed the situation. He is about the only well known Democrat who seriously opposes Collins' leadership.

The Union county committee was under the impression that a member of the State committee was to be elected yesterday, and that impression prevailed up to the hour that the caucus met. John J. Lane, of Summit, desired to be a candidate for the place. He wrote to General Collins to find out if he had any ambition to be elected to the State body. Collins replied in the negative. Then, according to the story told by various delegates yesterday, Lane wrote to Egenolf, who replied that he could not be a candidate if any one else sought the place unless that other person should happen to be General Collins. Should Collins seek the honor Egenolf wished it to be understood that he was decidedly in the field.

All this became public property during the "cussing" among the delegates after Mr. Egenolf had opposed Martine's nomination. General Collins was asked if the story was correct.

"I understand," he said, "that Mr. Egenolf has expressed himself to the effect that he'll be a candidate against nobody but myself. He'll have the opportunity. I accept the challenge. I am from this day forward a candidate for membership on the State committee."

The member of the committee will be elected at the convention that will choose delegates to the national convention of 1908. The change was made a year ago by the State committee so as to avoid changing the methods of the committee on the eve of a State campaign.

THEY WANT TO SELL A HISTORIC PROPERTY.

Chancery Court to Consider Sale of Land Deeded During War of Rebellion.

Vice Chancellor Stevens in Newark yesterday referred to Frederick F. Guild, as master in chancery, a petition for leave to sell a tract of land owned by the First Presbyterian church, of Springfield, a church that figures prominently in the history of the War of the Rebellion.

Two tracts of land, amounting to 13½ acres, were deeded to the church in 1764 and 1775. It was stated in the deed that it was to be held forever in trust for the church.

A trolley line has been constructed through Springfield, and the land in question has become valuable. A portion of it was sold to Stewart S. Hartshorne, but when it came to passing the deed trouble was encountered, and it is to ascertain whether the transfer can legally be made that the action referred to Mr. Guild was brought.

TO IMPROVE ESSEX PLATFORM.

George L. Record Drafting One to Suit Hudson County Conditions.

George L. Record, Corporation Counsel of Jersey City, is working on a platform that will be submitted to the Republican State convention and embody the things for which the Hudson county New Idea men have been struggling. He does not like the platform adopted by the Essex county convention a few days ago, and in discussing it said:

"That platform will never do for us. It does not include the things that we have been fighting for. We want a platform adopted that will contain our ideas. I am sure that a man will be nominated at the convention who will stand by each and every plank. The Essex platform stands for the direct primaries only up as far as the county offices." We want it for all offices. It has no franchise tax clause, which we demand. We want a direct election of United States Senators, while the Essex platform only allows the voter to express an opinion or preference at the general election. We also want a public utilities bill, such as Governor Hughes has had passed in New ork."

'TWAS THE BANNER DAY

At the Closing-Out Sale of the Hallet & Davis Piano Store's Stock of the Highest Grade Pianos and Organs.

Yesterday's Sales Largely Exceeded

That of any other day. At this rate the stock will all go by the middle of next week. If an instruments is needed, 'Twill pay you to call early and investigate.

OPEN EVENINGS, No. 170 EAST FRONT ST.

Yesterday was the banner day of the great Closing-Out Sale of the Hallet & Davis Piano Store's stock of fine pianos and organs at factory cost prices, on easy payments. More pianos were sold, and more inquiries were made by personal calls, by mail and otherwise than on any previous day of this positively closing-out sale.

IF YOU NEED A PIANO OR ORGAN?

If you have promised your wife or children an instrument, but are waiting until a little later, perhaps when you think you could better afford it—or waiting, perhaps, until you could pay cash, then I say to you most emphatically, "Now is the time for you to buy."

Now, when you can save from one-third to one-half on the regular selling price of these beautiful pianos.

Now, when your credit will buy far lower than you can buy ordinarily for cash.

Now, when the terms are easier than ever before, practically your own terms will be acceptable.

This is the opportunity of a lifetime to purchase a piano of the highest grade at prices about the same you would pay regularly for the ordinary kind.

Can you afford to miss this opportunity? Not if you expect to buy an instrument in the next three years.

MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES.

Every instrument marked in plain figures, showing clearly the great reductions. One price to all—the marked price—a child can buy as well as the shrewdest buyer.

Notwithstanding the prices I am quoting at this sale are based on cash cost, and much less, in many instances, yet I will accept easy payments at the marked prices, the only difference between all cash and easy payments being a small interest on the deferred payments.

The stock consists of such well known makes as the Hallet & Davis, Kimball, Conway, Bowen, Wellman, and many others.

Several New York-made $250 pianos with thoroughly first class works, but in plain case designs, sale prices $117 to $143.

Upright pianos, regular value $250, $275, $300, to be closed at from $163, $187 and $207. Terms, $10 to $15 down, and $5 to $7 monthly.

Upright pianos, comprising various good makes; regular values $325, $350, to $375, to close at $175, $193, to $237.

Terms, $10 to $20 down, and $6 to $10 monthly.

New Cabinet Grand upright pianos of the highest class, regular $400, $450, $500 and $600 styles, sale prices $287, $317, $343, and slightly upwards for the more elaborate cases.

Terms, $25 cash, and $10 monthly.

SOME ORGANS TO GIVE AWAY.

I will give away a number of fine cabinet organs, simply asking you to pay for the cost of the cartage and the repairs.

Some of the finest grade cabinet organs at prices from $17 up to $53 for the new and finest cased ones.

Terms, $3 to $5 down, and $2 to $3 monthly.

A five-year factory warantee given with each instrument and entire satisfaction guaranteed.

Store open evenings until 9 o'clock.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Mrs. Robert Walpole, of Front street, entertained the Ladies' Aid Society of the Kearny Baptist church yesterday. Mrs. Walpole was an active worker in the society during her residence at Kearny, and was for several years its president. After her removal here the members decided to hold an outing once a year, and to spend the day with their former president.

There will be quite a large delegation of the fans accompany the team to Rahway Saturday afternoon. Johnson will do the box work.

The public library is again open for the circulation of books, the improvements and alterations in the room being completed.

David R. Clark, who has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Clark, has returned to his home in Newark.

The Misses Broadwell, of Newark, were the guests yesterday of Mrs. Augusta Miller, of Front street.

Mrs. John Robison has returned from a week's stay at Asbury Park.

The township committee meets tomorrow night in the town hall.

If he is hurt he must be paid for his injuries under the new limited liability act, and the inner man is provided for through the medium of restaurants, not only cheap, but good. At these restaurants you can get a hot pot of tea for one penny, a fresh fried egg for the same amount, and I have on more than one occasion partaken of a very good lunch for the sum of 4½d or 9 cents.

When we remember that according to figures stated by the bishops of London, that 1,292,000 persons in that great city have an income not exceeding 21 shillings per week per family it shows how important it is that these cheap restaurants should exist.

A wave of socialism is spreading over England, and the propaganda must be making itself felt, for a Socialistic Sunday school is now an established fact, the school visably parading itself on Sundays in char-a-bancs, liberally placarded with the fact that its sponsers are those that fight for their principles under the red flag.

Those who are making their initial trip to the continent should scrutinize carefully the money they receive in change if they would preserve themselves from loss and humiliation. In the Latin union, consisting of Belgium, France, Italy and Switzerland the current coins of each country are legal tender in each other country, yet you must remember that unless Helvetia, represented by a female figure is standing up on the obverse of Swiss coins is the coin good, for if she is sitting down the coin is an uncurrent one and worth but the price of old silver. These remarks apply to the one franc pieces and a book could be written as to what five franc pieces are good.

While drachmas of Greece are frequently tendered you by tradesmen. So much one might stand, but when the pesos of Chili and the copper of Argentine is offered to you in payment you wonder where the imposition will end. Do not be surprised either if you find an occasional lead piece in your change. The places are not unknown where a box of these pieces is kept to pass off on the unsuspecting.

In Switzerland, the postoffice does the work of the express companies at home, and trunks are as easily sent by post over the diligence routes in that country as a bundle of papers is in ours, and it is not an infrequent thing to see jars of cream and boxes of eggs transported in the same fashion.

At some of the fashionable continental watering places the menus at the restaurants are not priced, the intention evidently being to obtain the utmost from a customer within the limits of reason that his pocketbook will stand, and while the food thus furnished is delicious and attractively served, yet I do not believe that it appeals to Americans to be charged two prices for anything. This allegation is not made upon idle rumor, but from actual experience, with documentary evidence to substantiate it. At these fashionable restaurants the dining room is placed next to the promenade, the distance between the diner and the hungry crowd outside being but that measured by the thickness of a pane of French plate glass, and I have seen as many as 200 of the poorer members of society literally pressing their noses against the pane watching the beautifully gowned and bejeweled members of the upper ten, with their escorts, enjoying a meal with delicate wines and delicious viands running probably into as many francs per meal as each spectator receives in a month, and with almost a speaking appeal of trying to content themselves with the sight of others enjoying in abundance what they may never have the means to partake of, and which seeing must engender feelings other than those of friendliness towards the participants behind the glass. Such ostentatious display of eating and acting is not helpful to the putting down of anarchistic notions.

No wonder we hear of an International Anarchistic Congress holding forth in Amsterdam. R.

AUTO ABLAZE.

C. W. Leveridge's Machine in Flames.

An automobile owned by C. W. Leveridge, of 828 Sherman avenue, was destroyed by fire about 9:30 o'clock, last night, while Mr. Leveridge was returning to his home. A telephone call to fire headquarters summoned the chemical engine. The two chemical tanks were used to extinguish the blaze. About all that was saved of the machine were three wheels and the iron frame work.

Exactly what caused the blaze is not known, but it is Mr. Leveridge's opinion that a leak in the gasolene tank was responsible. He was riding along Plainfield avenue in the city limits, when he discovered that something was wrong with his machine. The instant he jumped out of the auto it was enveloped in flames. Realizing that he was helpless to put out the fire, he ran to a nearby house and asked fire headquarters for help. When the firemen reached the scene all hope of saving the machine was gone.

The Greater Waldorf.

Owing to the increase in her business, Mrs. A. L. Waldorf, of 132-134 Crescent avenue, has taken rooms at 138 Crescent avenue, in connection with her present boarding houses. The rooms have been newly decorated and furnished throughout in modern style, and it affords every comfort and convenience for persons seeking a quiet and refined place to live.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 22.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—God's omnipotence.—I Chron. xxix, 9-12.

Omnipotence means all powerful, the omnipotence of God, that God is all powerful.

This is true of God so far as the natural world is concerned. His power has been manifested, first, in the creation of the universe and, secondly, by the fact that He has and does sustain and control it. God is the absolute, sovereign ruler of the universe. He made it "by the word of His power," and by the same power He sustains it. Man has gradually learned by power to use many important things in the natural world. He is conquering and subduing it. But what is his power to the infinite power of God? Man builds a mighty city, but the earth quakes and it is destroyed. He sails a magnificent vessel, but a storm arises and it is gone. All human power is subject to the desire and will of God. His infinite power should arouse our admiration, and admiration should lead to love and devotion.

God is all powerful in the spiritual world. He only has the power to forgive our sins, but He is willing and anxious to use that power in our behalf if we are only willing. He only through the Holy Ghost has the power to give unto us spiritual gifts, but He is ever ready to do so. He is more willing to give us the Holy Spirit, said Christ, than earthly parents are to give good gifts unto their children. Can we doubt His willingness to do so in the face of this statement of Christ? Are we living low spiritual lives, devoid of spiritual power? Then let us seek power and its source and fountain head, the throne of God, through prayer, and we will receive it. God has the power to help us overcome temptation and sin. Do we want to overcome them? Then let us go to God, through whom, in Christ, we can do all things.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. cxv, 1-3; Jer. xxxii, 16, 17, 27; Matt. xix, 23-26; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Eph. iii, 20, 21; Rev. xix, 1-6.

An Age of Big Things.

The twentieth century is pre-eminently a century of great achievements. Congress appropriates a billion dollars. The Pennsylvania spends $50,000,000 to gain an entrance into New York city to save the annoyances and a few minutes' delay caused by the ferry. Great steam dredges will lift untold millions of dollars out of the United States treasury and deposit them in the Panama canal. A man is not counted rich unless his income is in the millions. But all this is in the world of commerce and business. How about the realm of spiritual life? How goes the Father's business for the redemption of the world?

There are many signs that we are beginning to keep step with the spirit of the age. The missionaries of the cross are carrying the gospel light to the darkest corners of the earth. Never since the days of Moody has there been such interest in evangelistic work as at the present time. A most remarkable movement in the interest of world wide missions is now being organized by Christian laymen. One of the greatest factors in the world today for the training of leaders in all these lines is the Society of Christian Endeavor. Its progress and success have been phenomenal. In twenty-five years it has girdled the globe with more than 68,000 societies and more than 3,500,000 members. Nearly 42,000,000 young people have come from its ranks into the membership of the churches. Its members have contributed more than $15,000,000 to missionary and philanthropic work. There have been 37,000,000 religious meetings held, with an attendance of more than a billion and a half. More than sixty denominations are represented in its fellowship, and its literature is printed in eighty languages. It is training these millions of young people to be better Christians, better church workers, better citizens, and to help usher in the day when all people shall recognize the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.—William Shaw, at New York State District Secretaries' Institute.

Christian Endeavor Magna Charta.

Dr. Clark in an introduction to Rev. F. B. Meyers' charming little volume, "I Promise," enunciates these important truths:

"The prayer meeting covenant pledge is the mainstay of Christian Endeavor. It is to Christian Endeavor what Magna Charta was to British liberty; what the constitution of the United States is to the American patriot; what the Mayflower compact was to the Puritans; what national covenant was to the Covenanters. The societies that adopt and live up to the covenant pledge with fidelity have always prospered. No society that has ignored or weakened the pledge has long continued to do a conspicuous good work."

Not a "Job Office."

The Christian Endeavor society is not a "job office" or a machine shop. We have carried the workshop idea quite too far in our estimate of the movement. It is not "the young people of the church at work," but "the church at work for her young people," which is a very different thing.—Rev. W. W. Sleeper.

Temperance Endeavor.

And let Endeavorers remember that we can all pass a prohibition act—a personal prohibition act.

—or if you're already "started," we'll help you refurnish! We've been doing it for thousands of others for nearly 50 years at this same old, well known "73 Market Street" address, and certainly ought to have the knack by now! There's a lot of good common sense reasons for using us, these among others:

1st—Immense stocks of latest styles in every good grade to pick from.
2nd—Whether purchase is one or a hundred dollars, your account is equally welcome!
3rd—Prices are always plainly marked—and always the lowest, owing to enormous purchasing power.
4th—As little as $1.50 a week or $6.00 a month pays for $100 worth of goods—other amounts in proportion.
5th—We want your trade—and cordially invite comparisons!

Sept. 22: "The word of God perverted." "Beware of false prophets."—Matt. vii, 15-20.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Passages for reference—II Tim. iv, 3, 4; II Pet. iii, 15, 16; John vii, 17; xvi, 13.

One of the hard things to bear in this world is the opposition which the truth and the right meet from the evil and the wicked. Since the days of Abel whoever would live godly has found that those who would not so live hate and persecute the one seeking peace and righteousness.

This is not the saddest thing in life, however. Worse than open enemies are the betrayals of professed friends. One expects mockery and thorns from a Herod and smiting from an Annas or Caiaphas, but who can be prepared for the kiss of a Judas?

Perversion of the truth is worse even than open opposition to it. The worst of lies is a half truth. The very element of truth in it makes it more difficult of answer and more dangerous to the unwary and unwise.

And such perversion the church of God has had to meet in all the centuries of her existence and must still face. Peter speaks of some who in his days twisted the language of Paul in such manner as to make it destructive to themselves. Their successors are still alive and flourishing. It was Barnum, the great showman, who used to say, "The people like to be fooled." To one who watches the current of events and is at all widely informed on religious matters this remark seems to apply to many who account themselves very pious.

Religion has to do both with the emotional nature and with the reasoning powers. Many lose the connection between the two and on one side or the other lose the track. There is not a city of any size in the land which has not a company which illustrates one or the other of these tendencies. Instances are too numerous and too notorious to need special mention or comparison. Nothing seems too absurd to find some advocates. Often those who are otherwise well educated and reputable give themselves to the most fantastic and unreasonable beliefs and practices.

Wealth and education are no guaranty of sober mindedness. Moral living is not always necessary to insure an enthusiastic following. There is much material for careful study in psychology in all these perversions and imitations. But our business as Leaguers is not so much to study these abnormal growths and excrescences as to cultivate the true and be sure that we are not in any wise perverting God's word.

The desire to be singular, to have a reputation for brilliancy or even smartness, has given the impulse not infrequently which has led a soul far from the safe way. Many times it is to be feared that the motive has not been so innocent as even these. Greed, pride and baser lusts have been at the foundation of many a movement which has falsified the word of God and led men astray from His paths.

The only safety is in a rigid intention to follow unswervingly the plain teaching of God's word. This must be followed by an open minded and sincere desire for the truth. And with both these must go willing obedience to duty as it becomes known. If one lives in this manner, there will be little danger of going wrong. The eccentric and fantastic are to be shunned. They are never safe.

"Teach me Thy will, O God, and lead me in a plain path." Let this ever be our prayer.

Pastors and Peace Agitation.

The minister who is thoroughly convinced that the monstrous crime of war is frightfully out of harmony with the fundamental principle of the gospel, that it is doomed to final destruction by the advance of the kingdom of God, will not wait for set days and special invitations to preach on the subject. He will see that he cannot preach the gospel without preaching peace. Many occasions will come along during the ordinary course of his ministrations where appropriate suggestions, terse and pithy sentences or forcible paragraphs, springing naturally out of the subject under consideration, will find spontaneous utterance. If even a third of the Christian congregations in the United States were thus enlightened, inspired and intelligently led, as many are, the weight of peace sentiment thus generated would be almost irresistibly felt in the councils of the nation and in the conferences of the world.—Benjamin F. Trueblood, LL. D.

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY A.C. McCLURG & CO.

The little bunch halted instantly just without the edge of the heavy timber, turning their faces up toward the speaker.

"Now, see here, Buck," answered one, taking a single step ahead of the others, and hollowing his hand as a trumpet to speak through, "it don't look to us fellers as if this affair was any of your funeral, nohow, and we've come 'long ahead of the others just on purpose to give you a fair show to pull out of it afore the real trouble begins. Sabe?"

"Is thet so?"

The little marshal was too far away for them to perceive how his teeth set beneath the bristly mustache.

"You bet! The boys don't consider thet it's hardly the square deal your takin' up agin 'em in this way. They elected you marshal of this yere camp, but it warn't expected you'd ever take no sides 'long with murderers. Thet's too stiff fer us to abide by. So come on down, Buck, an' leave us to attend to the cuss."

"If you mean Hampton, he's my prisoner. Will you promise to let me take him down to Cheyenne fer trial?"

"Wal, I reckon not, old man. We kin give him a trial well 'nough here in Glencaid," roared another voice from one of the group, which was apparently growing restless over the delay. "But we ain't inclined to do you

"Hi, There!" He Called, "You Fellers Ain't Invited to This Picnic."

no harm onless ye ram in too far. So come on down, Buck, throw up yer cards; we've got all the aces, an' ye can't bluff this whole durn camp."

Mason spat into the dump contemptuously, his hands thrust into his pockets. "You're a fine-lookin' lot o' law-abidin' citizens, you are! Blamed if you ain't. This yere man, Bob Hampton, is my prisoner, an' I'll take him to Cheyenne if I have ter brain every tough in Glencaid to do it. Thet's me, gents."

"Oh, come off; you can't run your notions agin the whole blame moral sentiment of this camp."

"Moral sentiment! I'm backin' up the law, not moral sentiment, ye cross-eyed beer-slinger, an' if ye try edgin' up ther another step I'll plug you with this '45.'"

There was a minute of hesitancy while the men below conferred, the marshal looking contemptuously down upon them, his revolver gleaming ominously in the light.

"Oh, come on, Buck, show a little hoss sense," the leader sang out. "We've got every feller in camp along with us, an' there ain't no show fer the two o' ye to hold out against that sort of an outfit."

Mason smiled and patted the barrel of his Colt.

"Oh, go to blazes! When I want any advice, Jimmie, I'll send fer ye."

Some one fired, the ball digging up the soft earth at the marshal's feet, and flinging it in a blinding cloud into Hampton's eyes. Mason's answer was a sudden fusilade, which sent the crowd flying helter-skelter into the underbrush. One among them staggered and half fell, yet succeeded in dragging himself out of sight.

"Great Scott, if I don't believe I winged James!" the shooter remarked cheerfully, reaching back into his pocket for more cartridges. "Maybe them boys will be a bit more keerful if they once onderstand they're up agin the real thing. Well, perhaps I better skin down, fer I reckon it's liable ter be rifles next."

It was rifles next, and the "winging" of Big Jim, however it may have inspired caution, also developed fresh animosity in the hearts of his followers, and brought forth evidences of discipline in their approach. Peering across the sheltering dump-pile, the besieged were able to perceive the dark figures cautiously advancing through the protecting brush; they sped out widely until their two flanks were close in against the wall of rock, and then the deadly rifles began to spit spitefully, the balls casting up the soft dirt in clouds or flattening against the stones. The two men crouched lower, hugging their pile of slag, unable to perceive even a straw assailant within range of their ready revolvers.

"This whole blame country is full of discharged sojers," he growled, "an' they know their biz all right. I reckon them fellers is pretty sure to git one of us yit; anyhow, they've got us cooped. Say, Bob, thet lad crawling yonder ought to be in reach, an' it's our bounden duty not to let the boys git too gay."

Hampton tried the shot suggested, elevating considerable to overcome distance. There was a yell and a swift skurrying backward which caused Mason to laugh, although neither knew whether this result arose from fright or wound.

"'Bliged ter teach 'em manners onct in awhile, or they'll imbibe a fool notion they kin come right 'long up yere without no invite. 'Taint fer long, nohow, 'less all them guys are ijuts."

Hampton turned his head and looked soberly into the freckled face, impressed by the speaker's grave tone."

"Why?"

"Fire, my boy, fire. The wind's dead right fer it; thet brush will burn like so much tinder, an' with this big wall o' rock back of us, it will be hell here, all right. Some of 'em are bound to think of it pretty blame soon, an' then, Bob, I reckon you an' I will hev' to take to the open on the jump."

Hampton's eyes hardened. God, how he desired to live just then, to uncover that fleeing Murphy and wring from him the whole truth which had been eluding him all these years!

CHAPTER XXI.

"She Loves Me: She Loves Me Not."

It was no claim of military duty which compelled Brant to relinquish Miss Spencer so promptly at the hotel door, but rather a desire to escape her ceaseless chatter and gain retirement where he could reflect in quiet over the revelations of Hampton. In this quest he rode slowly up the valley of the Bear Water, through the bright sunshine, the rare beauty of the scene scarcely leaving the slightest impress on his mind, so busy was it, and so preoccupied. He no longer had any doubt that Hampton had utilized his advantageous position, as well as his remarkable powers of pleasing, to ensnare the susceptible heart of this young, confiding girl. While the man had advanced no direct claim, he had said enough to make perfectly clear the close intimacy of their relation and the existence of a definite understanding between them. With this recognized as a fact, was he justified in endeavoring to win Naida Gillis for himself? That the girl would find continued happiness with such a man as Hampton he did not for a moment believe possible; that she had been deliberately deceived regarding his true character he felt no doubt. That the girl was morally so far above him as to make his very touch a profanation, and at the unbidden thought of it, the soldier vowed to oppose such an unholy consummation. Nor did he, even then, utterly despair of winning, for he recalled afresh the intimacy of their few past meetings, his face brightened in memory of this and that brief word or shy glance.

All the world loves a lover, and all the fairies guide him. As the officer's eyes glanced up from the dusty road, he perceived just ahead the same steep bank down which he had plunged in his effort at capturing his fleeing tormentor. With the sight there came upon him the desire to loiter again in the little glen where they had first met, and dream once more of her who had given to the shaded nook both life and beauty. He swung himself from the saddle, tied a loose rein to a scrub oak, and clambered up the bank.

With the noiseless step of a plainsman he pushed in through the labyrinths of bush, only to halt petrified upon the very edge of that inner barrier. No figment of imagination, but the glowing reality of flesh and blood, awaited him. She had neither seen nor heard his approach, and he stopped in perplexity. He had framed a dozen speeches for her ears, yet now he could do no more than stand and gaze, his heart in his eyes. And it was a vision to enchain, to hold lips speechless. She was seated with unstudied grace on the edge of the bank, her hands clasped about one knee, her sweet face sobered by thought, her eyes downcast, the long lashes plainly outlined against the clear cheeks. To draw back unobserved was impossible, even had he possessed strength of will sufficient to make the attempt, nor would words of easy greeting come to his relief. He could merely worship silently as before a sacred shrine. It was thus she glanced up and saw him with startled eyes, her hands unclasping, her cheeks rose-colored.

"Lieut. Brant, you here?" she exclaimed, speaking as if his presence seemed unreal. "What strange miracles an idle thought can work!"

"Thoughts, I have heard," he replied, coming toward her with head uncovered, "will sometimes awaken answers through vast distances of time and space. As my thought was with you I may be altogether to blame for thus arousing your own. From the expression of your face, I supposed you dreaming."

She smiled, her eyes uplifted for a single instant to his own. "It was rather thought just merging into dream, and there are few things in life more sweet. I know not whether it is the common gift of all minds, but my day-dreams are almost more to me than my realities."

"First is was moods, and now dreams." He seated himself comfortably at her feet. "You would cause me to believe you a most impractical person, Miss Naida."

"If that were only true, I am sure I should be most happy, for it has been my fortune so far to conjure up only pleasure through day-dreaming—the things I like and long for become my very own then. But if you mean, as I suspect, that I do not enjoy the dirt and drudgery of life, then my plea will have to be guilty. Back of what you term practical some one has said there is always a dream, a first conception. In that sense I choose to be a dreamer."

"And not so unwise a choice, if your dreams only tend toward results." He sat looking into her animated face, deeply puzzled by both words and actions. "I cannot help noticing that you avoid all reference to my meeting with Mr. Hampton. Is this another sign of your impractical mind?"

"I should say rather the opposite, for I had not even supposed it concerned me."

"Indeed! That presents a vastly different view from the one given us an hour since. The distinct impression was then conveyed to both our minds that you were greatly distressed regarding the matter. Is it possible you can have been acting again?"

"I? Certainly not!" and she made no attempt to hide her indignation. "What do you mean?"

He hesitated an instant in his reply, feeling that possibly he was treading upon thin ice. But her eyes commanded a direct answer, and he yielded to them.

"We were informed that you experienced great anxiety for fear we might quarrel—so great, indeed, that you had confided your troubles to another."

"To whom?"

"Miss Spencer. She came to us ostensibly in your name, and as a peacemaker."

For a moment she sat gazing directly at him, then she laughed softly.

"Why, how supremely ridiculous; I can hardly believe it true, only your face tells me you certainly are not in play. Lieut. Brant, I have never even dreamed of such a thing. You had informed me that your mission was one of peace, and he pledged me his word not to permit any quarrel. I had the utmost confidence in you both."

"How, then, did she even know of our meeting?"

"I am entirely in the dark, as mystified as you," she acknowledged, frankly, "for it has certainly never been a habit with me to betray the confidence of my friends, and I learned long since not to confide secrets to Miss Spencer."

Apparently neither cared to discuss the problem longer, yet he remained silent considering those questions which might decide his fate.

"You speak of your confidence in us both," he said, slowly. "To me the complete trust you repose in Mr. Hampton is scarcely comprehensible. Do you truly believe in his reform?"

"Certainly. Don't you?"

The direct return question served to nettle and confuse him. "It is, perhaps, not my place to say, as my future happiness does not directly depend on the permanence of his reformation. But if his word can be depended upon, your happiness to a very large extent does."

She bowed. "I have no doubt you can safely repose confidence in whatever he may have told you regarding me."

"You indorse, then, the claims he advances?"

"You are very insistent; yet I know of no good reason why I should not answer. Without at all knowing the nature of those claims to which you refer, I have no hesitancy in saying that I possess such complete confidence in Bob Hampton as to reply unreservedly yes. But really, Lieut. Brant, I should prefer talking upon some other topic. It is evident that you two gentlemen are not friendly, yet there is no reason why any misunderstanding between you should interfere with our friendship, is there?"

She asked this question with such perfect innocence that Brant believed she failed to comprehend Hampton's claims.

"I have been informed that it must," he explained. "I have been told that I was no longer to force my attentions upon Miss Gillis."

"By Bob Hampton?"

"Yes. Those were, I believe, his exact words. Can you wonder that I hardly know how I stand in your sight?"

"I do not at all understand," she faltered. "Truly, Lieut. Brant, I do not. I feel that Mr. Hampton would not say that without a good and sufficient reason. He is not a man to be swayed by prejudice; yet, whatever the reason may be, I know nothing about it."

"But you do not answer my last query."

"Perhaps I did not hear it."

"It was: How do I stand in your sight? That is of far more importance to me now than any unauthorized command from Mr. Hampton."

She glanced up into his serious face shyly, with a little dimple of returning laughter. "Indeed; but perhaps he might not care to have me say. However, as I once informed you that you were very far from being my ideal, possibly it may be my duty to qualify that harsh statement somewhat."

"By confessing that I am your ideal?"

"Oh, indeed, no! We never realize our ideals, you know, or else they would entirely cease to be ideals. My confession is limited to a mere admission that I now consider you a very pleasant young gentleman."

"You offer me a stone when I cry unto your for bread," he exclaimed. "The world is filled with pleasant young men. They are a drug on the market. I beg some special distinction, some different classification in your eyes."

"You are becoming quite hard to please," her face turned partially away, her look meditative, "and—and dictatorial; but I will try. You are intelligent, a splendid dancer, fairly good looking, rather bright at times, and, no doubt, would prove venturesome if not held strictly to your proper place. Take it all in all, you are even interesting, and—I admit—I am inclined to like you."

The tantalizing tone and manner nerved him; he grasped the white hand resting invitingly on the grass, and held it firmly within his own. "You only make sport as you did once before. I must have the whole truth."

"Oh, no; to make sport at such a time would be sheerest mockery, and I would never dare to be so free. Why, remember we are scarcely more than strangers. How rude you are! only our third time of meeting, and you will not release my hand."

"Not unless I must, Naida," and the deep ringing soberness of his voice startled the girl into suddenly uplifting her eyes to his face. What she read there instantly changed her mood from playfulness to earnest gravity.

"Oh, please do not—do not say what you are tempted to," her voice almost pleading. "I cannot listen; truly I cannot; I must not. It would make us both very unhappy, and you would be sure to regret such hasty words."

"Regret!" and he yet clung to the hand which she scarcely endeavored to release, bending forward hoping to read in her hidden eyes the secret her lips guarded. "Am I, then, not old enough to know my own mind?"

"Yes—yes; I hope so, yes; but it is not for me; it can never be for me—I am no more than a child, a homeless waif, a nobody. You forget that I do not even know who I am, or the name I ought rightfully to bear. I will not have it so."

"Naida, sweetheart!" and he burst impetuously through all bonds of restraint, her flushed cheeks the inspiration of his daring. "I will speak, for I care nothing for all this. It is you I love—love forever. Do you understand me, darling? I love you! I love you!"

For an instant—one glad, weak, helpless, forgetful instant—she did not see him, did not even know herself; the very world was lost. Then she awoke as if from a dream, his strong arms clasped about her, his lips upon hers

that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.

Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.

Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?

We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.

In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.

Why not decide to get a new piano now?

Pianos to rent at moderate terms.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

To the Ranks Once More.

James E. Martine, one of the ablest, most earnest and mostconscientious Democrats in the State of New Jersey, has once more been delegated to the ranks, and will take his appointed place, as he has many times before, without loss of self-respect, and with as strong sentiments as ever in the ultimate success of Democratic principles. Possibly he may have a few more poignant regrets this time, for it was a worthy desire on his part to be the banner-bearer of his party in this State, but it is not likely that any one will know of them except himself.

Several years ago James E. Martine was casually named for Governor in a Democratic State convention, but then, as now, the party leaders threw their influence for another man, and Mr. Martine was not heard from after the first ballot. But he was not then known as well as he is now. He has grown great since then. He carried the strong Republican county of Union against the great financier and absentee, Charles N. Fowler, and would have carried the entire Fifth Congressional District had not the Morris Republican machine worked to its utmost capacity.

Mr. Martine certainly occupied a very prominent place in the Democratic campaign preceding the convention which has just named Katzenbach. It is eminently creditable to him that he was deemed worthy of so much consideration, and it is no discredit to have been beaten by his Trenton rival. Yet it may be said that had James E. Martine received the nomination he would have made a campaign that would have covered the entire State and that would not soon have been forgotten.

What the chances of Democratic success would have been under Mr. Martine's candidacy is only subject to conjecture, but certain it is he would have done all in his power to increase them. He has never been elected to office, though he has run many times, and came very near to beating Fowler, but there is a sentiment among his friends and followers that Martine had sacrificed himself so often for his party that the people would have said: "Well, he's a strong, straight man, and he deserves to be elected," and would have given him their votes. A man so capable, so honest, so faithful and so manly as James E. Martine must get his political reward some day.—Newark Evening News.

Several new members will be elected at the meeting of Franklin Council No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., tonight. Plans will also be perfected for the entertainment to be given in October.

COLORED CHURCHMEN IN CONFERENCE AT SHORE.

Is First Meeting of Episcopalians to Be Held in This State.

The twenty-third annual conference of colored church workers, the first to be held in this State, which is composed of the rectors and laymen of the Protestant Episcopal Church of America, convened in Asbury Park yesterday in St. Augustin's P. E. church, of which Rev. A. E. Jensen is pastor.

Preliminary to the opening of the conference there was held Tuesday evening services at the church, consisting of choral evensong and the delivery of welcome addresses to the clergymen and delegates. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. E. Robert Bennett, rector of St. Mark's church, of Wilmington, N. C.

Rt. Rev. Dr. John Scarborough, bishop of New Jersey, delivered an address of welcome to the conference, to which response was made by Rev. Dr. Henry L. Phillips, of Philadelphia. There are 115 clergymen of the Episcopal faith among the colored people throughout the country.

Yesterday's session was begun with the celebration of the holy communion at 7 a. m., and there was a second celebration at 10 a. m. The deliberations are being presided over by Rev. Dr. Henry L. Phillips, of Philadelphia, the president of the Church Workers, who delivered his annual address to the conference yesterday morning at the conclusion of the divine services.

Rev. Dr. George F. Bragg, Jr., of Baltimore, Md., is the secretary of the conference, as well as its historian.

The afternoon session of yesterday was begun, and this program carried out: "The Church at Work," Rev. B. Wellington Paxton, of Newark; Rev. H. B. Delaney, Raleigh, N. C., and Rev. H. S. McDuffy, Philadelphia, Pa. "Missionary Work in a Northern City," Rev. Mr. Howard, New York city; Garrison D. Trusty, Chester, Pa., and Rev. Scott Wood, Allegheny, Pa. "Mission Work in a Southern Town," Rev. Charles L. Somers, Richmond, Va.; Rev. Robert N. Perry, of Wilson, N. C., and Rev. William T. Wood, Washington, N. C. "Self-Supporting Churches in the North," Rev. Joseph H. Livingston, Harrisburg, Pa.; Rev. James N. Drover, Atlantic City, and Rev. Robert W. Bagnall, Cleveland, O. "The Office and Work of an Archdeacon," Rev. Dr. George F. Bragg, Jr., of Baltimore, Md.; Rev. G. Alexander McGuire, archdeacon of Arkansas, and Rev. E. L. Henderson, archdeacon of Georgia.

The most important question is whether or not the general assembly, which is the governing body of the Protestant Episcopal church, shall adopt at its triennial meeting to be held in October at Richmond, Va., a canon favoring the consecration of colored bishops with special jurisdiction for work among the colored people, with particular reference to the South, who shall have the oversight and direction of that department of the church's missionary work.

BIG CANAL PROJECT.

Delaware Deep Channel a Link in Chain from Bay State.

Trenton, Sept. 19.—Mayor Reyburn and Congressman Moore, of Philadelphia, are to be among the speakers at the "deep river" convention of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce in this city October 1.

The idea of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce is to secure a ship channel in the Delaware between this city and Philadelphia and eventually to make it a link in the proposed line of canals between Massachusetts and North Carolina.

Hop Too Long For Hopper.

Manager Counihan announces that a change of plans has made it necessary to cancel the matinee on Saturday and therefore DeWolf Hopper will only appear at the New Plainfield at one performance, that taking place at night. Those holding tickets for the matinee may either have their money refunded at the box office or get tickets exchanged for the night performance. It was found to be too long a jump for Mr. Hopper to get his company here in time for the scheduled matinee.

Judge Silent on Freeman Case.

New Brunswick, Sept. 19.—At the opening of the September term of court here yesterday Justice Swayze, in charging the grand jury, made no reference to the crap game at Metuchen in which Dr. Freeman is alleged to have taken part.

POLITICAL NOTES

Frank S. Katzenbach, Democratic candidate for Governor, will be the guest of the Delaware Democratic Club, of Jersey City, on the night of Saturday, October 5. There will be a mass meeting at Grand View Park. A committee of five hundred will have charge of the arrangements. There will be street parades and Hudson's Democracy will make every effort to make the demonstration the greatest in the campaign.

The Socialist party of Morris county has made a full county and local ticket, and nominating petitions will be filed with County Clerk Voorhees. The county ticket is composed of the following: For State Senator, George Hirshman, Jr., of Morristown; for Assemblymen, George B. Sherrette, of Morristown, and F. J. Harvey, of Rockaway; for surrogate, William Schepps, of Randolph township. The Dover ticket is as follows. For mayor, Joseph Wolverton; for alderman, Joseph B. Shaw; for common councilmen, B. W. Stokes, William Paton, Edward J. Milo; for chosen freeholders, William Boozer and Emil Hoagland.

PERSONAL.

William Jones, of East Third street, has returned from Richmond, Va., where he attended the annual session of the Imperial Conclave, Mystic Shrine.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Petersen, of Brooklyn, have returned home after a two weeks' stay with Mrs. Petersen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Hansen, of the borough.

Miss Ruth Van Vliet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Van Vliet, of Washington avenue, has returned to Abbott Academy, Andover, Mass., where she is a student.

Miss Elizabeth McGee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. McGee, of Rockview avenue, is stopping at the home of her grandmather, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, of Grove street, during the absence of her parents in Europe.

AMUSEMENTS.

An attraction that will please every taste has been provided for the patrons of the New Plainfield theatre on Wednesday, September 25, matinee and night, when "Around the Clock" will be presented here by those inimitable fun-makers, the Ritchie London Comedy Company, who were last seen in the travesty, "A Night In a London Hall." "Around the Clock," ever since its initial performance, has enjoyed a degree of success seldom attained by attractions of like character. Thus far this season the comedy has been greeted by crowded houses at every performance. The universal laudatory criticisms of both press and public wherever it played easily attest its right to rank in the first flight of musical comedies. It is full to overflowing with mirth, music and dances, clever comedy situations, high class specialties, and presented by a large and well known company.

RUTGERS COLLEGE OPENS.

Freshman Class This Year Will Be Largest in History of Institution.

New Brunswick, Sept. 19.—Rutgers College opened yesterday morning for the fall session of its 142 year. There have been 135 applications for admission to the freshman class, and of these 100 have qualified. The total enrollment, exact figures of which cannot yet be ascertained, will be the largest in the history of the class.

The trustees will hold a special meeting Friday to take final action on the plans for the new engineering building, which is to cost $50,000, and of which $25,000 was raised by general subscription among the friends of the institution. The other $25,000 was given by Andrew Carnegie.

In his address to the students, Dr. Demarest paid tribute to the men whom Rutgers had lost during the past year. Among those he mentioned were Cortlandt Parker, of Newark, and Judge Woodbridge Strong, of New Brunswick.

Poultry Show at Trenton Fair.

Trenton, Sept. 19.—Forty prizes will be awarded by the Fanciers' Poultry Association during the interstate fair here September 30 to October 4. The entry list has closed, and an exceptionally high class of fowl has been entered. The officers of the association are: Miles Hanchett, Orange, president; Frederick Huyler, Peapack, vice president; J. N. Sinnock, Newark, treasurer; James F. McKee, Newark, attorney; T. Farrer Rackham, Newark, secretary and superintendent.

On Tuesday night, October 1, Miantonomo Tribe, Improved Order Red Men, will initiate nine palefaces and complete arrangements for the anniversary celebration.

M. & A. TEPPER

invite you to attend their Fall Opening in their Millinery Department, Thursday, September 19th, and Friday, September 20th. Showing copies of the newest imported Pattern Hats, such as you could heretofore see only by visiting New York's exclusive Millinery Shops. We have spared no expense to bring here a Milliner of such unquestioned ability as to give this house a prestige from the start as the authority on Millinery styles in this section of the state. We believe the women of Plainfield will appreciate our efforts to serve them with the newest and best at most moderate prices. Miss Strohuber, the designer, will be on the floor and happy to meet the visitors to this department, and show them the fruits of her labors of the past thirty days—you will agree it's a most charming collection of Hats at wonderfully "Little" prices.

Come and be with us Thursday and Friday of this week.

HIGH JUMPING AT RACES

Daring Young Equestrienne to Give Exhibition of Horsemanship.

AT THE DRIVING PARK

Beautiful Rider Will Show Her $2,000 English Hackney Pony, "Aristocrat," Tomorrow.

Fancy riding and daring horsewomanship will be seen at the Driving Park, tomorrow afternoon, in conjunction with the matinee meet. Miss Adele Von Ohl, who is one of the best known equestriennes in the country, will give an exhibition on her $2,000 English hackney pony, Aristocrat.

Her exhibition will show the natural action of a horse whose spirit has never been broken. It is possible that Miss Von Ohl will ride Rifle, the noted high jumper, who has a record of seven feet six inches. It has not been decided whether Rifle will be shown in action tomorrow or the Saturday following.

Rifle is a dangerous horse for a woman to ride. It is said that no woman has been able to ride him successfully so far. Miss Von Ohl says she can ride anything that walks, and is confident that she will master Rifle in any contest that may arise between his will and hers.

Miss Von Ohl has had several years of professional riding experience. She is a natural horsewoman, and is as familiar with horses and their instincts as other girls are with millinery and lingerie—not that Miss Von Ohl is unfamiliar with both. She came into prominence two years ago as the star rider in the Hippodrome, New York, troupe. She was recognized as the best and most charming rider in the country at the time, and hasn't lost her distinction. She rode with the Pawnee Bill show last season, using the name of Della Champion.

MARRIED AT ST. MARY'S.

Miss Anna G. Forrestell Becomes Bride of Theodore A. Martin.

Theodore A. Martin and Miss Anna F. Forrestell, of 729 Arlington avenue, were married Wednesday afternoon at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church. The ceremony took place at 3 o'clock. It was witnessed only by immediate relatives.

A wedding supper was held after the ceremony. Following the supper, Mr. and Mrs. Martin left on a honeymoon trip. They will travel for several days.

The groom is engaged in the express and trucking business. He is an ex-policeman, and has served in the navy.

Irving W. Bininger has resigned his position with the Colonial Life Insurance Company, the same to take effect tomorrow.

PLAINFIELD GIRL HURT ON NEW YORK STREET

MISS M'GINLEY KNOCKED DOWN ON FIFTH AVENUE.

Miss Teresa McGinley, of 407 Richmond street, had a narrow escape from serious injury in New York yesterday while crosing Fifth avenue, near Twenty-second street. At the time the avenue was congested with traffic, and while attempting to cross the street, Miss McGinley was knocked down by a horse attached to a hansom cab driven by James Blair, of No. 101 Lexington avenue, that city.

She was severely bruised and suffered greatly from shock. She was assisted to a nearby drug store, where medical aid was given. An examination showed that the young woman was not seriously hurt, and later she was able to return to her home. Miss McGinley refused to make any charge against the cabman and he was allowed to go.

HOLY CROSS BOYS HOLD A SILVER TEA

PROCEEDS TO MEET OUTING FUND DEFICIENCY.

The disagreeable weather did not interfere in the least with the attendance at the silver tea held at the rectory of the Church of the Holy Cross, yesterday afternoon. The rooms were crowded with patrons, the affair being given by the members of the boys' choir to make up the deficiency as a result of the outing last summer. The net proceeds were about $45.

The rectory was tastefully decorated for the occasion and the choir boys, attired in dark clothing with Eton collars and white ties, made an attractive picture. The boys were assisted by Mrs. George A. Warner, who poured in the tea room; Miss Gertrude Pearson at the candy table and Miss Ida Davis at the cake table. All articles purchased at the tea were delivered at the homes of the purchasers by the choir boys.

A feature of the afternoon was an informal program of vocal music by the choir boys. At the suggestion of the rector, Rev. George A. Warner, they assembled in the music room and gave several selections which were popular at the summer camp. The patrons at the tea heartily applauded the boys.

The tea was planned chiefly by the boys themselves and their mothers' support was enlisted through the contribution of home-made cakes. Those in charge were much pleased with the success attained and it is believed that the amount realized will about cover the indebtedness.

Debating Society Reorganizes.

The Debating Society of the Plainfield High School met yesterday and organized for the coming year. These officers were chosen: President, George H. Fisher, Jr.; vice president, Percy M. Mygrant; secretary, Miss Elinor Van Tuyl; treasurer, Miss Helen Dorothy. After the election there was a short address by the president. The members are planning for an active season. In addition to the regular debates there will be mock trials and formal and informal speeches. Miss Mary Loch, of the faculty, will again direct the work of the society as critic.

Appointed Delegate to Grand Lodge.

Senate Lodge No. 3542, Knight of Honor, at a meeting held last night, appointed A. A. Lake as a delegate to attend the session of the Grand Lodge, to be held in Newark on October 10. John H. Doane, appointed an alternate, has decided to attend also. District Deputy Bush, of Westfield, was present last night and made a few remarks, commenting on the excellent standing of the order financially and otherwise.

Funeral of Miss Annie J. Dumont.

The funeral service of Miss Annie Jean Dumont, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Dumont was held at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon from the residence of the parents, 45 Prospect place. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, and there were many floral tributes. Rev. Charles E. Herring, the pastor of the First Presbyterian church, conducted the service. The body was placed in the receiving vault at Hillside Cemetery.

Races Begin at 2 O'clock.

The matinee races at the driving park tomorrow afternoon, under the auspices of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Park, will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. Stages will meet the trolleys on Park avenue.

—Neuman Brothers have a fine display of 200 baskets of fancy table and canning peaches. The prices are right. Call early to get the benefit of variety.

COURT HOUSE DELAYED

Work on Structure Resumed But the Corner Stone Ceremony Postponed.

BIG MARBLE BUILDING

Cost of Structure $200,000—Extra Work to Place the Blocks in Place.

Work on the new $200,000 white marble court house for Somerset county at Somerville was resumed yesterday, after being at a standstill for two weeks, but it will not be in readiness for the ceremonies incident to the laying of the cornerstone on Tuesday, October 1, as planned.

The bricklayers, who were called off by the National Bricklayers' Union, because the contractors were employing non-union men on their work in other parts of the country, have been allowed to go back on their job and the foundation walls of brick are being rapidly laid.

A framework fully fifty feet in height has been erected in the centre of the excavation. On the top of the framework has been placed a double derrick for hoisting the great marble blocks into place.

A number of stone masons are now laying the marble walls which will serve as the face of the building and bricklayers are facing up the marble with layers of brick.

NEGRO RELIGIOUS TRAINING.

Rev. Dr. Shepard Will Speak On It At Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

Rev. Dr. James E. Shepard, field superintendent of the work among the negroes under the International Sunday-school Association, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock. His subject will be: "The Religious Education of the Negro the Only Solution." Dr. Shepard was the only speaker of color at the World's Sunday-school Convention held in Rome, Italy, May 20 to 24.

Before that convention he read a paper that met with the hearty approval of the entire body. The paper made reference to the fact that the negro must have such training as will strengthen his moral being. It is this work Dr. Shepard is doing now. There will be a special chorus of twenty voices to sing at Sunday's meeting.

BARBER ISSUES DEFI.

Will Meet Allcomers for Hair-cutting Championship.

Frank Deluca, of 144 First avenue, Elizabeth, has issued a challenge to every barber in Union county to contest with him for artistic tonsorial championship and will bet $500 he wins. The contestants must show their skill in four different styles in haircutting.

This challenge came about through a dispute in the barbershop in which Deluca was employed. He was the head man and had five others under him. These five, during a dull moment yesterday morning, started an argument about who could cut hair the best, but all agreed that each had it all over the "boss." Deluca resigned on the spot, seeing that he had lost the respect of his subordinates, and ten minutes later issued his challenge.

William Jaeger Resigns.

William Jaeger, driver of the chemical engine at fire headquarters, has tendered his resignation to Chief Doane and in turn has been given to Chairman H. D. Hibbard, of the fire committee, who will ask that action be taken on it at the next meeting of the Common Council. He resigns to take a position as foreman at the Potter Printing Press Works, where he will receive more money and work less hours. As yet Chief Doane does not know who will succeed Mr. Jaeger, in fact, he says that there is no one in the department now for the position. The resignation may bring about a shift among the firemen.

Ordination of Andrew Townsend.

The ordination of Andrew Townsend, the minister in charge of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, will take place tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in Christ's church, Elizabeth, that being the time and place appointed by Bishop Scarborough. Mr. Townsend has been in charge of the Church of the Heavenly Rest for several months, having been assigned there from the Mission House, Trenton. He is doing a good work and is well thought of by the members of his parish.

Miss Mildred Ulrich a Bride.

Miss Mildred Ulrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ulrich, formerly of this city, but now of New York, and Harry Bliss, of Hartford, Conn., were married at the home of the bride's parents, on Wednesday night. They will reside in Hartford.

BRILLIANT CAREER OF G. O. P. NOMINEE

Eventful Political and Professional Life of Justice J. Franklin Fort.

HIS RISE A RAPID ONE

First Appointed a District Court Judge by Democratic Governor—Seated in Supreme Court.

John Franklin Fort, the Republican candidate for governor of the State, was born in Pemberton, Burlington county, on March 20, 1852, and is the son of Andrew H. Fort, who still lives in Mt. Holly. His father was in 1866-1867 a member of the House of Assembly, and his father's brother was Govenor George H. Fort, who held the executive office from 1851 to 1853. Young Fort remained in Pemberton until he was 21 years of age, leading the life of a farmer's boy, and having his share of the country boy's hardships. His early education was secured in Miss Nicholson's private school in Pemberton, and after that he went to the Pemberton Academy, where his teacher was Charles E. Hendrickson, a warm personal friend of the judge, and in recent years his fellow-worker on the Supreme Court bench.

Justice Fort's next tutor was William Hutchison, afterward well known as "John Sands," under which name he wrote articles for the New York Sun. He then went to Mount Holly Institute, conducted by Charles Aaron, and from there he went to Pennington Seminary, from which he was graduated in 1869.

Preparation for the Bar.

In the fall of 1869 he entered the law office of former Chief Justice Edward M. Paxton, who was then a well known practising lawyer in Philadelphia, but six months later returned to New Jersey and entered the office of Ewan Merritt, in Mount Holly. In order to help pay his expenses while studying, he taught school at Ewanville. He was also in the office of Colonel Garret S. Cannon, at Bordentown, from which place he went to the Albany Law School, where he was graduated in 1872 with the degree of L. L. B. Among his most intimate friends and a room-mate at the law school, was former Chief Justice Alton B. Parker, candidate on the Democratic ticket for President of the United States in 1904. This friendship continues until the present time.

Returning from law school without having attained his majority, Fort again entered the office of Ewan Merritt, and in November, 1873, having just passed 21 by a few months, he was admitted to the bar.

Campaigned for Grant.

When Mr. Fort returned from law school the Greely-Grant campaign of 1872 was in progress, and he entered that campaign for General Grant with vigor. During the next three months he made twenty-seven speeches in South Jersey. In the winter of 1873 he was made Assistant Journal Clerk of the Assembly, and he also held the same position in 1874, earning money enough to reimburse his father for every cent the latter had spent on his education.

Justice Fort went to Newark at the solicitation of John W. Taylor, then president of the Senate, who was at that time the Senator from Essex. Hardly had he settled in Newark before he became interested in politics, and in 187 he went on the stump for George A. Halsey, who was defeated by Governor Bedle in his campaign that year for the Governorship. His first speech in Newark was made from the porch of Mr. Halsey's house on the night of the nomination. After that he toured the State with Mr. Halsey, making many speeches. Shortly after this Mr. Fort married Miss Charlotte Stainsby, daughter of former State Senator William Stainsby, of Newark.

In 1878 Governor McClellan appointed Mr. Fort a judge of the District Court in Newark, and he was reappointed by Governor Ludlow, but resigned the office in 1886 to practise law.

His Rise in Politics.

After Judge Fort quit the District Court bench he practised law for ten years, having a large and lucrative business. In 1884 he was elected a delegate-at-large by the Republican State convention to the national convention, held at Chicago. At that place, with six others, he acted independently and voted for George F. Edmunds, of Vermont, for President, until the latter was dropped, and then voted with the rest of the Jersey delegation for James G. Blaine, whom he loyally and vigorously supported after the convention. In 1889 he was chairman of the convention which nominated General E. Burd Grubb for Governor, and toured the State with him and was greatly disappointed at his defeat. He was also chairman of the Griggs convention in 1895, and was a speaker with the latter in the "whirlwind" campaign of that year, which resulted in the election of the first Republican Governor in thirty years. In 1896 Judge Fort was a delegate to the national convention at St. Louis, at which McKinley and Hobart were nominated, and, speaking for New Jersey, he placed the name of Garret A. Hobart before the convention. He was also chairman of the committee on credentials at this convention, and presented the majority report for that committee, which read the notorious J. Edwad Addicks, of Delaware, out of the Republican party. Judge Fort's speecres denouncing Addicks and later nominating Hobart gave him a national reputation as an orator and resulted in repeated and frequent demands for his services upon the stump in other States throughout the the union.

Appointed to Supreme Court Bench.

Governor Griggs appointed Mr. Fort judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Essex county in December, 1896, and on May 4, 1900, he was appointeda justice of the Supreme Court by Governor Voorhees. The date of his appointment was the anniversary of the date of his coming to Newark.

Since his appointment to the Supreme bench, Justice Fort has sat in many of the counties of the State, and made many friends in all. He has presided over the courts of Morris, Sussex, Monmouth, Middlesex, Ocean, Union and Hudson counties, and at the present time is the presiding justice in Hudson. While in Monmouth county he directed the movements which drove the gamblers from Long Branch in 1902, and they have never secured a foot hold there since.

In all of his stumping tours Mr. Fort has paid his own expenses, and he has been a liberal contributor to the Republican party for its campaign expenses for many years.

Drew the State's Probation Bill.

Justice Fort was the first man to advocate indeterminate sentences and the probation system in New Jersey, and drew the bill under which the latter is now operating throughout the State. In 188 he made a tour of European prisons under a commission from the United States, and reported upon them upon his return. The idea of probation and indeterminate sentences was such a new one that when Justice Fort ddew the original bill providing for them for the Senate and House he had trouble in getting any one to father it. A hearing was given on the bill and Judge Fort appeared in its behalf, with the result that it passed by unanimous vote in each House with the exception of one man.

Justice Fort removed from Newark to East Orange in 1889, and has lived at 51 Arlington avenue, north, in that city since that time. He has three children, Mrs. Margretta Fort, Franklin W. Fort, a lawyer in Newark, and Leslie R. Fort, editor of the Lakewood Times and Journal. Justice Fort attends the Presbyterian church, and is a trustee of the Munn Avenue church at East Orange, and the Spring Lake Presbyterian church, at which latter place he owns a summer cottage, and spends five months in the year. He was active in St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church for many years when in Newark.

His Private Life.

In his domestic life he is very happy. His home is his delight. It is a typical American home. No one who has ever entered it has failed to get the charm of the delightful hospitality and cheer always there. He is a man of exceptional social qualities, genial, kind and true. No one ever heard him utter an unkind word against any man, nor did any one ever hear an obscene remark or improper story from his lips. He will do a kindness for any one, even at a sacrifice to himself.

He is a man with few recerations. He is devoted to the law and his judicial duties. They have been to him a delight.

He is no respecter of persons: rich or poor approach him with equal ease. He probably knows as many people as any man in the State.

Justice Fort has been president of the Sons of the American Revolution of New Jersey since 1905. He is a member of the American Bar Association and the New York and East Orange Republican Club and the Essex Club.

SOMERSET P. E. SOCIETY.

Mrs. Emily Williamson Will Open Winter Campaign October 7.

The Public Education Society of Somerset County at Somerville has organized for its winter campaign, and will resume its regular meetings Monday night in the assembly room of the public school here. The speaker will be Mrs. Emily Williamson, of Elizabeth.

Officers have been elected as follows: President, James L. Griggs; vice president, John E. Wehrly; secretary and treasurer, Miss R. Anna Miller; hygienic committee, Dr. Mary E. Gaston, Dr. A. Longstreet Stillwell, Dr. J. P. Hecht, Dr. F. M. McConaughy; domestic sciences, the Rev. Dr. E. A. Woods, Mrs. E. C. Read, Mrs. Louis P. Baston, Mrs. A. L. Canfield and Miss Helen Ballentine.

Samuel Isaacs Arrested.

Samuel Isaacs, of West Third street, was arraigned in the city court this morning, on a charge preferred by Mrs. Sarah Abrams, wife of the shoe dealer, who accuses him of using profane language and with being disorderly. Judge Runyon laid the case over to allow the principals a chance to marshal witnesses and bring testimony to straighten the tangle that showed in the hearing.

Miss Jennie Lea Broech, of Rutherford, is visiting relatives in this city.

JUSTICE FORT UNANIMOUSLY NAMED FOR GOVERNOR BY REPUBLICANS, RESIGNS FROM BENCH AND IN STIRRING SPEECH ACCEPTS NOMINATION

Dramatic Climax When He Hands Resignation to the Governor and Boldly Outlines His Attitude.

COLBY IN THE SADDLE

Standard Bearer for Home Rule, Though Plank Was Kept Out of Platform—A Convention of Thrilling Incidents

Justice John Franklin Fort was named for Governor by the Republicans yesterday afternon, after one of the liveliest conventions the party in this State has ever held. He developed a surprising, if not altogether unexpected, strength on an informal ballot, and on the formal roll call only 115½ of the 1,157 votes in the convention were cast against him. Of those, 110½ went to Sheriff Frank H. Sommer, of Essex, candidate of the New Idea men, and the remaining five to Justice Mahlon Pitney, regarded as one of the strong candidates the day before.

Fort's overwhelming strength on the informal ballot was not counted upon by his most sanguine supporter. The delegations had been left free from "pressure," and not the faintest suggestion of slate-making was over the gathering. Fort sentiment gathered strength all morning, and by noon he was the leading candidate. Still, none of the delegations had heard anything like the sound of a whip, there was a strong undercurrent of feeling for Pitney, and Vivian Lewis gained in adherents and second-choice sentiment all the time. The "up-in-the-air" feeling resulted in a curious state of uncertainty on the part of the delegates and the observers in the convention hall when Chairman Griggs' gavel called the body back to business after recess. Predictions of Fort's nomination were freely made, but all the forecasters hastily added that if he didn't "get it" on the first ballot he wouldn't "get it" at all. Which means that up to the very minute of the voting none of them were sure that the Essex jurist was to be the honored candidate.

The result of the informal ballot made the doubts appear ridiculous. The votes piled up for him steadily, and the nomination became an assured thing in short order. On that ballot Fort received 753 votes. All but six and a half votes of the Hudson delegation were for him. Essex gave him 121. Union gave him 48½ at first thought, then changed and cast 67 votes for him. In that first thought, Plainfield stood, 3 for Fort, 6 for Lewis, 2½ for Sommer and 1½ for Pitney.

Lewis proved to be the closest contender, mustering 179¾ votes. Sommer's 120 put him next, and Pitney finished a bad last with 96¾. On the formal ballot all the delegates except the Colbyites swung for Fort.

There was a moment of hesitation and the delegates waited tensely for a motion from the Essex independents. "Get in line, Essex," came the cry from the balcony, and the call swelled. Senator Colby went hurriedly about his supporters urging them to do the graceful, the politic thing. He had some trouble, apparently, but his words were heeded, and suddenly Judge Jones, of East Orange, brought a mighty cheer from the delegates by moving that Fort's nomination be made unanimous.

The nomination spread the balm of harmony and enthusiasm over what had been a most acrimonious convention. From 3 o'clock until long past 5 the Colbyites and the supporters of the liberal Sunday, headed by Carl Lentz, of Essex, had fought hard to force their ideas into the platform. Neither the Essex idea nor the Colbyite extremist planks framed by George L. Record met with the arpproval of the majority of the delegates, and there were a good many of them who allowed their disapproval to be heard without waiting for parliamentary routine. Major Lentz was howled at, and Record had an uphill time making himself heard. The latter's speech brought forth ademonstration speech brought forth a demonstration from all restraint but for the unyielding mastery of the chairman. The delegates interrupted Record

WANT MARSHAL DEPOSED.

Nearly 200 Signers of Petition Asking the Removal of Marshal Jackson.

Rutherford, Sept. 20.—A petition containing nearly 200 names has been forwarded to the borough council, asking that Marshal Philander H. Jackson be removed. As the appointment is made by the mayor, the chief executive, Andrew H. Brinkerhoff, the council has ordered the petition placed in his hands for action.

The petition cites that on a certain day last June the marshal used his club on Henry Leire, of East Rutherford. It contends that its use was unnecessary and an outrage on the part of the policeman. It relates that the man's head was laid open as a result of the clubbing and that it required a doctor to put several stitches in the wound to close it up. It concludes that the prisoner made no resistance at the time of the arrest and that the conduct of the marshal was such that he should no longer be a peace officer, as a similar action might occur.

Start life afresh. Borrow from us to pay the several you owe and make payments in keeping with your income. By so doing you keep your credit good. Ease up the pressure on yourself and have a chance to "turn around" in other things needed for the family.

An Illustration

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

FOOTBALL.

The Yale football team may be handicapped this season by the loss of three promising players in Burch, Cooney and Brides. Bob Burch, who got back yesterday, is in the hospital tonight, threatened with appendicitis, and it may be necessary to operate. Cooney and Brides are back in their work and have been forbidden to practise with the eleven until they make up the conditions.

Burch was looked on as the best end at Yale last year, but was injured in mid-season and only played part of the time in the big games. He was considered a sure man for the team this fall. Brides, the big guard, was also reasonably sure of his place, while Cooney, the clever centre on the strong freshman team last year, was counted on to fill that important place on the 'varsity.

Sammy Morse, last year's captain, arrived Wednesday to spend a week with the team. It was also announced that Owsley and Shevelin would assist in the coaching this fall. This was joyful news to Yale men. The lack of good backfield men may lead to Tad Jones, the clever quarterback, and Captain Biglow, the All-American tackle, being tried as halfbacks. In this case Dines would probably be first choice for quarter.

Football practise will begin at the Naval Academy tomorrow, most of the members of the team having forfeited a week of their leave to start in at that time. Slingluff, Wright, Northcroft, Leighton, Lange and McCormick, of last year's squad, who are members of the second class, are now in Annapolis, and several likely men have come in with the new fourth class. Spencer, a brother of the captain of last year's eleven, may take his brother's place at halfback. The practise will probably be under Lieutenant Commander Reeves, the head coach, who is expected to reach town by the end of this week. Jack Cates, field coach last year, will return on Monday.

Twenty-nine aspirants for Harvard football honors trotted out on Soldiers' Field yesterday afternoon for the first practise of the season. Only two of the men who played against Yale last November—Captain Parker and Wendell—appeared with the squad, while Crane, the head coach, was also absent. The practise was under the direction of Captain Parker and the assistant coaches, Brown and Leary. It consisted of punting, running down under the ball and passing.

The Princeton football squad held its second practise of the season at University Field yesterday. Owing to the steady downpour of rain, the work of the candidates was exceedingly light. After a short drill in the baseball cage the men had some light work on the field in punting, starting, catching and passing the ball. W. W. Roper, '02, the head coach, was assisted by J. Munn, '06, and ex-Captain Cooney, '07. The squad is unusually small for this time of year, less than thirty men reporting. Captain McCormick has not yet returned to college.

GOLF.

The Baltimore Golf Club is to hold an open tournament on Friday and Saturday, October 18 and 19. Some time ago it was decided to have some sort of a tournament in the fall, and in certain quarters it was believed that the club would handle the metropolitan open championship.

Conditions to govern the coming tournament are rather unusual, in that only amateurs rated at 11 or less on the Metropolitan Golf Association handicap list will be eligible. This, of course, insures a high class field. The reason for limiting it to two days is that the committee believes that it is difficult for a good many of the players to get away from business for three days at a stretch at this time of the year.

The exact details have not as yet been arranged, but it is expected that the players will qualify in eights. This is the same as at Shinnecock. The last important tournament at Baltusrol was the New Jersey State championship, in June.

Now that Baltusrol has announced its fall plans, speculation will be rife as to the fate of the metropolitan open championship. It is generally admitted that it would be a pity to ignore this tournament. The only two held thus far, at Fox Hills and Hollywood, were due to the efforts of private individuals, and the Metropolitan Golf Association did not have to make any outlay. Now the association says it is willing to pay half the expense.

Tomorrow the sixth monthly handicap at eighteen holes medal play will be held at the Dyker Meadow Golf Club. There will be first and second prizes. Another handicap is to be held over the Fort Hamilton links on Saturday, October 5. These will afford the last opportunities to qualify for the club championship.

Many of the leading amateurs of the country have entered for the invitation tournament, which began yesterday at the Morris County Golf Club. They include Jerome D. Travers, of Montclair, the national titleholder; Walter J. Travis, of Garden City; Gilman P. Tiffany, of Powelton, the Hudson River Golf Association champion; Charles G. Macdonald, of Garden City; Findlay S. Douglas, of Nassau; Dwight Partridge, of Bedford; Charles Hitchcock, Jr., of Richmond county, a former intercollegiate champion; Herbert M. Harriman, the first American to win the national title back in 1899; W. T. West, of Princeton; F. Oden Horstman, of Philadelphia; Robert Abbott, of Plainfield; Percy Pyne, 2d, of the home club; H. J. Whigham, of London, and amateur champion of this country in 1896 and 1897; E. S. Knapp, of Westbrook; George T. Brokaw, of Deal, and Oswald Kirkby, of Englewood.

BOWLING.

The Park Club will again be members of the Central Journal Bowling League, and during the latter part of the month a meeting will be called to reorganize the league. The series of games will be started early in October, and among the clubs will be the Park Club, Westfield Club, Elizabeth Club, Cranford Casino, Roselle Casino and Bayonne Boat Club. The usual number of games will be rolled.

TURNED TRICK ON "NEW IDEA."

Places of Summit's Old Guard in G. O. P. Committee Filled by Regulars.

Summit, Sept. 20.—With the retirement this week of Postmaster Alfred M. Jones from membership in the Union county Republican committee the last of the "old guard" who represented this city in shaping the destinies of men and affairs political in Union county will have stepped aside. City Solicitor Corra N. Williams, who was regarded as one of the "powers that be" in local and county Republican affairs, was the first to tender his resignation after the inauguration of the New Idea movement here. Then came the withdrawal of Dr. William H. Lawrence after his election to the office of sheriff, and now comes the announcement of the retirement of Postmaster Jones.

While the unsophisticated citizen might be led to believe these had returned to the field of political inactivity, careful observation, however, discloses the fact that this city will not be represented in the county committee by any of the followers of the New Idea movement, but on the contrary the retiring leaders have quietly seen to it that their places are filled by faithful and ardent machine operators.

John W. Clift succeeded Mr. Williams, City Clerk J. Edward Rowe was elected without a contest to replace Sheriff Lawrence and Seaman L. Wright will fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Jones' retirement.

In the selection of the new men the "old guard," it would seem, turned a trick on the local New Idea men, while the latter were permitted to name a couple of the councilmanic candidates and one or two delegates to the city, State and county convention, they paid no attention, apparently, to breaking into the county committee, upon which the "old guard" had eyes. The naming of the candidates for the council by the Colby followers is regarded by the Regulars as a master stroke in gaining support for Councilman Franklin in his fight for election as mayor, and City Clerk Rowe, who will be named at the city convention as a candidate for the office he now occupies and to which he was appointed to fill an unexpired term.

PLANS CHURCH IMPROVEMENTS.

Presbyterians of Hackettstown to Spend $1,200 on the Edifice.

Hackettstown, Sept. 20.—The congregation of the First Presbyterian church held an adjourned parish meeting in the chapel last night to further consider repairs to the chapel building and receive estimates. The contract to repaint the exterior was awarded to R. V. Kinsey for $147, the church to furnish the material. The contract to redecorate the interior walls and repaint the woodwork was given to Skinner & Beck on a bid of $349. The bid of the Hackettstown Electric Light Company to install a new system of lighting, at a cost of $106.75, was accepted, and the committee empowered to act. New sanitary conveniences will be also installed at a cost of $100.

The heating plant needs repairing at a cost of $50, besides other minor repairs. The cost of rebuilding the part destroyed by fire on the evening of July 8 last will be about $300. In all from $1,200 to $1,500 will be expended in modernizing and repairing. Work will be begun at once.

Found Colored Man Under Bed.

Red Bank, Sept. 20.—Amos Harges, colored, 19 years old, was committed to the county jail last night on a charge preferred by Henry C. Taylor, a Middletown farmer. Mr. Taylor recently hired a Hungarian girl as cook and laundress. On Tuesday night when the girl went to her room to retire she was startled to see the bare feet of Harget sticking out from under her bed. She did not utter a sound, but retracing her steps went downstairs and informed Mr. Taylor, who hurried to the village hotel and asked Albert White, an employe there, to help him capture the man. The negro proved to be Harget, and he offered no resistance. He did not give his reason for being in the room. Harget had been in Mr. Taylor's employ about three months. He was brought to Red Bank, and Justice Sniffen committed him to Freehold jail to await the action of the grand jury.

FORT NAMED FOR GOVERNOR

time after time, and the chairman finally arose with grim determination showing in every line. He was there to see that the spirit of a Republican convention was observed, he told the disturbers, and he would hold the convention in session until Mr. Record had finished, if it took all night. The noisy ones recognized the master, and quieted down. There was no more trouble.

The fight on the platform was bitter and wearing. After it was all over, the platform as the Resolutions Committee presented it, with a simple pledge to maintain the needed excise legislation that had been accomplished, was adopted. Heat and excitement marked the debate. On the question of the adoption of the Essex idea, which was the Colby proposition for the local control of the excise question by vote, the convention was polled, resulting in 537 votes for and 619 against it.

When the nomination had been accomplished, the delegates were weary, and the warm work of the afternoon had left its tang of bitterness here and there. Then came Fort, summoned by the convention, and his coming swept all the weariness and bitterness away. His first action after the roar of greeting had subsided was dramatic in the extreme. Placing his hand in his pocket, he walked across the stage without a word, bent toward a box, withdrew his hand, and placed a plain envelope in the grasp of Governor Stokes. Then, after a pause, the nominee spoke:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention—I have in your presence handed my resignation to His Excellency Governor Stokes, and, having laid aside the honorable office of justice of the Supreme Court, I am now ready to take up the duties you have cast upon me.

"I stand before you with a profound sense of the honor done me by your choice of me as your candidate. For ten years I have been out of politics, and during that ten years I have not even attended a political meeting. I come, then, much as a raw recruit to your ranks, ready to learn again some of the old ways and to get back into the old lines of political action.

"I can say that this nomination came to me without personal solicitation of any kind. If there is any one in this convention hall who will rise in his place and say I have ever asked him to vote for me, or that I have ever asked any other man to ask him to vote for me, I will decline the nomination."

There was such a tumult of applause at this that the candidate was forced to wait for it to subside before resuming.

"More than that," he finally went on, "I do not have to thank any man for the nomination. I stand free and independent before this gathering—as free and independent as any man in New Jersey. No faction do I represent. I am unwilling to stand as the representative of anything but the grand old Republican party.

"At this time there is a good deal of independence abroad. Independence is a good thing and every man has a right to hold and express his own opinions. If I am elected I pledge my word to every man within hearing of my voice today that I will know no man, no individual, no faction; but I will know solely the party as a party standing for the people.

"It is right that you should know something at this time as to what I believe. I have not yet read your platform—I haven't had time. But I am willing to take something on faith from the Republican party.

"I tell you now that if I disagree with anything it contains I will say so frankly. I think that what is in the platform is right. I don't know whether it is in the platform, but I believe in direct nominations at the primaries.

"I believe in an authoritative expression of the popular will in the selection of United States Senators. This cannot be made obligatory under the constitution, as it is at present, but if there is an expression of the will of the people in some way at the primaries or the election it must certainly be as obligatory on the Legislature as if it were written in the constitution.

"I stand for an effective and efficient civil service in our State, and favor a law that will bring this about.

"I believe with all my heart in the doctrine of home rule."

There had been applause at the statement of each of the candidate's beliefs, but the home rule declaration was the signal for an outburst that was remarkable. Essex county's delegates arose as one man and cheered and cheered again. They waved their handkerchiefs and shouted their approval in every key. The rest of the convention seemed relieved, too, and joined in to make the demonstration even more exciting.

"I believe that each municipality should control in the matter of its police regulations," the speaker went on in outlining what were taken to be views on the excise question.

"I think I can say, in view of the position I have occupied, that I am opposed to vice and crime and criminals in every form. The proverb of Solomon is as true today as it was when it was written thousands of years ago: 'Right exalteth a nation and sin is a reproach to a people.'

"I am not going to talk about railroad taxation now. It is too long a subject to take up here.

"Recently, while I was in Europe, some investigations were made. I do not know what was the actual result of these investigations. I have not had time to look them up since I returned. I have had lots of hard work to do in the last few weeks. But I do want to say that it appears to me that the Governor of the State of New Jersey should be more responsible for the management of State institutions than he has been permitted to be in the past.

"The Governor should be a member of every State board and comission. There should be a law like that passed through the efforts of Hughes, in New York, that would make the Governor, with these large powers that I have suggested, do his duty or be held accountable.

"This is the opening battle of the great campaign that will begin a year from now. This is a skirmish, and we are taking our place in the lead. I do not care whether the fight goes on under the leadership of Taft or Hughes, of Fairbanks or Cannon; let the battle go forward so that the triumph of 1907 in New Jersey shall blaze the way for the greatest victory by the greatest party in this, the grandest country that the world has ever known."

It was the nominees' first political utterance of any sort since he accepted apointment as Common Pleas Court judge ten years ago.

After it was all over and the delegates were swarming about him to grasp his hand, Sheriff Frank H. Sommer, of Essex, one of the central figures in the great body of men, and a defeated candidate for the nomination, assured the nominee, as he had the delegates, of his hearty support for the ticket.

Senator Everett Colby, of Essex, and the Sheriff, the men who are the leaders of the New Idea wing of the party, accepted the invitation of Judge Fort to tour the State and speak in his behalf. Mayor Mark M. Fagan and Colonel Samuel D. Dickinson, of Jersey City, leaders of the warring Hudson county factions, were apparently equally pleased and ready to support the candidates and platform.

Senator Ackerman, County Chairman Smith and Mayor Fisk were well pleased over the result of the convention. Mr. Smith declared that the party had picked a winner and that the platform was ideal. These were the sentiments of Mr. Fisk. Mr. Ackerman shared their belief.

"The convention," said the senator, "was absolutely free from any boss rule. The right of each delegate was fairly and honestly recognized in every instance. It was a convention of free speech. At times the situation was dramatic. It was a representative gathering of the very best elements in the Republican party. The platform may be said to be conservatively progressive and in accord with the advanced ideas of the people. The legislative record of the Republican party indicates that the pledges will be made a positive performance.

"Hon. J. Franklin Fort will, I am sure, prove to be an ideal candidate. He will most certainly be elected. His nomination has brought harmony out of seeming discord, and it was delightful to see the many different factions at the close of the convention all enthusiastically singing the words of the refrain, 'We are a united party and we won't vote wrong.'"

FOR THE COMFORT OF CHILDREN.

Children's shoes are a bug-bear to most shoe dealers because they don't go about it right. They don't like children to start with and they don't appreciate the requirements of little feet. Here it is different. We believe if we start in with the youngsters that we are pretty sure of holding the trade until they have youngsters of their own to shoe. This has been our experience and that is why we shall always continue to give unusually strong values in this department. Although the margin of profit is practically wiped out we believe it is better to charge it up to "good will." That is why you always find here sturdier, better made and more thoroughly dependable footwear for the little folks than you can get in other places. That's why we do the Children's Shoe business of the town.

Our "Steel Shod" shoe at $1.40 to $2.00 will please any youngster and the economy in buying them will please every parent. If your children aren't wearing "Van Arsdale's Steel Shod" buy a pair next time. They have been the solution of many a family's shoe troubles.

REPUBLICANS PLATFORM

Planks As Framed By Delegates at State Convention at Trenton Yesterday.

ALL ARE CLEAN CUT

Unequivocal Declaration of Principles and Ideals Upon Which Fort Will Make Canvas.

The Republican party again presents to the people of New Jersey an account of its stewardship and offers its record of faithful execution of pledges as a guarantee of future performances.

We indorse the administration of President Roosevelt, as courageous and patriotic in its high-minded, intelligent, earnest and successful efforts to promote the welfare of all the people. Continued prosperity has been maintained in every branch of industry, and the position of the nation at home and abroad is stronger and better than at any time in its history.

We also indorse the wise, progressive and successful administration of Governor E. C. Stokes.

The Republican party came into power after a long period of misrule, during which the State government had been administered in a spirit of partisan greed; actual dishonesty had marked many transactions; the State's money had been expended without authority of law, necessitating a diversion of the school fund to save the party then in power from the odium of a State tax; political power had been perpetrated by the creation of partisan officeholders, and by legislative gerrymanders; by thec orruption of the ballot and by the whoesale pardon of convicted criminals.

To remedy these abuses and rescue the State from misrule and disgrace, the people called upon the Republican party. Its fourteen years' record is a story of faithful performance of this duty and of increasingly high standards of good government.

Republican administrations have pursued a consistent policy of advancement and reform.

Republican legislation drove the gamblers' vice from our State and pledged her constitution to its perpetual banishment.

It inaugurated a system of publicity in appropriations. It has inaugurated a policy of using the surplus of the treasury for the payment of local school taxes.

In the fulfillments of its pledges to give a fearless and thorough consideration to thel long standing problems of equal taxation as between railroads and other property, it has passed the laws declared valid by the courts of the State, which have increased the revenue of our municipalities and raised the State's income from less than $1,000,000 to over $3,500,000 per annum, $2,500,000 of which is by law distributed to the local taxing districts for school purposes.

The Republican party has inaugurated a policy of taxation of corporate franchises and by which the State annually collects a large sum for distribution to the taxing districts. We favor such systems as will compel franchises to bear a just share of the burden of taxation as compared with corporate and individual property.

A Republican Senate has twice passed a civil service reform act which has been defeated by the present Democratic House of Assembly. We pledge ourselves to the enactment of a comprehensive civil service measure in the interst of higher efficiency in administrative affairs.

The Legislature has passed resolutions favoring an amendment to the federal constitution of the election of United States Senators by popular vote; and until such amendment has been adopted, we favor the enactment of a law, for expression in some authorative way by the voter of his choice for United States Senator.

We believe in the separation of State and municipal elections and to that end favor a constitutional amendment providing that national and State elections shall be held in even years and municipal elections in odd years.

We have enactedl egislation for the reform of our petit jury system, and we pledge a continuance of our efforts for a better system of selecting grand juries.

Our primary law—a Republican enactment—has done away with violence and fraud at the primaries and has enabled voters to express their choice and exercise their will in the nominating conventions. We pledge ourselves to such amendments of this act as will simplify and improve our primary system. We favor the modification and simplification of the present primary law in the respects in which it is now cumbersome and intricate; and we believe that the most effective method to accomplish this purpose is a direct primary for candidates for all municipal and county offices, including Senators and Assemblymen, and we favor such an amendment of the primary law as will accomplish this end, with proper provisions for judicial review and recount.

The party has already undertaken the question of supervision of public utility corporations, with a view of increasing the efficiency, safety and economy of service in the interests of the public. We pledge ourselves to enact a law providing for a commission with ample jurisdiction and powers to enable it to regulate such corporations effectively and authoritatively.

The Republican party has accomplished needed reform in excise legislation and pledges itself to maintenance of it.

The policy of State aid for good roads was inaugurated by the Republican party, and this policy has placed New Jersey first in the nation in its road system. The Republican party stands pledged to its continuance.

We favor the pending amendment of the constitution providing for the creation of Assembly districts, passed by the present Legislature upon the recommendation of a Republican Governor.

We favor a law providing that all moneys collected for or belonging to the State shall be paid into the State treasury, and that no disbursements of State funds shall be made except upon the audit and warrants of the Comptroller.

We believe in simplicity of government and we favor consolidation of all departments and commissions of similar character, and regret the failure of the Democratic House of Assembly to co-operate with the Senate to this end.

We pledge ourselves to correct any and all abuses that may be found in any State department or institution, and to hold all officials to a strict accountability for faithful public service.

We call the attention of the people to the incompetency of the Democratic House of Assembly, to the disgraceful scenes that marked its proceedings, to its absolute control by the lobby, to its refusal to pass laws for the improvement of the civil service, to pass laws for the reform of the grand jury system, to permit the submission to the public of th equestion of separation of the State and municipal elections, and to the reform measures passed by the Republican Senate.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Under the auspices of the Baraca and Philathea Bible clases of Faith chapel, a social will be held Tuesday night at 8o'clock. The affair will be held in the new addition to the chapel, recently completed.

Among those who will attend the ordination service of Andrew Townsend in Christ's church, Elizabeth, tomorrow morning at o'clock will be Rev. and Mrs. George A. Warner, Mrs. J. O. Stevens, Miss Florence Stevens and Miss Louise Davis, of the Church of the Holy Cross. There will also be a large representation from the Church of the Heavenly Rest, where Mr. Townsend is the minister in charge.

Gym Classes at Y. W. C. A.

The registration for gynasium classes at the Young Women's Christian Association has increased to such an extent that several new classes will be formed. A class for children between the ages of 10 and 14 years will meet Friday afternoons at 3:30 o'clock. Another afternoon class will be held Mondays. These are in addition to the classes scheduled for Tuesday and Friday afternoon. The evening classes will be as announced, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. Registration for any of these classes should be made as soon as possible, as they will open October 14.

—All kinds of vegetable that are now in season may be found at Neuman Brothers. Tomorrow morning they will have a full line on sale.

STATE C. E. CONVENTION

Committee in Charge of Program Has Done Its Work.

TO BE HELD ON OCT. 9

Notable Speakers Among Those Who Will Take Part in New Jersey Gathering.

The committee arranging the program for the twenty-first annual New Jersey Christian Endeavor convention, to be held in the Peddie Memorial Baptist church, Newark, Oct. 10 and 11, has completed its work. The speakers secured by the committee after six months' work are among the leaders in Endeavor activity, and include Miss Grace L. Jones, superintendent of the New York junior department; Rev. Dr. William Patterson, pastor of Bethany Presbyterian church, Philadelphia; S. D. Gordon, the author of "Quiet Talks on Prayer," and who has spoken this year at the Northfield and Sagamore Beach conferences; Bishop Alexander Walters, the Eastern leader in colored church activity; Rev. Dr. John F. Carson, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn; Rev. Dr. Frederick J. Stanley, secretary of the American Sabbath Union; Rev. Dr. C. D. Case, pastor of the Hanson Place Baptist church, Brooklyn; Rev. Dr. C. H. Tyndall, of Mt. Vernon, and Rev. Dr. John W. Phillips, of Binghamton, N. Y.

As the State union becomes of age at this convention an added interest is being taken in the coming gathering by New Jersey Endeavors. A new feature this year will be a conference of district secretaries and county and local union workers, to be held on the morning of the opening day. The State secretary, Miss Ida B. Stephens, of Hackettstown, will be in charge of the secretaries of the New York State Endeavor Union. John L. Clements will take a prominent part in the conference. Among the topics to be discussed at this conference are: "How Shall the City Union Be Constituted" "The Executive Committee and Its Functions," "The Congress' Plan; Meetings, Members, Methods," "Committees; Lookout, Prayer-meeting, Junior, Intermediate, Evangelistic, Bible Study, Prison, Fresh Air, Correspondence," "Some Secrets of Successful Committee Work," "The Pastors' Advisory Board; Is It Essential?" "The Country Union; Its Peculiar Problems," "Is a Congress Possible? If Not, What Should Take Its Place?" "Are Sectional Divisions Advisable?" "Its Intervisitation an Advantage?" "Are Rallies Practicable?" "Can Department Work Be Made a Success?"

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

There is one place where you are certain of getting the best anthracite coal at lowest prices and that is of V. W. Nash, Sr. Place your order now.

When you trade with John A. Koch, the Watchung avenue butcher, you always get the best meat, the kind that gives satisfaction. Prices reasonable.

George F. Brown, of Somerset street, deals only in high class real estate when selling and leasing, and he also represents the best fire and accident insurance companies.

Patrons of E. B. Maynard's barber shop on North avenue, are always sure of a first class shave, haircut or shampoo, while the electric massage is constantly growing in popularity.

SAY ALLEGED SWINDLER IS ALSO A DESERTER.

Elizabeth, Sept. 20.—George W. Robinson, accused of being a check swindler, who was caught here a couple of days ago, according to the police. His real name is George W. Fulcher, and his home is at Nashville, Tenn. The Prisoner made a confession yesterday to Chief of Police Tenney, and said he is 24 years old and single. He left Nashville, he said, about a year ago, and came East, where he enlisted in the regular army and was stationed at Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island.

He deserted two months ago and then went to Bayonne where, the police assert, he began his swindling operations and buncoed a number of tradesmen there and in Staten Island. From Bayonne he came here. He is a fine penman.

Fulcher was arraigned yesterday in police court before Judge Mahon, and several Elizabeth storekeepers appeared and preferred complaints against him. He was committed to the county jail to await the grand jury's action.

For State Normal School.

Trenton, Sept. 20.—Bids for the erection of a boiler room and hoisting plant at the State Normal School at Montclair Heights were received Tuesday in the office of the State superintendent of schools, Charles J. Baxter. The bids were for the various parts of the building.

Among the bidders were the structural iron workers, stone masons and brickwork, carpenter work and painting. The bidders were E. H. Ruxler & Co., Baker, Smith & Co., Stevens & Co., New York; Thorn-Filly Company, George Tobin, Ernest & Cook Company, Fred Kilgus.

Come Now to the Hallet & Davis Piano Store's Closing Out Sale.

The entire stock comprising many styles of many high-grade pianos will be closed out soon. Over half the stock sold last week; balance will go quickly.

Pianos Are Going at Nearly Half Price.

Your own terms, just about as you want to pay will be accepted. Don't miss this sale. Come tomorrow while a good selection remains.

OPEN EVENINGS, No. 170 EAST FRONT ST.

But a few days more. If the people of Plainfield who are in need of a piano or organ could realize just what I am doing here in closing out this stock, comprising the finest makes and styles of pianos, the unprecedented low prices I am making, the extremely easy terms I am offering, there would not be an instrument left in the house by Monday night; all would be snapped up quickly.

It will pay any one largely to buy a piano at this sale, even though they do not really need one for the next two or three years, for many of these pianos are being closed out at prices lower than wholesale cost, and on easy terms at that. Therefore, I would like as many Plainfield people here on Saturday as possible.

You will never regret this call, even though you do not purchase, the prices and terms will be a revelation to you.

EXTREMELY EASY PAYMENTS.

Many a family who have long desired a piano would grasp this opportunity if they could only see how easy are the terms and how low the prices. If you can spare $1.25 a week or even $1.00 a week, and from that up to $6 to $10 a month, you can come and have a piano sent right out to your home and be getting the use of it—learning to play while you save the money, little by little, to complete the payment, and you can expect the fairest kind of fair and lenient treatment while you are paying for the instrument.

STOCK COMPRISES BEST MAKES.

At no time in our long business career have we been able to offer such a grand array of good pianos and organs and at such remarkable price reductions. The stock consists of such well known makes as Hallet & Davis, Kimball, Conway, Bowen, Wellman, and many others. Most of these are new, some are slightly used.

ALL MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES.

Every instrument marked in plain figures—one price to all, the marked price. Cash or time payments the same, the only difference being a small interest on deferred payments.

BARGAINS IN NEW UPRIGHTS.

There are several New York made uprights left, in plain cases, designs which retail regularly for $250 to $275, sale price $137 to $157. Terms, $10 down and $1.25 weekly, or $5.00 monthly.

Standard grade uprights, worth in the regular retail way $300, $325, to $375, to close from $178 to $237. Terms, $10 to $25 down, and $6 to $8 monthly.

Highest class of Cabinet Uprights, comprising various fine makes, usually retailed at from $400, $450 to $550, to close out at $287, $317 to $343 and slightly upwards for the more elaborate cases. Terms, $15 to $25 down, and $8 to $10 monthly.

BARGAINS IN USED UPRIGHTS.

Used uprights to close from $95 to $150. Terms to suit. These used pianos are going quickly.

OUT OF TOWN PEOPLE SHOULD CALL.

People can afford to come a long distance to attend this sale if an instrument is needed for the home.

If you can't call, write at once for list of bargains, terms, etc. Will send pianos anywhere to be paid for on the easy-payment plan.

Store open evenings until 9 o'clock to accommodate those who cannot call during the day.

SIRES AND SONS.

Senator Heyburn, of Idaho weighs more than any other Senator.

Lord Euston, the distinguished son of the aged Duke of Grafton, is never lost in a crowd. He is six feet four inches in height.

Horace Goodrich Brown, of Collinsville, Conn., rode a bicycle until he was nearly 85 years old. He has been in the employ of one firm for sixty years.

Barnum and Bailey are in charge of the Burlington (Vt.) railroad station. Barnum is agent, and Bailey is the train dispatcher. The have never, however, been in the circus business.

The only surviving veteran of the Mexican war in Vermont is John Merrill Goodwin, of Ryebate. His four great-grandfathers served in the Revolutionary war and his father in the war of 1812.

Major Paymaster Eugene Coffin, of Manila, has had his left arm amputated, the result of infection from the handling of money in paying troops. He is a veteran of the Civil War and a member of the McKinley negligent.

The Duke of Devonshire has seven stately homes—six in England and one in Ireland—each of them fit for the reception of a king and not one of which, as he confessed the other day, he has yet lived long enough in to explore thoroughly.

The languid grace and philosophic claim which distinguished Mr. Balfour in the House of Commons never desert him, even in the stress of golfing. Even when he is badly bunkered his strongest ejaculation is said to be "Botheration!" or "This is indeed shocking!"

John Fritz, ironmaster and inventor, famous for his perfection of armor plate processes, celebrated the eighty-fifth anniversary of his birth at his home in Bethlehem, Pa., August 21. He began life as a blacksmith in 1838 and in his long career has been identified with almost every important step in the process of making iron and steel.

Thomas Read, who was orderely for Major Robert E. Lee of the Fourth Infantry during the Mexican war, is still living in Minneapolis at the age of 82. Captain Ulysses S. Grant was quartermaster of the regiment, and the veteran Read delights in reminiscences of the two officers who subsequently became opposing commanders in the Civil war.

FASHIONS LATEST IDEAS.

In the very newest neckwear, fagoting is applied in many different ways. Fagoted bands are much used to outline shaped collars of heavy Irish or cluny lace.

The elastic belt, imitating pompadour ribbon, is a novelty. The pink ones with flowers in dull pastel tints are particularly lovely, especially when worn with a gold buckle.

Petticoats are lovelier and more fluffy than ever before. Fine hand embroidery and masses of ruffles are the dainties that can be worn with evening gowns.

There are very attractive tailored shirtwaists that are worn with a white tailored skirt, made with turn down collar and turnback cuffs, embroidered in a tiny design and scalloped on the edges.

The decided color of the moment is green instead of Nattier or Copenhagen blue. Green in dark emerald, lettuce, spinach or onion peel shades are the most popular. Bluish-green is very fashionable for some gowns.

SOMETHING NEW.

Quite the daintiest prettiest things imaginable are the feathered hatpins that have arrived recently from Paris.

They are shown in endless variety. Humming birds offer themselves as particularly charming and adaptable, owing to the varied character of their plumage, and there are also some dear little peacocks in realistic colorings, and a distinguished note is shown in black crows.

So fascinating are these feathery hatpins that they almost amount to trimmings.

WOMAN AND HER POCKET.

Why cannot female ingenuity devise some receptacle, approved of by fashion, asks the Onlooker, which will enable its wearer to bestow a small article, say a penny or a railway ticket or a powder puff, with some degree of certainty of being able to find it when wanted at five minutes' notice?

When one is waiting at the train gate, the inevitable flurried female is sure to steam up, who, on being asked to show her ticket, fumbles about in an overcrowded reticule, almost disrobes to reach an inaccessible pocket, and in the end discovers that she has mislaid it between the palm of her hand and her glove, which has to be removed laboriously.

The time wasted may make all the difference between catching and losing an express.

A HAT HINT.

Hats may be renovated by dipping a piece of black material in a little liquir ammonia poured into a small basin of cold water and gently sponging the hats all over. They need not be made really wet. Hang in a warm place and brush occasionally as they dry. You can almost fancy you have new hats.

Doctors in Germany.

In Germany if a doctor is wanted suddenly in the night, instead of flying round in a cab or rushing wildly from house to house, one goes to the nearest emergency station and fetches one of several doctors who are always on night duty in their turn.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs Christian Harris, aged 44, of Elizabeth, N. J., is the mother of twenty-six children. There are three pairs of twins.

Mrs. Ida Webster, of Pratt county, Kan., last year harvested 8,000 bushels of wheat and 3,000 bushels of corn from the 800 acres she owns. Every acre of this was cultivate under her supervision.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., is a petite, piquant young woman with a slightly retrousse nose, large dark blue eyes, masses of wavy dark brown hair and has a pink and white complexion. She usually affects enormous picture hats.

Mrs. Emily R. Lincoln has been pointed by Governor Hughes to succeed her late husband, George I. Lincoln, as New York State agent of the Onondaga Indians. She is also postmistress for the tribe and superintendent of the Iroquois Indian school.

Mme. Patti speaks Italian, Spanish, Russian, German, French and Portuguese perfectly, and of course her English is faultless. Her memory is prodigious, her repertory consisting of more than eighty operas, of which she knows every detail by heart, cadenzas and words included.

Frances Bradley Storr is a little Doncasted child preacher who is electrifgying Yorkshire just as Evan Roberts roused Wales. She is the 12-year-old daughter of a working woman, who is at present the police court mistress.

Cocoa.

Happily there is one beverage, says Table Talk, that children love dearly that may be given them without question—cocoa. It is so rich in nourishment if made as it should be, with milk, that it ranks as a food rather than a drink and is particularly useful in nourishing a child who dislikes milk by itself.

Brilliant Hair.

Our ancestors, the Saxons, dyed their hair blue, green or orange, according to taste.

FARMERS EARN MILLIONS

Wonderful Change in Their Financial Condition in This Country.

PAYING OFF MORTGAGES

Demand for Cotton Growing Rapidly, Making Low Prices Impossible.

"Notwithstanding the fears in the early summer that the long, cold spring would bring disaster to the crops," says the Manufacturers' Record, "it is now assured that once more nature will bless this country with abundant harvests. It is true that the phenomenal yield of corn and wheat last year may not be quite equaled, but it is also true that the output will exceed the average of recent years, and at the same time the increase in the value of farm products is likely to far more than offset the decline in the aggregate yield. There may be a decrease in wheat of possibly 75,000,000, but with the price more than 20 cents a bushel above the corresponding time last year there ought to be a net increase of $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 in the value of the wheat crop over that of 1906. With an increase in the price of corn and cotton the falling off in these crops will likewise be doubtless offset by their higher values. Thus the farmers of the country are once more to be blessed with a vast income—an income so great as compared with five or six years ago that it is difficult to comprehend the magnitude of the gain.

"The value of farm products in different years has been as follows:

Years.
1880	$2,212,000,000
1890	2,466,000,000
1900	4,717,000,000
1905	6,415,000,000
1906	6,794,000,000
1907	*7,000,000,000

*Estimated.

"These figures bring out several remarkable facts. Between 1880 and 1890 there was a gain in the value of farm products of only $254,000,000. Between 1890 and 1900 there was a gain of almost exactly ten times as much, or $2,250,000,000. But possibly the most striking fact in this remarkable exhibit of the increasing prosperity of the farmers is that the gain in the last seven years between 1900 and 1907 of $2,283,000,000 is only 9 per cent. less than the total gain of twenty years between 1880 and 1900. The increase in the last seven years of $2,283,000,000 is a gain of nearly 50 per cent. in that tmie. This gain in seven years is almost equal to the total value of the farm products of the country in 1890. In the latter year the per capita production of all engaged in agriculture was $287, almost exactly the same as in 1880, while at the present time the per capita of all engaged in agriculture is about $600.

"Under these remarkable conditions we can readily understand the wonderful change which has taken place in the financial condition of the farmers of the entire country. Burdened as the West was ten years ago with farm mortgages, as the South was until 1902 or 1903, both sections are now to a very large extent free from such indebtedness, the aggregate of farm loans probably being smaller than at any time since 1905. The prosperity of the farmers is seen not only in the paying off of hundreds of millions of farm mortgages and in the building of better homes, but also in the heavy deposits in the country banks throughout the West and South.

"Every banker in all the agricultural regions of the country has been impressed during the past few years with the great increase in the deposits of farmers, and in many portions of the South a large proportion of the deposits in the country banks are made up of surplus accumulations of the agricultural classes. With such fundamentally sound conditions it is scarcely possible, however unwise may be the anti-corporation legislation of the day, for the country to again sink into the depths of panicky times such as we have had in the past. So far as the South is concerned, it is quite safe to count that this section will receive for its cotton and cottonseed an aggregate of $800,000,000.

"The world's demand for cotton has been growing at such a rapid pace that we are not likely to see low prices for a long time to come, if ever again; and whether this year's crop fulfils the estimate of the bulls or the bears, the price will doubtless be so regulated by market conditions as to give the great total of $800,000,000. Of this sum Europe will probably pay into the South to meet its bill for cotton at least $500,000,000, and with such conditions there must of necessity be great business activity."

LOW SCORES IN ANNUAL INVITATION TOURNAMENT

ROBERT ABBOTT AND DUDLEY H. BARROWS PLAY BRILLIANT GAME.

W. D. Vanderpool, of the home club, had the distinction of leading a "classy" field in the eighteen-hole medal play qualifying round of the annual invitation tournament which began yesterday on the links of the Morris County Golf Club. He returned a 76, beating the tournament record by a stroke.

Extra hole matches furnished plenty of excitement during the first round. One of these had Travers and F. R. Upton, Jr., of Baltusrol, for the principals. They were all square at the turn, and when Upton won the sixteenth hole the latter stood 1 up. He missed a short put on the next green, which enabled thec hampion to square the match. They halved the hole in 4, and the nineteenth in similar figures, but Travers won with a 3 at the next green.

The other twenty-hole affair resulted in a victory for A. A. Swords, of the home club, at the expense of George T. Brokaw. The best match from a scoring point of view was the 74, by Robert Abbott, of the Plainfield Country Club, the Deal winner, who defeated Charles Hitchcock, Jr., a former intercollegiate titleholder, who made his first tournament appearance in four years. Abbott won by 3 up and 2 to play.

Dudley H. Barrows, of the Plainfield Country Club, and Princeton, made a ne score, finishing second among the first sixteen with a score of 42, 35-37, one stroke higher than Vanderpool. Robert Abbott finished twelfth, with a score of 42, 40-82.

In the first round for the Thomas cup, Robert Abbott beat Charles Hitchcock, Jr., by 2 up and 2 to play, and Dudley H. Barrows beat Max Behr by 1 up. The play will be continued today.

WIN FIRST BOWLING MATCH OF THE SEASON

ARMRIGHTS TRIM WESTFIELD FIVE; BRITTON IN GREAT FORM.

The first team match of the season at the bowling alleys was won last night by the Armrights, who defeated the Westfield five without any trouble. The Armrights rolled a strong game all the way through. Eddie Britton was in smashing trim. He started like a whirlwind, and the storm centre never shifted from his arm.

Tennis Tourney.

The tennis tournament for junior mixed doubles will begin on the courts of the Plainfield Country Club, tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The entries close tonight at 6 o'clock with the chairman, T. M. Day, 740 Carlton avenue. Boys and girls under eighteen years are eligible.

New School Plans Filed.

Plans for the new primary school building to be erected on Darrow avenue were filed in the office of the Board of Education at the High School today. They are now at the disposal of the different contractors who may wish to submit bids for the work. The question of using stone or brick has not been decided yet and contractors will present bids on both materials. The Board of Education will hold a special meeting on Monday night, September 30, when the bids will be opened. If they come within the appropriation, it is expected that the contract will be awarded soon afterward so that the work may be started as soon as possible.

"You must not," she sobbed. "I tell you no! I will not consent; I will not be false to myself. You have no right; I gave you no right."

He permitted her to draw away, and they stood facing each other, he eager, mystified, thrilling with passion almost beyond mastery, she trembling and unstrung, her cheeks crimson, her eyes filled with mute appeal.

"I read it in your face," he insisted. "It told of love."

"Then my face must have lied," she answered, her soft voice tremulous, "or else you read the message wrongly. It is from my lips you must take the answer."

"And they kissed me."

"If so, I knew it not. It was by no volition of mine. Lieut. Brant, I have trusted you so completely; that was not right."

"My heart exonerates me."

"I cannot accept that guidance."

"Then you do not love me?"

She paused, afraid of the impulse that swept her on. "Perhaps," the low voice scarcely audible, "I may love you too well."

"You mean there is something—some person, perhaps—standing between?"

She looked frankly at him. "I do mean just that. I am not heartless, and I sincerely wish we had never met; but this must be the end."

The end? And with no explanation?"

"There is no other way." He could perceive tears in her eyes, although she spoke bravely. "Nor can I explain, for all is not clear to me. But this I know, there is a barrier between us insurmountable; not even the power of love can overcome it; and I appeal to you to ask me no more."

It was impossible for him to doubt her sober earnestness, or the depth of her feelings; the full truth in her words was pictured upon her face, and in the pathetic appeal of her eye. She extended both hands.

"You will forgive me? Truly, this barrier has not been raised by me."

He bowed low, until his lips pressed the white fingers, but before he could master himself to utter a word in reply, a distant voice called his name, and both glanced hastily around.

"That cry came from the valley," he said. "I left my horse tied there. I will go and learn what it means."

She followed him part of the way through the labyrinth of underbrush, hardly knowing why she did so. He stood alone upon the summit of the high bluff whence he could look across the stream. Miss Spencer stood below waving her parasol frantically, and even as he gazed at her, his ears caught the sound of heavy firing down the valley.

CHAPTER XXII.
Plucked from the Burning.

That Miss Spencer was deeply agitated was evident at a glance, while the nervous manner in which she glanced in the direction of those distant gunshots, led Brant to jump to the conclusion that they were in some way connected with her appearance.

"Oh, Lieutenant Brant," she cried, excitedly, "they are going to kill him down there, and he never did it at all. I know he didn't, and so does Mr. Wynkoop. Oh, please hurry! Nobody knew where you were, until I saw your horse tied here, and Mr. Wynkoop has been hunting for you everywhere. He is nearly frantic, poor man, and I cannot learn where either Mr. Moffat or Mr. McNeil is, and I just know those dreadful creatures will kill him before we can get help."

"Kill whom?" burst in Brant, springing down the bank fully awakened to the realization of some unknown emergency. "My dear Miss Spencer, tell me your story quickly if you wish me to act. Who is in danger, and from what?"

The girl burst into tears, but struggled bravely through with her message.

"It's those awful men, the roughs and rowdies down in Glencaid. They say he murdered Red Slavin, that big gambler who spoke to me this morning, but he didn't; for I saw the man who did, and so did Mr. Wynkoop. He jumped out of the saloon window, his hand all bloody, and ran away. But they've got him and the town marshal up behind the Shasta dump, and swear they're going to hang him if they can only take him alive. Oh, just hear those awful guns!"

"Yes, but who is it?"

"Bob Hampton, and—and he never did it at all."

Before Brant could either move or speak, Naida swept past him, down the steep bank, and her voice rang out clear, insistent. "Bob Hampton attacked by a mob? Is that true, Phoebe? They are fighting at the Shasta dump, you say? Lieut. Brant, you must act—you must act now, for my sake!"

She sprang toward the horse, nerved by Brant's apparent slowness to respond, and loosened the rein from the scrub oak. "Then I will go to him, even if they kill me also, the cowards!"

But Brant had got his head now. Grasping her arm and the rein of the plunging horse, "You will go home," he commanded, with the tone of military authority. "Go home with Miss Spencer. All that can possibly be done for Bob Hampton I shall do—will you go?"

She looked helplessly into his face. "You—you don't like him," she faltered; "I know you don't. But—but you will help him, won't you, for my sake?"

He crushed back an oath. "Like him or not like him, I will save him if be in the power of man. Now will you go?"

"Yes," she answered, and suddenly extended her arms. "Kiss me first."

With the magical pressure of her lips upon his, he swung into the saddle and spurred down the road. It was a principle of his military training never to temporize with a mob—he would strike hard, but he must have sufficient force behind him. He reined up before the seemingly deserted camp, his horse flung back upon its haunches, white foam flecking its quivering flanks.

"Sergeant!" The sharp snap of his voice brought that officer forward on the run. "Where are the men?"

"Playin' ball, most of 'em, sir, just beyond the ridge."

"Are the horses out in the herd?"

"Yes, sir."

"Sound the recall; arm and mount every man; bring them into Glencaid on the gallop. Do you know the old Shasta mine?"

"No, sir."

"Half-way up the hill back of the hotel. You'll find me somewhere in front of it. This is a matter of life or death, so jump lively now.!"

He drove in his spurs, and was off like the wind. A number of men were in the street, all hurrying forward in the same direction, but he dashed past them. These were minors mostly, eager to have a hand in the man-hunt. Here and there a rider skurried along and joined in the chase. Just beyond the hotel, half-way up the hill, rifles were speaking irregularly, the white puffs of smoke blown quickly away by the stiff breeze. Near the center of this line of skirmishers a denser cloud was beginning to rise in spirals. Brant, perceiving the largest group of men gathered just before him, rode straight toward them. The crowd scattered slightly at his approach, but promptly closed in again as he drew up his horse with taut rein. He looked down into rough, bearded faces. Clearly enough these men were in no fit spirit for peace making.

"You damn fool!" roared one, hoarsely, his gun poised as if in threat, "what do you mean by riding us down like that? Do you own this country?"

Brant flung himself from the saddle and strode in front of the fellow. "I mean business. You see this uniform? Strike that, my man, and you strike the United States. Who is leading this outfit?"

"I don't know as it's your affair," the man returned, sullenly. "We ain't takin' no army orders at present, mister. We're free-born American citizens, an' ye better let us alone."

"That is not what I asked you," and Brant squared his shoulders, his hands clinched. "My question was, Who is at the head of this outfit? and I want an answer."

The spokesman looked around upon the others near him with a grin of derision. "Oh, ye do, hey? Well, I reckon we are, if you must know. Since Big Jim Larson got it in the shoulder this outfit right yere hes bin doin' most of the brain work. So if ye've got anythin' ter say, mister officer man, I reckon ye better spit it out yere ter me, an' sorter relieve yer mind."

"Who are you?"

The fellow expectorated vigorously into the leaves under foot, and drawing one hairy hand across his lips, flushed angrily to the unexpected inquiry.

"Oh, tell him, Ben. What's the blame odds? He can't do ye no hurt."

The man's look became dogged. "I'm Ben Colton, if it'll do ye any good to know."

"I thought I had seen you somewhere before," said Brant, contemptuously, and then swept his glance about the circle. "A nice leader of vigilantes you are, a fine representative of law and order, a lovely specimen of the free-born American citizen! Men, do you happen to know what sort of a cur you are following in this affair?"

"Oh, Ben's all right."

"What ye got against him, young feller?"

"Just this," and Brant squarely fronted the man, his voice ringing like steel. "I've seen mobs before to-day, and I've dealt with them. I'm not afraid of you or your whole outfit, and I've got fighting men to back me up. I never yet saw any mob which wasn't led and incited by some cowardly, revengeful rascal. Honest men get mixed up in such affairs, but they are invariably inflamed by some low-down sneak with an ax to grind. I confess I don't know all about this Colton, but I know enough to say he is an army deserter, a liar, a dive-keeper, a gambler, and, to my certain knowledge, the direct cause of the death of three men, one a soldier of my troop. Now isn't he a sweet specimen to lead in the avenging of a supposed crime?"

Whatever else Colton might have failed in, he was a man of action. Like a flash his gun flew to the level, but was instantly knocked aside by the grizzled old miner standing next him.

"None o' that, Ben," he growled, warningly. "I don't never pay to shoot holes in Uncle Sam."

Brant smiled. He was not there just then to fight, but to secure delay until his own men could arrive, and to turn aside the fierce mob spirit if such a result was found possible.

"I really would enjoy accommodating you, Colton," he said, coolly, feeling much more at ease, "but I never fight personal battles with such fellows as you. And now, you other men, it is about time you woke up to the facts of this matter. A couple of hundred of you chasing after two men, one an officer of the law doing his sworn duty, and the other innocent of any crime. I should imagine you would feel proud of your job."

"Innocent? Hell!"

"That is what I said. You fellows have gone off half-cocked—a mob generally does. Both Miss Spencer and Mr. Wynkoop state positively that they saw the real murderer of Red Slavin, and it was not Bob Hampton."

The men were impressed by his evident earnestness, his unquestioned courage. Several voices spoke almost at once.

"Is that right?"

"Oh, say, I saw the fellow with his hand on the knife."

"After we git the chap, we'll give them people a chance to tell what they know."

Brant's keenly attentive ears heard the far-off chug of numerous horses' feet.

"I rather think you will," he said, confidently, his voice ringing out with sudden authority

He stepped back, lifted a silver whistle to his lips, and sounded one sharp, clear note. There was a growing thunder of hoofs, a quick, manly cheer, a crashing through the underbrush, and a squad of eager troopers, half-dressed but with faces glowing in anticipation of trouble, came galloping up the slope, swinging out into line as they advanced, their carbines gleaming in the sunlight. It was prettily, sharply performed, and their officer's face brightened.

"Very nicely done, Watson," he said to the expectant sergeant. "Deploy your men to left and right, and clear out those shooters. Make a good job of it, but no firing unless you have to."

The troopers went at it as if they enjoyed the task, forcing their restive horses through the thickets, and roughly handling more than one who ventured to question their authority. Yet the work was over in less time than it takes to tell, the discomfited regulators driven pell-mell down the hill and back into the town, the eager cavalrymen halting only at the command of the bugle. Brant, confident of his first sergeant in such emergency, merely paused long enough to watch the men deploy, and then pressed straight up the hill, alone and on foot. That danger to the besieged was yet imminent was very evident. The black spiral of smoke had become an enveloping cloud, spreading rapidly in both directions from its original starting-point. He arrived finally where the ground was charred black and covered with wood ashes, still hot under foot and smoking, but he pressed upward, sheltering his eyes with uplifted arm, and seeking passage where the scarcity of underbrush rendered the zone of fire less impassable. He could see scarcely three yards in advance, but to the rear the narrow lane of retreat remained open. Standing there, as though in the mouth of a furnace, the red flames scorching his face, Brant hollowed his hands for a call.

"Hampton!" The word rang out over the infernal crackling and roaring like the note of a trumpet.

"Ay! What is it?" The returning voice was plainly not Hampton's yet it came from directly in front, and not far away.

"Who are you? Is that you, Marshal?"

"Thet's the ticket," answered the voice, gruffly, "an' just as full o' fight es ever."

Brant lifted his jacket to protect his face from the scorching heat. There was certainly no time to lose in any exchange of compliments.

"I'm Brant, lieutenant Seventh cavalry," he cried, choking with the thickening smoke. "My troop has scattered those fellows who were hunting you. I'll protect you and your prisoner, but you'll have to get out of there at once. Can you locate me and make a dash for it? Wrap your coats around your heads, and leave your guns behind."

An instant he waited for the answer, fairly writhing in the intense heat, then Mason shouted, "Hampton's been shot, and I'm winged a little; I can't carry him."

Brant ripped off his jacket, wrapped it about his face, jammed a handkerchief into his mouth and with a prayer in his heart, leaped forward into the seemingly narrow fringe of fire in his front. Head down, he ran blindly, stumbling forward as he struck the ore-dump, and beating out with his hands the sparks that scorched his clothing. The smoke appeared to roll higher from the ground here, and the coughing soldier crept up beneath it, breathing the hot air, and feeling as enough his entire body were afire. Mason, his countenance black and unrecognizable, his shirt soaked with blood, peered into his face.

"Hell, ain't it!" he sputtered, "but you're a dandy, all right."

"Is Hampton dead?"

"I reckon not. Got hit bad, though."

Brant cast one glance into the white, unconscious face of his rival, and acted with the promptness of military training.

"Whip off your shirt, Mason, and tie it around your face," he commanded. "Lively now!"

He bound his silk neckerchief across Hampton's mouth, and lifted the limp form partially from the ground. "Help me to get him up. There, that will do. Now keep as close as you can so as to steady him if I trip. Straight ahead—run for it!"

They sprang directly into the lurid flames, bending low. Brant's hands grasping the inert form lying across his shoulder. They dashed stumbling through the black, smouldering lane beyond. Halfway down this, the ground yet hot beneath their feet, the vapor stifling, but with clearer breaths of air blowing in their faces, Brant tripped and fell. Mason beat out the smouldering sparks in his clothing, and assisted him to stagger to his feet once more. Then together they bore him slowly down below the first fire-line.

CHAPTER XXIII.
The Door Closes.

Totally exhausted, the two men dropped their heavy burden on the earth. Mason swore as the blood began dripping again from his wound, which had been torn afresh in his efforts to bear Hampton to safety. Just below them a mounted trooper caught sight of them and came forward. He failed to recognize his officer in the begrimed person before him, until called to attention by the voice of command.

"Sims, if there is any water in your canteen, hand it over. Good; here, Marshal, use this. Now, Sims, note what I say carefully, and don't waste a minute. Tell the first sergeant to send a file of men up here with some sort of a litter, on the run. Then you ride to the Herndon house—the yellow house where the roads fork, you remember—and tell Miss Naida Gillis (don't forget the name) that Mr. Hampton has been seriously wounded, and we are taking him to the hotel. Can you remember that?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then off with you, and don't spare the horse."

He was gone instantly, and Brant began bathing the pallid, upturned face.

"You'd better lie down, Marshal," he commanded. "You're pretty weak from loss of blood, and I can do all there is to be done until those fellows get here."

In 15 minutes they appeared, and five minutes later they were toiling slowly down to the valley, Brant walking beside his still unconscious rival. Here and there down the street, but especially about the steps of the Occidental, were gathered the discomfited vigilantes, busily discussing the affair, and cursing the watchful, silent guard. As these caught sight of the little party approaching there were shouts of derision. The sight and sound angered Brant.

"Carry Hampton to his room and summon medical attendance at once," he ordered. "I have a word to say to those fellows."

Seeing Mr. Wynkoop on the hotel porch, Brant said to him: "Miss Spencer informed me that you saw a man leap from the back window of the Occidental. Is that true?"

The missionary nodded.

"Good; then come along with me. I intend breaking the back of this lynching business right here and now."

He strode directly across the street to the steps of the Occidental, his clothing scarcely more than smoldering rags. The crowd stared at him sullenly; then suddenly a reaction came, and the American spirit of fair play, the frontier appreciation of bulldog courage, burst forth into a confused murmur, that became half a cheer. Brant did not mince his words.

Proposals For New Primary School Building.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Board of Education of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, at a meeting held September 12th, 1907, notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Monday evening, September 30th, 1907, at eight o'clock, at the Board room in the High School Building, corner West Ninth street and Arlington avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for doing the work and furnishing the materials for the construction of a new primary school building, as provided in the plans and specifications on file on and after September 20th, 1907, at the office of the Board of Education in the High School Building, corner West Ninth street and Arlington avenue, Plainfield, New Jersey, also at the office of the architects of said building, Hale & Rogers, 11 East 24th street, in the City of New York. The plans and specifications will be on file until the day and hour of meeting, September 30th, 1907, at 8 p. m., at the places above named. Upon receipt of the bids or proposals at the time and place specified, the Board will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided such parties or agents choose to be then and there present, and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Board.

All proposals to be endorsed, "Proposals for Plainfield Primary School."

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Do You Realize

that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.

Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.

Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?

We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.

In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.

Why not decide to get a new piano now?

Pianos to rent at moderate terms.

IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY.

To Emma D. Harrison:

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the Twenty-seventh day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Seven, in a cause wherein Erastus C. Maltby is complainant and you are defendant, you are required to appear, plead, answer or demur to the bill of said complainant on or before the Twenty-eighth Day of October next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage for $2,200.00 given by William H. Abbott to Erastus C. Maltby, dated August Twentieth, One Thousand Nine Hundred and One, on lands in the City of Plainfield, Union County, New Jersey.

And you, Emma D. Harrison, are made defendant because you own said lands or parts thereof.

SKY TELLS THEM MUCH.

Heavens Like an Open Book to Men Who Follow the Sea.

There is probably no class that can tell more as to what the weather will be from a glance at the sky than seafarers. This is the natural result of their constant observance of the heavens for the lack of something else to look at when at sea. Thus the sky becomes to the mariner an open book, which he reads by instinct as does a child the face of its parent. A navigator will tell you that a rosy sunset presages fine weather; a sickly looking, greenish hue, wind and rain; a dark or Indian red, rain; a red sky in the morning, bad weather or much wind, perhaps rain; a gray sky in the morning; fine weather; a high dawn, wind; a low dawn, fair weather. Remarkable clearness of atmosphere near the horizon, distant objects, such as hills, usually visible or raised by refraction and what is called a good "hearing day," may be mentioned among signs of wet, if not wind. A landsman is much more ignorant of the signs of the sky, as he has so many other things to distract his attention that he seldom takes much notice of its different phases, which foreshadow so clearly what may be expected in the way of weather.

THE JOKE WAS ON HER.

Comparison Made by Woman Lawyer Left Opening for Opponent.

A woman member of the bar in New York gives the following correspondence with the reservation that no names shall be quoted: "I am one of the few women," she says, "who can see a joke even if aimed at myself. I do not feel that in this case I came off first best." The letter was from a man lawyer and was as follows: "Dear Miss Blank: We agree to the compromise as promised in your favor of this date. Not because your client has a just right to such settlement, but from the fact that we do not care to open a contest with a woman lawyer." To which the reply was sent: "Gentlemen: I note yours agreeing to a settlement, although I cannot congratulate you on your gallantry in begging the question. Like the original Adam, you seem inclined to hide behind a woman's petticoat." And the following letter closed the correspondence: "Dear Miss Blank: If you will turn to the early pages of Genesis you will discover that Eve did not wear a petticoat."

Fishhawk Gives Up Prey.

Aleck Canova brought a three-pound trout to the Record office the other morning and gave a very interesting description of the manner in which it was caught. His son Frank observed a big fishhawk swoop down on the fish near Bar Creek, about a mile and a half north of town, and noted that the fish was of very respectable size. He watched the big bird until it hovered almost overhead, but within close range, and he picked up a stone and with splendid accuracy hurled the missile at the hawk, striking it. The bird dropped the trout and Frank ran forward and took charge of it. The head was torn open, but the body was uninjured except for the punctures made by the talons of the hawk.

For Air Regeneration.

Fused sodium peroxide, electrically prepared, is the chemical agent in a process of air regeneration that has been recommended for such purposes as submarine boats, etc. In contact with water, pure oxygen is given off, caustic soda being formed. The soda absorbs the carbolic acid, coating the peroxide with a crust of carbonate, which is removed by shaking the chemical in a wire net or gauze cylinder. It is found that six and three-fourths ounces of the peroxide give the seven gallons of oxygen required by one man per hour, and that 20 pounds should sustain nine men in a submarine of 2,700 cubic feet capacity for nine hours before the carbonic acid in the air breathed would increase to a troublesome quantity.

The Technicality.

"Your honor," said the lawyer for the prisoner, "there is no course open to you but to dismiss the case against my client." "The evidence shows," replied the court, "that he was caught with his hand in the pocket of John Jones." "I admit that such is the language of the warrant and the tenor of the testimony," rejoined the lawyer, "but in that pocket he found an unreceipted bill for the clothes Jones was wearing. That pocket, your honor, did not belong to Jones, but to Smith, the tailor.' With an air of confidence he awaited a decision from the bench.

Coyote Universally Despised.

The coyote is a creature without a friend, an Ishmaelite whom men and animals have combined in despising, the ideal thief and vagabond of the animal world, this gray gaunt figurehead of the western world still survives, as much the owner of his empire as he was in the days when his ancestors looked with cock-eared astonishment and staccato exclamations upon the expedition of Lewis and Clark feeling its way slowly across that trans-Missouri wilderness whose future was then undreamed.—Outing Magazine.

THE ANTS' EGG TRADE.

Russian Gatherer Has Insects Help Him in Collecting.

Ants' eggs come in the main from Russia. They are the best food obtainable for gold fish, and canaries and other cage birds thrive on them wonderfully. They cost about 50 cents a pint. In the forests of southern Russia ant nests abound. The Russian egg hunter does not do his own collecting there—he makes the poor ants do it for him. Selecting a hot, sunny day, the man first erects little piles of twigs, a dozen or more of them, near the thickest colonies, and then he kicks open all the nests in the neighborhood. The ants know that their eggs, thus exposed to the sun would be made sterile in a few hours, and they take them up and hurry to [illegible] shelter [illegible] course, the little pile under each of these there are soon heaped the eggs from a hundred nests. The egg hunter, after a smoke and a nap, has nothing to do but gather up his spoil and dump it in his sack. He ships the eggs in hundred-weight bags, all over the world.

A SNAP FOR THE MICE.

"Beads" of Rice Furnished Forth an Appetizing Luncheon.

The wind shook the Japanese curtain of bamboo and glass beads, and as the strands divided the beach was visible—the white beach, the blue sea and the bathers bobbing up and down in the sun-warmed billows. "These Japanese curtains," said the host, "are a fraud, some of them. No wonder you can see through them. They get thinner and thinner. For the glass beads disappear. The mice eat them." "Mice eat glass beads? Impossible!" "So I thought at first. But, finding the beads on all my curtains disappearing, I investigated. And I found that these pretty pale beads were not made of glass at all. They were made of rice. They were translucent rice kernels strung beadlike between the bits of bamboo. No wonder they disappeared so fast. They made a fine lunch for the mice."

Woman M. P.'s Mishap.

One of the women members of the Finnish diet met with a laughable mishap recently while attending the sittings of a legal committee. Bored by the proceedings she bestrode her chair and rocked to and fro with her feet clear off the ground. Suddenly she overbalanced and fell above the chair, with which she battled for some moments as she lay on the floor. The equality of the sexes is coming to be looked upon so much as a matter of course that the male members of the committee, not concealing their appreciation of the humor of the situation, are reported to have been ungallant enough to refrain from expressing regret at the mishap.—London Mail.

Horns on Horse's Skull.

A recently acquired abnormality of the British museum is the skull of an English horse showing a pair of rudimentary horns on the forehead. Older specimens are a portion of a similar skull with the horns and models of the foreheads of two thoroughbreds having horns. The skin extends uniformly over the horns, with no sign of thickening or hardening. Just what these hornlike growths signify is perplexing naturalists, as none of the ancestral horses or immediately related species were horned animals, and if there is no hereditary influence it is remarkable that so many freak appendages should appear in the same place.

Affection Between Senators.

There was sincere affection between the late Alabama senators, Morgan and Pettus. It is said that Pettus adored Morgan. He looked up to him as few men look up to other men. When Morgan passed away the fading old veteran lost all interest in life. These things sound unbelievable, perhaps, to a skeptical modern time, but Morgan and Pettus did not belong to a modern time. They were relics of an elder age. They passed away almost together. The death of one preceded and, the Alabama men say, brought about the death of the other. Together they lie in Selma, where, side by side, they lived for 40 years.

Strenuous Medical Treatment.

Although the Maoris of New Zealand have made considerable strides in civilization during recent years some of their barbaric superstitions survive. One of the most persistent is belief in the 'tohunga" or tribal medicine man. His patients sometimes succumb to his energetic methods of treatment. The latest case of that sort comes from Waikato. A sick girl, after having been immersed in cold water for some hours, was beaten with sticks to drive the evil spirits out, the 'tohunga" afterward gripping her throat to prevent their reentering. She died the next day.

Copperhead's Hiding Place.

While picking corn from a barrel Mrs. Irvin Showers thought the corn was being moved of its own accord, but upon closer investigation she discovered some shiny object in the bottom of the barrel. Suspicion was aroused and Mr. Showers' attention was called to the moving contents of the vessel. A pair of pincers was secured and a large copperhead snake was drawn from between the ears of corn. Mrs. Showers had been picking close to danger. — Punxsutawney Spirit.

FORT BRINGS HARMONY

Nominee Declares Colby and Sommer Assured Support as Soon as He Was Named.

NO SECRETS TO HIDE

Alden Freeman Scold, Dissents and Says the Nomination Was Decreed by Corporate Power.

J. Franklin Fort, Republican nominee for Governor of New Jersey, who resigned as a Supreme Court Justice as soon as he was nominated, broke his silence on political matters yesterday by giving out an interview at his home in North Arlington avenue, East Orange, N. J.

"I intend to enter into this campaign," said the ex-jurist, "with all the earnestness there is in me, and to make as strong a fight for right and my party as I possibly can. I shall go through the State and meet the people fairly face to face. I shall be frank on each and every one of the issues, and will meet all propositions as they are brought before me.

"I shall have no secrets to hide from any one, and every citizen of the State will know just where I stand and how I stand on each issue. I fear absolutely no question or issue: I have made no alliance with any one, and if the people of this State elect me, as I know they will, a fearless and independent administration will be given them."

Explaining what he meant in his convention speech by "home rule," ex-Justice Fort said: "Just exactly what I said; I am heartily in favor of home rule."

"As it refers to the excise question or Sunday selling?" Mr. Fort was asked.

"I mean just exactly what I said," declared the nominee. It is not a new doctrine to me, for I have long advocated it. I never doubted and never supposed any one could question the principle that every municipality should have the right to regulate its own self-government as it wishes. I may have something further to say on that subject when I go on the platform.

"And I want to say, that I am immensely pleased with the attitude of the convention that nominated me. It was a particularly harmonious convention, and the platform adopted is a grand one. Any candidate would feel proud to run on it. I shall heartily advocate every principle laid down in its various planks.

"I also greatly appreciate the attitude of the Colby or 'New Idea' element in the party after the nomination. Senator Colby, Sheriff Sommer, and many others of their associates crowded about me and told me they were for me to a man and would fight and work hard for my election. Senator Colby declared he would do his utmost for me, and said he would stump the State with me. I told him that I was going to ask him to do so, and was particularly pleased with his willingness to do so. Sheriff Sommer said he would speak for me also, wherever and whenever I wished, and I will most gladly accept of his proffer, too."

Justice Fort's resignation was presented at the State House, Trenton, yesterday. He left only one case uncompleted.

Alden Freeman, who went down to the State Convention in Trenton on Thursday as a delegate from East Orange, yesterday made a vigorous denial of the statement that Justice Fort was the unanimous nominee for Governor of New Jersey on the Republican ticket.

"I desire to correct the published reports that the nomination of Justice Fort was made unanimous," said Mr. Freeman. "When the motion was put, the East Orange delegates in the row of seats in my neighborhood voted nay most emphatically. We arose and left the floor of the convention as a final protest against the nomination of Justice Fort."

Will Begin Fall Work.

The Monroe Avenue M. E. church will open the fall work with tomorrow's services. During the past month the edifice has been redecorated and 100 comfortable chairs added to the seating capacity. Tomorow morning the pastor, Rev. E. E. Roberson, will preach on the subject, "An Active Christianity for a Vigorous Generation." The evening service will open a series of revival talks. The topic wil be "The Supreme Need of a Busy Age." Good music will be provided.

County Tax Rates Completed.

The Union County Board of Taxation has completed its work of determining all of the tax rates throughout the county, the rates at Rahway and Summit being the only ones not announced with the others earlier in the week. The rate for Rahway is $2.10, and that for Summit $1.82. There was also a change in the rate at Roselle township from $1.50 to $1.25.

MARRIED HALF CENTURY

Mr. and Mrs. Clickener Celebrate Golden Wedding at Raritan.

HUNDRED AT DINNER

Friends From This City and Other Nearby Places Join In Observance.

Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Clickener celebrated their golden wedding Thursday night at their home in Raritan, by entertaining a large number of relatives and friends. The parlors were tastefully decorated in honor of the bride and groom of fifty years ago, the Stars and Stripes waving from in front of the house all day.

An elaborate dinner was served to about 100 guests from Newark, Plainfield, Bloomfield, Passaic, Somerville and Raritan. The couple were the recipients of many gifts, besides a large sum of money from the Kenyon family and employes of the Kenyon shops.

Mr. and Mrs. Clickener were married at Whitehouse, September 19, 1857, by the Rev. Mr. Sturgis, of the Reformed church. The bride, who was Miss Amy Heath, was born near Asbury, Warren county, while Whitehouse is Mr. Clickener's native place. Five years after the wedding the couple went to live at Raritan, where Mr. Clickener has been employed ever since as superintendent in the Kenyon machine shops.

The couple have four children, Benjamin H. Clickener, of Passaic; Charles W. Clickener, of Newark; Mrs. Charles Myers, of Raritan, and Mrs. Orlin Kanouse, of Newark. There are eleven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, 6 and 7 years old.

Among the guests present were: Mrs. Clickener's brother, Postmaster George W. Heath, and family, of Bloomfield; D. J. Backoff and family and Edward Matthew and family, of Newark; Harry Z. Stryker and family, of Passaic; William Stine and family and Mr. and Mrs. William Hewitt, of Plainfield; William Van Nest, George Van Nest, John Amerman, former Sheriff George A. Dilts, Holcombe D. Dilts and their families, and Mrs. Augustus Tillman and Rev. S. D. Harris, of Raritan.

BOROUGH MAN CONFESSES TO THEFT BEFORE COURT.

Judge Schenck Defers Sentence on Charles E. Dilley.

Charles E. Dilley, of the borough, charged with stealing a suit of clothes from Charles Bookoven, in Bernards township, was arraigned before Judge Schenck in the Somerset county court, at Somerville, yesterday. He pleaded guilty. Sentence was deferred for two weeks in order to give the court a chance to inquire into the previous character of the prisoner.

The September term of the Somerset county courts will open on Tuesday. The list of causes is said to be large, and the grand jury will have many cases to investigate also.

The wholesale license of Frank Bufano, of Raritan, has been transferred to Andrew Stabile.

Miss Leese to Wed.

Announcement has been made of the approaching marriage of Miss Alida King Leese, who lives with her sister, Mrs. Richard Boardman, of Putnam avenue, and Dr. Seth M. Milliken, Jr., of New York. The ceremony will be performed at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on October 5, at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon. A reception will be held at Truell Hall. More than 1,000 invitations have been issued. The large ballroom at Truell Hall will be specially decorated for the occasion, and an orchestra of ten pieces has been engaged for the reception.

Miss Bogan Among the Graduates.

Miss Catherine B. Bogan, of this city, is one of those who will be graduated from St. Antoninus' Parochial School, Newark, tomorrow. The affair was deferred from last June because of the absence of Rev. Francis M. Gaffney, the priest of that parish. He will present the diplomas and certificates at the exercises tomorrow, and Rev. B. M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, this city, an uncle of Miss Catherine B. Bogan, will assist at the presentation ceremony.

Realty Deals.

Herbert L. Moodey, of this city, has sold his property at 35 Union place, Westfield, to Jennie E. Jepson, and Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, of East Seventh street, has sold her property at West Seventh street and Monroe avenue to William Locke, of Westfield. T. E. Bodine, of this city, has leased his property, 120 Kimball avenue, Westfield, to Morris Hulett, of Brooklyn.

YOUNG WOMAN HURT BY FALL FROM CAR

MISS ENRIGHT UNCONSCIOUS AFTER ACCIDENT.

Miss Katherine Enright, aged seventeen years, employed as a servant at the home of Charles H. Hand, of Belvidere avenue, jumped off a Netherwood trolley car on Woodland avenue, about 9:30 o'clock, last night, and received some painful bruises and a severe shock to her nervous system. Miss VanDeventer, who lives near the place of the accident, saw the young woman fall. The car was stopped and the conductor assisted Miss Enright to a house, where Dr. Norman H. Probasco was summoned.

The woman was removed to the hospital, where she remained in an unconscious condition for several hours. Today it was reported that she is suffering chiefly from shock and that she does not appear to be otherwise injured.

Why Miss Enright jumped from the car while it was moving it not known, but it is said that she has been in the habit of doing so, despite warnings from conductors on the line. She left her place of employment about 8 o'clock to call on some friends, it is supposed, and was on her way home when the accident happened.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY AMONG FIRST BAPTISTS

COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ARRANGE FOR ORGANIZATION.

At a largely attended meeting of the young people of the First Baptist church, held last night at the suggestion of the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, plans were discussed for service for the fall and winter, and definite details will be decided upon soon. A committee comprising Dr. Norman H. Probasco, chairman; Miss May Shreve, Miss Marguerite Serrell, Harold Robins and Harry Woodland was appointed to draft rules for organization and outline the nature of the work. The committee will also nominate officers and will report at a meeting to be called by the pastor.

After the business there was a delightful social hour, the pleasure of which was enhanced by several piano and violin solos by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Martin A. Korff. A feature was the singing of college songs by a quartet, comprising Gideon Fountain, Paul Scarborough, Clyde Doane and Guyon Fountain. Refreshments were served by a committee appointed for that purpose.

MONTGOMERY'S FRIENDS DEMAND RENOMINATION

H. W. MARSHALL PRICKS HIS BOOM FOR COUNCIL.

Friends of Councilman-at-large Francis Montgomery, of the Second ward, appear to be sanguine that he will be nominated without opposition at the Republican city convention on Wednesday night, Oct. 10. Organization men are strongly backing his boom and according to report the Fourth ward delegate will favor him if he gets the solid delegation from the First ward, which is said to be slated for him. That means that he will be renominated, if the arrangement is carried out. Montgomery's friends point to the fact that he has made a good councilman and they will ask a renomination on his record.

It developed today in Democratic circles that H. W. Marshall, president of the Plainfield Board of Trade, will decline to accept a nomination for councilman-at-large. It had been planned to nominate him as such at the minority party's convention on Oct. 14, but his ultimatum has put an end to such a move.

Change At Iroquois Hotel.

Beginning with Monday, the Hotel Iroquois will be conducted on the European plan. Daniel Webster, of New York, formerly connected with leading Broadway hotels, will be in charge of the dining room. A business men's quick lunch will be served from 11:30 to 2:30 o'clock. A special Sunday dinner will be a feature. Club breakfast will be served mornings from 6:30 to 10:30 o'clock. A la carte service will be obtainable from 6:30 o'clock in the evening until 1 a. m.

The Boys' Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed church, will meet tomorrow afternoon after the Sunday school session. A full attendance is requested.

FUN GOT HIM IN TROUBLE

Stanley Bates's Horseplay at Coney Island Lands Him in Court.

MARDI GRAS VICTIM

Brooklyn Man Mistook Plainfielder For Thief When Latter Grabbed For Hjs Necktie.

Stanley Bates, of this city, has had his fill of Mardi Gras festivals at Coney Islands. He got mixed up in the horse play at the celebration on Thursday night, and was a prisoner in the Adams Street Court, yesterday. The young man, who said he was a Columbia student, was arrested on complaint of Harry E. Schmidt, of 276 Carlton avenue, Brooklyn.

Stanley had been watching several young men amusing themselves pulling at the neckties of others in the crowd, and decided that it was about the most amusing trick he had ever seen. He determined to try it, and when Mr. Schmidt came along, the student reached out and gave his tie a yank. Mr. Schmidt had a jeweled pin in his scarf, and he turned Bates over to two detectives. Later Mr. Schmidt became convinced that Bates had meant no harm, and Magistrate Hyland discharged the youth.

"No more Mardi Gras for me," said Bates, as he made tracks for this city.

WATCHMAN FRIGHTENS BURGLARS FROM OFFICE

YELLED WHEN HE SAW THEM AT WORK ON NEIGHBORING PLACE.

One of the watchmen employed by the Krom Machine Works, North avenue, did a neighborly turn for the J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, which does business across the way from the machine works, last night. He scared two burglars from their office.

The watchman, one of six on duty at the works, saw the burglars at work at the side of the lumber company's office. He yelled at them, and they took flight. The watchman was armed, but as the fleeing men had not set foot on the Krom place he did not feel safe in shooting at them.

The crooks did no damage at the lumber office. They had hardly begun preparations to break in when the vigilant watchman discovered them.

WILLIE MILLER DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

SON OF ONCE NOTED HOTEL MAN PASSES AWAY.

William H. Miller, one of the best known young men of the city, died this morning at his home, 339 Park avenue, following a long illness with a complication of diseases. For several years he was afflicted with rheumatism. Notwithstanding this he was able to go out until a week ago, when he was confined to his bed.

Mr. Miller was the son of the late George and Caroline Miller, and was born in this city. His father for many years was one of the best known hotel men in New Jersey, being proprietor of the old Laing's Hotel on West Front street, where the Babcock building now stands. During his boyhood days Mr. Miller attended the public schools. Later he was associated with is brother, Wallace V. Miller, when he was proprietor of the Hotel Grenada, now the Hotel Kensington; also with his brother, Joseph Miller, who conducts a cafe at Elizabethport. He had a genial disposition and always made friends, and his death will be a source of deep regret to a large circle of acquaintances. He is survived by three brothers and a sister. The brothers are Joseph, George and Wallace V. Miller, and the sister, Miss Annie Miller, with whom he lived. Announcement of the funeral will be made later.

Miss de Forest to Marry.

Miss Ethel de Forest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert de Forest, of New York, and a granddaughter of the late John Taylor Johnston, will be married to Allen E. Whitman at Wawapek, the country home of her parents in Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., Oct. 7. Miss de Forest is a niece of Mrs. Pierre Mali, of New York, whose summer home is in East Front street.

J. R. Schuck, of Clover Hill, has been visiting his nephew, J. D. Moon, of Grandview avenue.

NINE YEAR OLD BOY— HIT BY TROLLEY CAR

A. E. FORCE'S SON SUSTAINS PAINFUL INJURIES.

Arthur E. Force, Jr., aged nine years, son of A. E. Force, the dry goods' merchant, of West Front street, collided with a main line trolley car on West Front street, near Compton avenue, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, while riding his bicycle in the vicinity of his home. The lad turned around to call to some boy friends and did not realize how close he was to the car until it struck him and threw him off the wheel. He sustained a fracture of the collar bone and a contused wound of the forehead, but the injuries are not considered serious.

Within a few minutes after the accident a touring party in an automobile came along and their attention being attracted to the accident, picked up the lad and hastened with all speed for the hospital. Prompt medical aid was given and an examination disclosed the broken collar bone and wound in the forehead. The boy was unconscious for a time, but was finally revived. He rested comfortably last night and today it was reported at the hospital that he would recover unless there should be complications.

FRANKLIN MURPHY FOR STATE CHAIRMAN

FORMER GOVERNOR TO MANAGE FORT'S CAMPAIGN.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy is likely to become chairman of the Republican State committee and the manager of John Franklin Fort's campaign for the Gubernatorial office. It is generally believed that United States Senator Frank O. Briggs will soon retire from the chairman ship because of the press of other political and business duties, and in this event Governor Murphy is practically certain to be named as his successor.

There has been some talk of making Governor Stokes the chairman, but it is not likely that he would care to serve as long as he is the chief executive of the State. Senator Briggs has been chairman for the past three years.

Governor Stokes, Senator Briggs and other Republican leaders are well pleased with the outcome of the State convention and the harmony which seems to have been accomplished between the Regulars and the reformers of the North Jersey counties.

SEBRING LOOMS UP STRONG FOR SHERIFF

AND ROWLEY HAS BACKING FOR SURROGATE.

No date has been set for the Republican convention in Somerset county, but it is expected that the nominations for surrogate and sheriff will be made about October 15. There are two men in the North Plainfield end of the county who aspire to office, and either one or the other is likely to land a nomination. Charles P. Sebring, of North Plainfield township, and Frank Rowley, of the borough, are the two.

Mr. Sebring is after the shrievalty nomination, and it is reliably reported that he will get the backing of the borough delegates. Mayor Smalley is quoted as being strongly in favor of his nomination. Mr. Sebring is immensely popular, and would make a capable man in the surrogate's office. The borough delegates are backing him, according to report, and it is said that he has a strong following throughout the county.

Traveled by Special Train.

Harry B. Dennis, of Watchung avenue, a foreman at the Scott Press Works, returned Thursday from Pittsburg, to where he made a flying pleasure trip on Tuesday. He made the return trip in a special train, consisting of a parlor and dining car and engine.

Street Opening Petition.

At the special meeting of the borough council last night, Mayor Smalley announced that the petition for the opening of Watchung avenue would be ready by and presented at the next regular meeting.

Arrested for Vagrancy.

Harry Flascher, a wanderer, was arrested last night for vagrancy. He promised to leave town this morning with all the swiftness in his system and Judge Runyon suspended sentence.

TO GET SEWER CONSENTS

Borough Council Appoints a Commission to Prepare for the Improvement.

ELECTION WILL BE NEXT

North Plainfield Begins Actual Steps to Make Modern Sewage Disposal An Assured Fact As Soon As Possible.

First actual steps to bring the sanitary disposal of sewage about were taken by the borough council last night at a special meeting. All the reports of investigations having been received and disposed of the council did the first thing necessary to start the plan for sewerage on its official way. By resolution passed unanimously and without debate, a commission of five were appointed to secure consents from property owners as to the sewerage work.

The commission is made up of former Councilman Charles A. Lee, William G. Debele, Andrew Kenney, George F. Brown and J. V. E. Vanderhoef. As soon as the committee has secured the consents and reported, the borough will proceed with arrangements for a special election for the bond issue necessary.

The resolution was passed swiftly, and the council adjourned as soon as it was adopted. The whole session lasted about nine minutes.

The resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas, After thorough investigation, this council has become satisfied that it is most desirable that the borough of North Plainfield should install a general sewerage system.

"And whereas, The statements contained in the reports of the subcommittee of seven appointed by the committee of fifty heretofore appointed by this body, which reports were filed with the borough clerk March 1, 1907, and July 24, 1907, respectively, recommending the installation of a sewerage system in accordance with general plans and specifications of Messrs. Herring and Fuller filed with the borough clerk March 1, 1907, and that contract be entered into with the city of Plainfield for the disposal of the borough's sewage, meet the approval of this council, as already declared by a former resolution.

"And whereas, This council has under the law no power to commit the borough to the project of installation of sewers until after consent thereto in writing signed by the owners of a majority of real estate in the borough according to its assessed valuation as contained in the latest assessment for the purposes of taxation made therein, is presented to this council, nor until the same shall have been assented to by a majority of the legal votes cast for and against such proposition at an election in said borough.

"And whereas, In the judgment of this council an attempt should be made to obtain such consents and assent.

"Now, therefore, Be it resolved by the mayor and council of the Borough of North Plainfield that Charles A. Lee, William G. Debels, Andrew J. Kenney, George F. Brown and J. V. E. Vanderhoef, and any majority of them, be and are hereby appointed a special committee to take charge of the matter of obtaining the aforesaid consents in writing and presenting the same to this council as a basis for its further action on the subject of the installation of a sewerage system."

GOVERNOR STOKES INVITED.

To Take Part in Crowning of Queen of Elizabeth Carnival.

A committee of five men, of Elizabeth, has been appointed to interview Governor Stokes and extend to him an invitation to attend the Elizabeth old home week festivities, which begin Monday, October 7. The Governor will be asked to take part in the crowning of the queen of the carnival.

Interest in the carnival queen contest is growing apace and ballots are being polled by the thousands. A new leader appeared in the race today, Miss Cullinan taking first place with a total vote of 19, 775.

Junior Endeavorers Elect.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society, of the West End Tabernacle, has resumed its activities for the fall and winter. These officers and committee have been chosen: President, Miss Josie Romond; vice president, Miss Grace Squier; secretary, Miss Helen Taylor; treasurer, Miss Annie Bowden; chairman of the prayer meeting committee, Miss Edna Stryker; chairman lookout committee, Miss Bertha Stryker; chairman visiting committee, Miss Dorothy Bowman; chairman social committee, Miss Florence Taylor. The society meets every Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

—The September term of the Somerset county courts will open at Somerville on Tuesday.

FIRE HORSE LOSES LIFE

Broke His Leg in Fall on Way to Scene of a Small Fire.

DRIVER NOT BLAIMED

Department Officials Say He Was As Careful As Possible—New at the Work—$100 Fire, Horse Worth $350.

A $100 fire in one of the negro rookeries of Battle Row, Fourth street and Plainfield avenue, led to the death of a $350 horse last night. The horse, one of the grays attached to the chemical engine, had its leg broken in a tumble as it turned the corner at Liberty and Second streets, on the way to the fire, and was shot.

At the fire headquarters no blame for the animal's fall is attached to William Claasen, who was driving. First Assistant Chief Jennings said this morning that investigation had shown that Claasen was driving carefully and making the turn in good order. The street was slippery from the rain, and Spot, the horse, lost his footing in swinging around. The engine ran into the animal and the front wheel broke its right hind leg. Claasen was thrown through the braces of the railroad to the sidewalk, when the engine stopped, but escaped with bruised hips and knees.

Dr. L. D. Pocock, the department veterinary, was called and examined the horse. He ordered it shot, and Policeman Charles Flynn put the animal out of its pain.

Hose Companies Nos. 1 and 3 proceeded to the fire, which was in the middle house in the row, occupied by Mrs. Ella Hoston, and put it out. The cause of the blaze, which raged in an upstairs room, is unknown.

Claasen was off duty today, recovering from his bruises. He is not a regular drived, William Jaeger, the chemical engine driver, is on his vacation. The horse was between five and six years old. It went into service about seven months ago. The department regarded it as the least desirable one of the team.

Councilman Herbert Buxton was a bit cut up when he heard of the accident. He picked the horse out for purchase in New York. He said he had asked that Claasen be not allowed to drive the team, because he was afraid of his youthfulness and inexperience. At headquarters this morning it was said that Claasen had always done his work carefully, and was regarded as dependable.

On the street today it was said that the apparatus was being driven at a high rate of speed.

TRUST COMPANY OFFERS FOUR PER CENT. INTEREST.

Youngest Banking House Shows Fresh Signs of Prosperity.

A fresh instance of the unparalleled prosperity of the Plainfield Trust company was furnished today, when the directors of that progressive young institution announced that business had been so good that further considerations would be given to the depositors. The new idea is contained in the statement found in another column to the effect that hereafter 4 per cent. interest will be allowed on deposits in the sepcial department. That means that people who are accumulating their earnings will draw that high rate of interest on and after October 1.

When the concern first started business five years ago, it made an innovation in this section by offering 3½ per cent. interest on time deposits. The total aggregate of the deposits at the present time amount to $2,500,000. The capital is $100,000, and the surplus and profits now foot up to more than $150,000.

Files a Caveat.

Through Counsellor Francis J. Blatz, of the First National Bank building, Fred Corell, of Summit, has filed a caveat against the will of his mother, Mrs. Margaret Carell, who was a resident of Jersey City at the time of her death. The case will be heard in the Orphans' Court at Jersey City in November. The estate is a medium-sized one.

Fred Patman Goes to London.

Fred Patman, formerly of this city, who was the American representative of the Grand Central Railway, of England, with offices at 355 Broadway, New York, has been transferred to the main office of the company in London. He is succeeded in New York by Joseph Bruce, who is also well known here.

Harvest Festival Services.

AMUSEMENTS.

Proctor's Elizabeth Theatre, week of September 23: "Motoring," presented by Harry Tates London Company of English comedians. Automobilists who have experienced the "pleasures" of a breakdown ten miles from nowhere, can fully appreciate the humor of this sketch.

Many contortionists may claim the title "Greatest," but they pale into insignificance when the name of "The Mephisto Moderne" is mentioned, the nomde guerre that Juno Salmo uses. Salmo is original and unique in all his feats, enhancing his performance with wonderful mechanical and electrical effects; at times his scenery is very expressive of the realm of his satanic majesty, verily Juno Salmo is "The Devil Dandy."

"A Honeymoon in the Catskills," the sketch that will introduce Estelle Wordette and company, is one of the brightest, breeziest and most atmospheric one-act comedies on the stage. Jules Kusel, Miss Wordette's chief support, is a capable actor and possesses a rare baritone voice.

In Max Witts' Singing Colleens, the latest singing novelty is presented. Four young women will sing the old time songs we love to hear.

The Beau Brummels of colored aristocracy are the Smith Bowman Trio, up-to-date entertainers, who sing original songs.

Patsy Doyle, who doles out songs and stories in a droll, dry manner that is irresistable. The films shown in the animated pictures will be the same high standard that one expects and gets at a Proctor playhouse.

Proctor's Theatre, Newark, week of September 23: Mr. Joseph Hart's Futurity Winner, an exciting and realistic depiction of scenes at a race track. Also that clever Broadway favorite, Marie Wainwright, and a capable company, in their comedy sketch, "Our Baby." Hoey and Lee, best of parodists. Pat Rooney and Marion Bent in their laughing success, "Make Yourself at Home." Louise Henry, ever effervescent as the "Sal Skinner Gal," who will cause you to roar. The Scheck Brothers novel European acrobats. The A. B. C. Girls, in comedy singing and dancing, and others, with a new reel of motion pictures will make good the assertion that we present the best vaudeville in the world.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure bad backs;

Cure lame, weak and aching backs;

Cure every form of kidney ills.

Lots of local endorsement to prove this.

Mrs. E. Derflinger, of 219 Mansion place, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several weeks ago I began to have heavy dull pains in the top and back of my head. Backache continually clung to me and it seemed to me that my kidneys were weak and gradually breaking down. I also had a tired feeling, with a sort of languor or general depression. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, and as it was a case of 'any port in a storm,' I got a supply of this medicine at Randolph's pharmacy and before I had taken two boxes of it I found that my kidneys were acting stronger and better and the pains were leaving me. I continued with the treatment and am now able to say that Doan's Kidney Pills have cured me,—at least I am not troubled any more and feel well and strong in every way."

OLD SUIT UP AGAIN.

Hardware Dealers Who Received Verdict Again Bring Up Case.

Belvidere, Sept. 20.—Testimony was taken yesterday before a special master in the matter of Widenor Brothers, hardware dealers, against Dr. Brisbane, proprietor of the Manumkachunk House, at Manumkachunk. At the April term of court Widenor Brothers secured judgment against Brisbane for $250, for putting in a gasoline engine, pump, etc., at his house. At the same time the jury awarded the engine, pump, etc., to the Widenors.

Now Brisbane's counsel dispute this part of the verdict and allege that this was no part of the jury's finding. The minutes of the court show this to have been the verdict. Testimony has been taken in the matter and the case will be submitted to Judge Frank T. Lloyd, who will decide whether there is ground or not for a new trial.

Start life afresh. Borrow from us to pay the several you owe and make payments in keeping with your income. By so doing you keep your credit good. Ease up the pressure on yourself and have a chance to "turn around" in other things needed for the family.

An Illustration

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

The Clinton Avenues will play Westfield at Crescent Oval, this afternoon and a good game is assured. When these teams met the last time, the local aggregation just nosed out a winner, and there is every indication that today's contest will be as close. Next week Saturday, the Clinton Avenues will entertain Rahway at Crescent Oval in the second game for county championship honors.

Arthur Lumley, the crack right fielder of the Brooklyn Nationals, broke his left leg sliding to second base in the eighth inning of the game between Brooklyn and Pittsburg on Thursday and will be laid up for six weeks at least.

Realizing that some of the best players on the team were laying down McGraw, of the Giants, has been touching them up with pretty stiff fines. McGann was fined $5 for failing to run for a foul fly and Bresnahan was fined $25 for failing to show up for the second game of a double header.

The West Ends, of Somerville, have closed the season. That defeat at the hands of High Bridge was just a little too much, and besides the loyal backers of Manager Kenyon's aggregation were considerably out of pocket.

The Williamsport Tri-State League champions and the winners of the pennant of the New York State League will meet in a post-season series after the close of the New York State League season.

The Hoboken and the Jersey City Eastern League clubs have arranged a series of three games for the championship of Hudson county. The first contest will be played at Hoboken, tomorrow; the second at the Jersey City grounds, September 28, and the final game at Hoboken on Sunday, September 29. There is much interest in the contest as in the previous game between these teams, Hoboken whitewashed the Skeeters.

GOLF.

The fall tournament of the New York Produce Exchange Golf Club was held at the Knollwood Country Club on Thursday. J. T. McMurtrie was the winner with a net score of 160.

Dudley H. Barrows and Robert Abbott have been in rare form this week as their scores in the invitation tournament at the Morris County Golf Club shows.

The events at the Plainfield Country Club today include play for the Golf Committee, Green Committee and Autumn cups. At the Park Golf Club there will be play for the President's, Golf Club and September cups.

W. H. Horne, a professional golfer, of London, made a drive of 381 yards at Beckenham, Thursday. This is declared to be a record. The longest drive hitherto known was made by Travis, 374 yards.

The play at the Plainfield Country Club today and next Saturday will determine who is to engage in match play for the Autumn cups during October.

Secretary Leighton Calkins, of the Metropolitan Golf Association, announces that the open metropolitan championship has been set for Oct. 31, Nov. 1 and 2, and invites the clubs in the Metropolitan Association, which may desire to hold the tourney, to make application for the event. The dates are exceptionally late, but this is necessitated by the misunderstanding between the association and the Baltusrol Golf Club. It is expected that not more than seventy players will enter, and with any sort of open weather the championship ought yet to prove a success.

Secretary Calkins explains that the only other possible dates for the tournament are Oct. 3, 4 and 5. No club having applied for the tourney as yet, it is too late to hold the contest at that time. Moreover, were it still possible the arrangement of this date would conflict with the invitation tourney of the Myopia Club, which many metropolitan amateurs desire to enter. It is deemed unwise to hazard the success of either event by any conflict.

The association has awarded the Baltusrol Golf Club the dates Oct. 18 and 19 for an open amateur tournament, which is expected to attract a very large and important entry. It has allotted Oct. 11 and 12 to the Montclair Golf Club for an invitation amateur tournament that is expected to have a representative selected entry. It also announces that it has been notified that the annual Leslie Cup competition will be held at Brookline, Mass., this year on Oct. 25 and 26.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The New Plainfield theatre on September 25 will have for its attraction the Ritchie London Comedy Co. in the best and latest musical comedy entitled "Around the Clock," by Frank Huffman, with music and lyrics by L. O. Smith and Sebastian Hiller. The whole production, which is in three acts, is said to be one of much merit. The play is excruciatingly funny, bubbling over with catchy, tuneful songs, rollicking comedy and hilarious merriment. The plot deals with the effort of a young man of fabricating turn of mind who, by a series of lies, tries to deceive his wealthy uncle from the West. He succeeds for a while, but in the end finds himself in a precarious predicament.

Special managerial attention is called to the fact that Mr. Mantell's performance of "King Lear" next Tuesday night, in the New Plainfield theatre, will begin at 8 o'clock, in order that the entire tragedy may be given, and that the curtain may fall on the last act not later than 11 o'clock. While Mr. Mantell observes Shakespeare's own divisions of the tragedies into acts and scenes, he really treats all the tragedies as if they were written in a series of tableaux, so that the waits between acts are as brief as they can be made.

Marguerite Clark, Ada Deaves and Hopper's aids in his new comic op- Hopper's aids in his ne wcomic opera, "Happyland," which will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, will be remembered as the trio of players whose good comedy helped to make Mr. Hopper's "Wang" so successful all last season.

No comedy of modern times has ever equalled the brilliancy of Richard Brinsley Sheridan's "The Rivals." Although written one hundred and thirty years ago, it has been brought up to date by the "Dean of the American stage," the late Mr. Joseph Jefferson, and has been one of his most valuable successes for many years. Several years ago, through the illness of Mr. Jefferson, his son, William Winter Jefferson, was forced to assume the role of "Bob Acres," made famous by his father, at very short notice. He was an instantaneous success and since that time he, accompanied by his brother, Joseph, and supported by a brilliant and notable cast, has toured in "The Rivals," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre September 30.

ALLEGED WIDOW MAKES CLAIM.

Appears in Rahway to Get Estate of Veteran Who Died Supposedly Unmarried.

Rahway, Sept. 21.—Joseph Stelle, a veteran, seventy-eight years old, and a life-long resident of this place, died a few months ago at the Soldiers' Home in Kearny, supposedly a single man.

Thursday a woman, claiming to have been married to Mr. Stelle four years ago, made her appearance here, armed with documents to prove that she was the lawful widow of Stelle. She claims to reside in Passaic. Previous to his death Stelle, in order to dodge a suit, transferred his real estate to Christopher Mandeville, to whom he owed some money. Mandeville afterward refused to redeed the property unless his debt was settled. The widow says she read in a newspaper that her husband died possessed of lands, houses and carriages and they should now belong to her.

Meantime Mr. Stelle's furniture has been sold and removed since his death, his carriages have wheeled away in various directions, his pension has been paid to a daughter, the dog has been provided with a new home, the chimney of the house has fallen in and birds are nesting where the chimney had stood. The piece of ground is still there, and Mr. Mandeville proposes to settle on that today, despite all claimants.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rink and daughter, of this city, have returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Fisher, of New Germantown.

Mr. and Mrs. William Henry and daughter, Miss Helen Henry, of this city, have returned from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Abram Tunison, of Somerville.

POLITICAL NOTES

Robert S. Hudspeth, chairman of the Democratic State comittee of New Jersey, leased a suite of six rooms yesterday in the Fuller building, at Montgomery and Hudson streets, Jersey City, where he will establish committee headquarters. The rooms will be formally opened next week.

Former Justice Fort, the Republican nominee, in addition to a corps of orators that includes Senator Everett Colby and Sheriff Frank H. Sommer, announced yesterday that Governor Hughes, of New York State, had personally promised to come to New Jersey and speak in his behalf.

Governor Stokes now has two Supreme Court vacancies to fill, the one caused by the resignation of Mr. Fort and the other caused by the death of William Quick Garretson, a few months ago.

Governor Stokes in an interview in Trenton said yesterday: "The nomination of Mr. Fort was remarkable for its enthusiasm. The convention was thoroughly representative in character. There was full and free discussion. The fairest hearing was accorded to all. The different candidates were all well received, and after open and full deliberation the nomination was made. The close of the convention was marked by a unity of party spirit and good feeling that insures common and united action on the part of all Republicans and resultant victory in November."

OBITUARY.

Nathan Van Horn.

Nathan Van Horn, father of Dr. Alfred Van Horn, of this city, one of the oldest residents of North Catasauqua, Pa., died at that place on Thursday, in the eighty-fifth year of his age. He was ill but a week. He was a native of Luzerne county, Pa., where he resided during his boyhood He was engaged as a successful railroad and coal contractor. In 1854-5 he was superintendent of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company's canal from Mauch Chunk to Easton, and his splendid mechanical constructions are to be seen throughout the Wyoming and Lehigh valleys. Mr. Van Horn was a member of the Methodist church since early manhood, and an old-time Republican, more from principle than on party lines. The funeral service will be held Monday afternoon from Grace M. E. church, Catasauqua.

Mabel M. Hafner.

Mabel M. Hafner, aged 6 years, daughter of the late Mrs. Mary C. Hafner and John Hafner, died yesterday at the home of the father, 710 Central street.

The funeral service will be held from the late home Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The burial will be private.

Miss Jessie Stites.

Miss Jessie Stites, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan A. Stites, of Steiner place, died this morning after a long illness. The funeral service will be held on Monday and will be private.

John Cotter.

John Cotter, son of Mrs. Susan Cotter, of 507 Plainfield avenue, died this morning following a long illness. He is survived by a mother and sister. The funeral service will probably be held Tuesday morning and the burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

West Point Excursion Next Sunday.

The New Jersey Central will have an excursion to West Point and Newburgh next Sunday, September 22, from Plainfield at 8:52 a. m., for $1. The famous steamer Monmouth will take the excursionists up the river.

UNWILLING BRIDE SAVED

Rejected Suitor Forced Girl, at Pistol Point, to Go Before a Minister to Wed.

SAVED AT LAST MINUTE

She Appealed to the Pastor for Protection and He Promptly Seized the Bridegroom.

Believing her life to be in jeopardy, Miss Belle Crouse, daughter of the Rev. N. P. Crouse, of Stanhope, was forced Thursday afternoon to accompany her frantic and discarded wooer, Percy C. Bissell, also of Stanhope, to the residence of the Rev. Dr. Charles N. Griffin, in Asbury Park, where she was saved from an unwilling marriage by calling upon the minister for protection.

Miss Crouse has been stopping with her parents at an Ocean Grove hotel. Her father is the pastor of a Presbyterian church in Stanhope. They were forced to leave their North Jersey home in order to protect Miss Crouse from Bissell's unwelcome attentions. The youth, who is a student at the State Normal School, Trenton, learned of the girl's whereabouts, and arrived at Ocean Grove Thursday.

Meeting the girl on the street, Bissell, who was greatly excited, demanded that she marry him immediately. She flatly refused and begged him to leave town. Miss Crouse says she pleaded with him for nearly two hours. Finally Bissell said he had a revolver, and that if she refused to marry him he would shoot her and then himself. He showed the girl a loaded revolver, and she, becoming alarmed agreed to accompany him to Dr. Griffin's residence in Asbury Park and there marry him. She knows Dr. Griffin, and says she consented to accompany Bissell because she believed she could escape him at Dr. Griffin's house.

Calling a carriage, the couple were driven to the Griffin residence. The minister had inquired as to their ages, and was proceeding with other questions; when Miss Crouse broke down and told her story. Dr. Griffin threw his arms around the young man's neck, it is said, and after a brief struggle succeeded in quieting him. He was held a prisoner until Miss Crouse had returned to her boarding place in Ocean Grove, when he was released. Miss Crouse had barely entered the hotel when Bissell arrived, broke through a window and demanded to see her. He was told that she was not at home, and left the place. Later he was arrested by a policeman and ordered to leave the resort at once, which he did.

Bissell's courtship of Miss Crouse had been strenuously objected to by her parents. Bissell is a member of the First Presbyterian church of Stanhope, sang in the choir and tanght a class in the Sunday school, and his parents are leading members of the church. The girl's father on Monday of this week told his daughter things which caused her to write Bissell a letter at the Normal School in Trenton, refusing to have anything further to do with him. On Wednesday Dr. Crouse, Mrs. Crouse and their daughter came here, stopping at 76 Lake avenue, Ocean Grove.

Upon the receipt of Miss Crouse's letter, young Bissell left Trenton and went to Stanhope. Finding the parsonage closed he came on to Ocean Grove.

Asked yesterday what action he would take against Bissell, Miss Crouse's father said that he understood the young man's parents had planned to send him South. Mr. Crouse said he would be satisfied if the young man left Stanhope, and he would see to it that he did. He will tell of Thursday's happenings, he said, to his congregation on his return home.

VALUATIONS ARE REDUCED.

Amount Lopped Off in Railroad Tax Cases, However, Is Not Known.

Trenton, Sept. 21.—The State Board of Assessors concluded yesterday its consideration of the appeals taken by the railroads from the tax levy made against their property by Jersey City for the year 1906. Two opinions were filed, one concurred in by four members of the board and another by Commissioner Charles C. Black. The consideration of the appeals consumed thirty-four days, and during that time the valuations of nearly 1,000 different plots or parcels of land were considered.

That a substantial reduction in the assessed valuations has been made is known, but no member of the board hazards even a rough estimate as to the actual amount of the reduction. It was stated that this could not be even approximately arrived at until the judgment of the board had been compared with the returns of the assessors on file in Jersey City, a work which will probably consume several days at least.

Session of Classis of Raritan.

Raritan, Sept. 21.—The call for the fall session of the Classis of Raritan, which will convene here, in the Third Reformed church, Tuesday, October 8, at 10:30 a. m., was issued Thursday by Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff, stated clerk of the classis. Rev. Thomas M. Simanton, of Peapack, the retiring president, will preach the sermon.

MRS. SHOTWELL DIES AT FOUR SCORE AND TEN

THE WIDOW OF EDMUND SHOTWELL SUCCUMBS TO INFIRMATIES.

Mrs. Edmund Shotwell, one of the oldest residents of the city, died early this morning at her home on East Fifth street, aged 90 years. She had been in feeble health for a long time, partly due to a fall at her home, which resulted in the fracture of a bone. Since that time she was unable to go out.

Mrs. Shotwell was born at Woodbridge, and she and her first husband moved to this city early in life. He died several years later, after which she married Edmund Shotwell, who has also been dead a number of years. Mrs. Shotwell was especially well-known in religious, missionary and temperance work.

She was one of the charter members of the First Presbyterian church, and maintained the deepest interest in all its work throughout her life. In speaking today of her Rev. Charles E. Herring, her pastor, said that "she was a faithful servant and represented the highest type of goodness." Her unceasing interest in the cause of foreign and home missions made her a most valuable worker. As a member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union she was always advancing the cause of temperance. Although her physical condition prevented her from being active of late, she will be greatly missed in the church and her home.

Mrs. Shotwell's nearest surviving relatives are a brother, who resides at Metuchen, and three granddaughters, Mrs. A. V. Searing, Jr., Mrs. Russell Bond and Miss Jessie Pruden, all of this city.

The funeral service will be held from the residence of her granddaughter, Mrs. A. V. Searing, Jr., 403 East Fifth street, Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

DEATH WARRANT ISSUED.

Hanging of Schuyler Will Be the First In Hunterdon County Since 1828.

Trenton, Sept. 21.—Gov. Stokes issued through the Secretary of State, yesterday the death warrant for the execution of John B. Schuyler, who will be hanged at Flemington on October 4. The warrant directs that the execution shall take place between 10 o'clock in the morning and 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Schuyler was reprieved until October 4 in order that his case might be heard by the Court of Pardons. His application for a commutation of sentence was refused. Sheriff Elisha W. Opdycke informed Secretary Dickinson that the execution of Schuyler would be the first in Hunterdon county since 1828.

Henry C. White, of Mercer avenue, has purchased a hous on Rockview avenue, instead of Mercer avenue, as reported.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union, N. J., held hursday, September 5th, 1907, at 2:30 p. m. Roll call showed the following members present: Director King, Freeholders Adams, Cady, Cladek, Darby, Doane, Donahue, Fay, Grugner, Jones, Krouse, Maurer, Meisel, Perry, Pierson, Robinson, Smith, Swain, Wilbur and Woodruff—20. The minutes of the previous meeting were ordered approved as per printed copies sent to members.

COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

From A. H. Dundon, as follows:

Plainfield, N. J., August 9, 1907.

The following is a resolution passed by the board of health of the borough of North Plainfield, at its regular monthly meeting August 5th:

"A motion was regularly made and seconded, that the secretary be instructed to notify the Board of Freeholders of the unsanitary condition of Green Brook between Norwood and Girard avenues, and ask that the foul and decayed matter be removed and that such action be taken as is necessary to prevent the formation ofs tagnant pools of water in the bed of the brook."

I trust that you wil give this matter your immediate attention, and thanking you in advance, I am.

Yours very truly,

A. H. DUNDON.

On motion of Freeholder Doane received and referred to the mebers of this board from the city of Plainfield, and the county attorney.

At this time Mr. F. H. Haliday addressed the board relative to the removal of electric light poles along the line of Morris avenue, near Hilton, where the trolley was being constructed; he stated that his company desired to place its poles further back towards the fence lines, not because they were compelled to do it, but to have them run in conformity with the trolley poles and to make the roadway look better. The campany had met with objections by the property owners, and had decide that it was best to appeal to this board.

On motion of Freeholder Fay it was ordered that the matter be referred to the county road comittee, county attorney and county engineer.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By the committee on new bridge at Rahway:

We, the under signed committee, to whom was referred the building of a reinforced concrete arched bridge over Robinson's branch of the Rahway river at Rahway, would respectfully report that we have twice advertised for bids for the building of said bridge in conformity with the plans and specifications furnished by the engineer; and although numerous bids have been presented, your committee beg to report that the lowest bid for the doing of said work is about one thousand dollars ($1,000) above the appropriation heretofore made by this board for said work. Your comittee would therefore respectfully request that an extra appropriation of one thousand dollars be made so that the erection of said bridge may be proceeded with.

Dated September 5th, 1907.

Very respectfully yours,

Adolph H. Gruener, J. Hervey Doane, Henry Krouse, John J. Donarue, Noah Woodruff, committee.

Freeholder Wilbur moved that the report be received, and the appropriation as asked for be granted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By the committee on Springfield avenue bridge, Cranford:

Your committee appointed to examine the planking and beams on Springfield avenue bridge, at Cranford, would respectfully report that they have examined the same and find it in very bad condition, and will need immediate attention; therefore would recommend using all of the old planking that is possible and furnish new for the balance, the whole to cost not more than $165.

E. K. Adams, Adolph H. Gruener, Thomas J. Pierson, committee.

Freeholder Jones moved that the report be received and recommendation be adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By the committee on Five Bridges in Roselle Park:

Your committee would respectfully report that they completed the three first reported on, and would recommend two new bridges, one on Clay avenue and one on Webster avenue at a cost not to exceed $800 for the two.

Noah Woodruff, John J. Donahue, Joseph Perry, John Robinson, J. Logan Fay, committee.

Freeholder Darby moved that the report be received and recommendation be adopted, which was so ordered on roll call by a unanimous vote.

Freeholder Cady, as chairman of the committee of the whole, presented the following as the report of the said commitee:

Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 5th, 1907.

Resolved, That North Broad street, in the city of Elizabeth and the township of Union, from the intersection of King street northerly to the intersection of Elizabeth avenue and Hillside avenue; Elizabeth avenue, from the intersection of North Broad street and Hillside avenue, northeasterly to the Essex county line, all lying within the limits of the county of Union, being at least thirty-three fet in width, and being about one mile in length, and connecting at both the southerly and north easterly ends with permanently improved and paved streets or roads, be improved by the construction of a telford macadam roadway; and be it further resolved, that the clerk of this board be directed to send a copy of this resolution to the State commission of public roads, for his approval, and that upon the approval of the same by the State commissioner of public roads, the county and committee be authorized to proceed to have the said road surveyed in accordance with the provisions of chapter 58 of the laws of 1905. John N. Cady, chairman of the committee of the whole.

Freeholder Cladek moved that the report be received and recommendation be adopted, which motion, after some discussion, was withdrawn.

It was then ordered, on motion of Freeholder Cady, that the report as read be referred to a special committee of three and the county attorney for investigation, ther eport to be made within sixty days.

The director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Cady, Woodruff and Krouse.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Fay: Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to have the bridge in the city of Elizabeth on Trotter street painted, at a cost not to exceed $75.

Freeholder Krouse moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

The director appointed as the said committee Freeholders Fay, Meisel and Darby.

By Freeholder Krouse: Rosolved, That a committee of three be appointed to investigate the advisability of replanking, or converting into an iron beam, brick arch bridge, the bridge over the stream on Cranford road, Aldene, and report back to this board.

On motion of Freeholder Gruener the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Krouse, Wilbur and Pierson.

By Freeholder Meisel: Resolved, That the bill of the New Jersey State Hospital amounting to $8,541.72 be paid by the county collector when properly audited by the lunacy committee.

Freeholder Adams moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Cady: Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to visit the line bridge over Passaic river at the electric works, Summit, to consider the matter of repairing said bridge, and to report back at the next meeting.

Freeholder Jones moved the adoption of the resolution, which was duly seconded.

Freeholder Cady said that the work was something that needed immediate attention, but under the new rules he hesitated to ask for the appointment of a committee with power. It would not take more than $15 to do the work necessary.

Freeholder Woodruff moved to amend that the matter be referred to the Freeholders from the city of Sumit, with power to have necessary repairs made at a cost to this county not exceeding o$150.

Freeholder Jones accepted the amendment and the resolution, as amended, was adopted on roll call by a unanimous vote.

By Freeholder Gruener: Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to examine the bridge over a branch of the Rahway river, on Madison avenue, Rahway, and report the advisability of repairing the same or building a new bridge.

On motion of Freeholder Doane the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Gruener, Smith and Cladek.

The following bills properly audited and approved were read, and on roll call unanimously ordered paid:

STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

The Gloucester County Freeholders yesterday borrowed $10,000 to pay current bills.

There is some alarm in the lower part of Woodbury over an outbreak of scarlet fever and diphtheria.

The Salem City Council Wednesday night paid claims amounting to $65 for chickens that had been killed by dogs.

It is rumored that the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad Company will place smoking cars on the electric road on October 2, when the new schedule takes effect.

It is estimated that about 2,000 foreigners are engaged between Pemberton and Whitings harvesting the cranberry crop. In some localities the crop will be very good.

Millville glass manufacturers are now making every effort to fill their orders, and all claim that the capacity of their plants is inadequate to supply the great demand for ware.

The Clarksboro W. C. T. U. has elected these officers: President, Annie E. Dale; corresponding secretary, Mary R. Brown; recording secretary, Mary Owen; treasurer, L. E. Holmes.

Cases in the prevalent epidemic of typhoid fever have reached a record in the family of Augustus Hunt, Sr., of East Broad street, Burlington, where four children are ill with the disease.

Help is so scarce near Turnerville that farmers' wives are obliged to help in various ways. They gather tomatoes, melons and other produce, and one man's wife runs his milk route every morning.

Sunday will be "Pennington Seminary Day" in the Hurffville M. E. church. In the morning Dr. B. C. Lippinsott, D. D., will occupy the pulpit and Presiding Elder J. Morgan Reed will preach in the evening.

Harry B. Campbell, aged 44, one of Bridgeton's prominent dentists, died at his residence, on Atlantic street, yesterday, after a week's illness from typhoid fever. A widow and two daughters survive him.

On a charge of threatening Theophilus Wiley, his father-in-law, Frederick Calloway, of 523 Bailey street, was held in $300 bail in the Camden police court yesterday. His wife was a witness against him.

Methodists of Camden last night tendered a reception at the First M. E. church to Rev. Dr. J. Morgan Reed, the new presiding elder. Addresses were made by Mayor Ellis, Dr. A. E. Street and several clergymen.

The 3-year-old child of George Rivels, of Billingsport, was scalded to death by falling into a tub of hot water yesterday. Mrs. Rivels was doing some washing, when the child climbed upon the table and fell into the tub.

The salem county grand jury indicted Mayer Foreman and Morris Harris, who, it is alleged, held up and robbed Dr. Frederick Francks, of Norma, a few days ago. Foreman pleaded guilty, but Harris protested his innocence and will be tried next month.

In the Gloucester county Prohibition convention at Wenonah yesterday the following nominations were made: Assemblyman, Alexander Beith, of Westville; for county clerk, George O. Swartz, of Wenonah; for coroner, Dr. W. Underwood, of Woodbury.

Because Justice Garrison will be engaged in the Supreme Court next week, the trial of Charles Gibson and Stephen Dorsey, charged with the murder of Mrs. Frances Horner and Mrs. Victoria Natoli, will be postponed in the Camden court from next Monday until September 30.

Miss Bessie Segal, of Camden, began suit at Trenton for $10,000 damages against the Trenton and New Brunswick Fast Line Railroad Company for injuries she claims to have received on August 9 last while riding on a trolley car. The car caught fire, she says, and in her efforts to escape from the flames she was so badly cut and bruised that permanent disability has resulted.

Absinth.

The secret of making absinth, the subtle but harmful stimulant so poplar in France, was sold by its inventor to a distiller for $125. The distiller sold it for $50,000.

To cut a loaf of hot brown bread take a piece of twine and place it round the loaf and cross the ends and pull. There will be a clean cut without crumbs.

STORIES OF THE SECRET SERVICE

BY CAPTAIN PATRICK D. TYRRELL.

STORY No. 4

The Biebush Band

Being an Account of the Capture and Conviction of That Notorious Band of Counterfeiters of Which Fred Biebush Was the Leader.

By CAPTAIN PATRICK D. TYRRELL

As soon as I had taken a general view of the task I had before me and had secured all the general information available concerning Biebush I sent for a man named Thomas Gallagher, with whom I had had some dealings in the pursuit of criminals, and instructed him to try to buy counterfeit money from Biebush. Gallagher was from Seymour, Ind., and had done some good work in the capacity of a stool pigeon or "roper," as we called them in the secret service. Reinhardt Bossee, a countryman of Biebush, ran a saloon known as the Sheridan Exchange, at No. 2724 Franklin avenue, and his place was the headquarters for the Biebush clique. Biebush lived with his wife and children at No. 2733 Stoddart street, a short distance away.

Gallagher began work by frequenting the Bosse saloon, drinking, playing cards and gradually ingratiating himself into the confidence of the saloonkeeper and Biebush, who spent much time in the place. After considerable time was expended by him in this process Gallagher thought the time propitious for making a proposition to Biebush to purchase "coney." Claiming to be an ex-convict, he attempted to negotiate. Biebush promptly began to examine Gallagher as to his criminal history, and his wide and accurate knowledge of criminals made it possible for him to detect a spurious convict as a bank teller could detect a spurious coin or bill.

Gallagher could not pass the rigid examination to which Biebush subjected him, and the old German declined to sell him any "coney," making the excuse that he had none at that time. He evidently believed, however, that Gallagher was a crook who wanted to handle counterfeit money, for he did not appear suspicious of him except when it came to the point of giving himself into his power by personally negotiating a sale of "coney." This was failure number one.

Some time before this W. W. Kennoch, a shrewd Scotchman, had been relieved of the command of the New York division of the secret service on account of his over-indulgence in liquor He was an honest, conscientious and able operative, and had but the one fault, a fatal one, however, in a man who is carrying secrets of great importance to the government. After being relieved of his eastern command Kennoch did a good deal of work for the secret service as a "roper." He was familiar with criminals and crimes, was a plausible talker, and could worm his way into the good graces of counterfeiters with much skill.

I enlisted his services and assigned him to the same task I had given Gallagher. He worked slowly, making Bosse's saloon his rendezvous. When he thought his relations with Biebush were sufficiently close he broached the subject of buying "coney." As in the case of Gallagher, the wily Prussian did not take offense nor deny that he ever handled such goods, but he began to put Kennoch through a course of questioning concerning his past. Kennoch claimed he had served in a New York penitentiary, but he could not furnish such proofs as demanded, for the reason that no such proofs existed, and Biebush was cunning enough to know genuine proofs from false ones. Here was failure number two.

I did not consider myself any shrewder at such work than Kennoch, but it is a universal trait for one to believe he can do a thing better himself than anyone else can do it for him. I determined to see what I could do toward leading the old fox into our trap. I was not known to Biebush. I allowed my beard to grow into a stubble and chose the make-up of a river man. If I may be pardoned the digression I will say that with a few days' growth of beard and rough clothes I could look "tough" enough to satisfy even the fastidious Biebush, to whom the appearance of "toughness" was a strong recommendation. Thus attired I made my debut at Bosse's. There was a card game in progress most of the time, and I "sat in." Biebush and others whom I afterward learned were members of his band played with me. I frequently sat opposite my quarry and studied him closely. Friendly relations were established between us, and I thought matters were progressing favorably until I hinted to "Old Fred" that I would like to handle some of his goods. Then I found that I had made just as much progress as Gallagher and Kennoch had made—and no more. Biebush said he did not object to doing business with me, but that he "had no coney just then." From the way he spoke I knew I was wasting my time and before we landed him behind prison bars we would have to practice deeper and more circuitous methods in "roping." Failure number three.

Before I took charge of the St. Louis district I had been informed by a deputy warden in the Joliet penitentiary that a certain prisoner in that institution had intimated to him that he had information which might be of value to the secret service. I bethought myself of this and went to see him. He proved to be John Bridges, alias "Hoosier Bill," under sentence for horse stealing. This worthy was an Indiana product and something over 40 years old. He was a congenital criminal, stopping only at murder. His favorite form of crime was "garroting," that is, grabbing a pedestrian by the throat from behind, thrusting his knee into the small of the victim s back and thus pinioning him while his assistant relieved the prey of his valuables. But in the form of crime "Hoosier Bill" was not over particular, taking side excursions into the field of burglary, horse stealing and petty acts of knavery. The Chicago police knew him as a West side hold-up man of dangerous character.

I listened to his story with deep interest, as it bore directly on the case in hand—the landing of the big fish we were playing for—Fred Biebush. "Hoosier Bill" knew Biebush intimately. He had established this intimacy by presenting proper penitentiary credentials, of which he had plenty. Before he ran afoul of an Illinois sheriff and had been "settled" for driving off the wrong horse, Bridges had operated in St. Louis as a burglar and turned over to Biebush such of his "swag" as was suitable to the latter's purpose, especially the solid silverware. On one occasion he had arrived at the Biebush residence at four o'clock in the morning in a cab, bringing with him a package of silverware. The paper wrapper broke as he was about to ring the door bell, scattering the loot over the porch. The "cabby" helped him gather it up, after which Biebush appeared and took it into the house. I found this "cabby" later and used him as a witness against Biebush.

The "swag" brought in by burglars was paid for in "coney," according to Bridges, the thieves favoring this way of dealing because they received larger compensation in representative or counterfeit dollars than they would in genuine money. The silver was melted by Biebush into bars, to be used in the manufacture of silver money.

But this was not the most valuable information gleaned from "Hoosier Bill." He let me into the secret of the identity of the more active and important members of the Biebush gang. "Hankey" Thielen and John Sullivan, he said, were two of "Old Fred's" most trusted lieutenants, serving as boodle carriers and go-betweens in the delivery of "coney" for their chief to the persons with whom he elected to do business. Thielen, in addition to his supernumerary services to Biebush in circulating bad money, was a manufacturer of silver money, according to my informant.

Bridges did not know just where the Thielen plant was located, nor, in fact, was it ever located, although we had good reason to believe it was on the bank of the Mississippi river, above St. Louis. It was Bridges' understanding of the operations of the band that Thielen made the silver-plated coins from dies cut by one Joseph Hargate, an English engraver, who also did a legitimate engraving and die-cutting business in a small shop at his home.

Concerning Sullivan, however, "Hoosier Bill" had more definite knowledge. He was a colored coachman in the employ of Dr. A. S. Barnes, at No. 3013 Easton avenue, and, I believe, the only colored man who ever rose to a position of any prominence among "koniackers." He was fully trusted by Biebush and was credited by my informant with much native cunning. Later I also was prepared to credit him with much prudence in the conduct of his criminal operations, as the following incident will indicate:

Long after my talk with Bridges and while I was still at work on the case a colored coachman named Jackson came to my office one day and asked if I wanted him to buy some counterfeit money for me, that he was able to get all he wanted. I asked him from whom he could get it and he answered from Sullivan. I commissioned him to make a deal with Sullivan, and I have every reason to believe that he tried in good faith to do so, but he failed, Sullivan each time putting him off at the last moment.

Bridges said that soon after he first became acquainted with Biebush he met him on a Sunday while the latter was on his way to Sunday school, the old fellow always maintaining an attitude of much apparent respectability in these matters. Biebush said to him:

"Up to this time I have taken you at your word; have you any references?"

"Plenty of them," answered "Bill."

"Do you know Joe Butts and John O'Brien?" asked Biebush. Both of these were notorious criminal characters.

"Sure," said Bridges, and then proceeded to convince Biebush that he had such a wide and close acquaintance with noted criminals as to render him fit for initiation into the Biebush ring.

Biebush thereupon turned him over to Sullivan, showing the great confidence he had in the colored man. From Sullivan "Hoosier Bill" got several packages of half dollars, 40 in a package, and three rolls of bills of $100 representative money each. These he "shoved," turning over the proper proportion of the good money received to Sullivan. Thielen, Sullivan and Hargate, however, were not the only members of the Biebush ring about whom "Hoosier Bill" gave me information. There were William Whalen and Harry Wood, shovers, and John Evans and Mrs. Annie Welch, also shovers, but on a smaller scale.

Bridges was willing to go to St. Louis to serve as a witness against Biebush if the latter were tried; but in this we seemed to be cut off squarely by the Missouri statute previously referred to as one of Biebush's chief sources of security, prohibiting convicts or ex-convicts from testifying.

"Hoosier Bill's" information concerning Whalen and Woods merely confirmed what we knew. This pair made headquarters at Bosse's saloon, as did Thielen and Sullivan. Gallagher, Kennoch and I had placed ourselves on more or less friendly terms with Whalen and Woods while we were trying to buy "coney" from Biebush. They had told Gallagher in so many words that "Old Fred" was dealing extensively in counterfeit money and seemed anxious to initiate Gallagher into the secret ring, a plan which had been checked by Biebush himself.

While the information I received from Bridges was of great value as indicating the personnel of the band and the respective functions of each member, it had not given us any positive proof, and legal proof was all we wanted. It still remained for us to find a way to prove what we knew. In the face of our failure to "rope" Biebush up to that time it seemed like we would have to start farther back and get some of his subordinates in such a tight place that they would allow themselves to be used as witnesses against their chief in order to save themselves. Informers in criminal cases are of two kinds—voluntary and involuntary. Voluntary informers are usually prompted by motives of revenge or pecuniary gain—more often the former. Involuntary informers are usually the smaller fry in a criminal band who are willing to furnish evidence against the leading criminals under promise they will be leniently dealt with as a reward, but they must first be caught in the toils themselves. Because such principals in big criminal conspiracies at Fred Biebush, for their own safety, turn over to subordinates the performance of the tangible acts, the subordinates in an extensive plot like a counterfeiting job may be caught and convicted and their places always filled, the execution of the plot not being materially interfered with. When it is recalled that the paramount function of the United States secret service is to protect the currency and bonds of the government, it will be seen how eminently proper it is to compromise with petty crime by a subordinate, if by so doing the authorities can catch the big fellows and stop the perpetration of the one big crime. Therefore an informer who was close enough to Biebush to be able to furnish convicting evidence against him was what we sadly needed.

And let me say now that most effective detective work consists in being able to find the right kind of informers. I know full well that detectives generally are prone to throw a veil of mystery over their work, leaving the impression that some sort of supernatural vision has been brought to bear on the unraveling of the case in point, whereas, when the full truth is known, the solution of the mysterious case is made possible by the most commonplace information secured from voluntary or involuntary informers. That eminent creature of fiction, "Sherlock Holmes," never had to make his case good in a United States court, and if he had he would have needed a great deal of corroborative evidence that only could have come from ordinary, unromantic informers.

In this predicament I fixed on Whalen and Woods as the two men who most easily could be forced into a tight corner and who, once cornered, would be the most likely to sacrifice their superiors in crime to save themselves. So all my energies were bent in this direction. The men were communicative to those they trusted, fond of drink and of not overmuch intelligence. Woods was known as the husband of a woman who ran a boarding house of questionable character in Venice, Ill., just across the river from St. Louis. Whalen was engaged to be married to a young St. Louis woman whom he afterward married. I mention these details merely to show that these men were approachable at more points than the other members of the band.

It required some time to accomplish my purpose, but the time came when I felt safe in revealing my true identity to these men and in showing them the trap into which they had walked. They found themselves face to face with imprisonment on one hand and turning against Biebush on the other. They chose the latter alternative. These negotiations were conducted, of course, with the utmost secrecy and it was stipulated that they in no wise were to change front toward any member of the Biebush crowd. Mrs. Woods, through her alleged husband, was also enlisted on the government side and produced one bit of information which later proved of much value—that in the Chester, Ill., penitentiary was one John Mitchell, alias Jacobs, a former intimate of Biebush, who probably would be able to give the authorities desired information.

Mitchell, it seemed, was in Chester for the cure of the same habit that had brought "Hoosier Bill" to Joliet—that of getting his own horse confused with those of other people. He had boarded with Mrs. Woods and had revealed to her his association with Fred Biebush in handling counterfeit money. I considered the lead a promising one and went to Chester. I was amply repaid. I have told how Biebush escaped from the court when confronted by William Shelley, the counterfeit engraver, in 1870. I found it had been Mitchell who had met him at the foot of Perry street with a skiff, in which the "Great Southwest Koniacker" made his escape to Cabaret island, and that Mitchell had been arrested for stealing the horse and buggy with which to further aid his chief to escape the law. He had passed counterfeit money for Biebush in 1877 and 1878, recently enough to make the offense punishable at that time.

Of course, I secured from Mitchell all the information I could, and among it was this fact: While serving a previous term in the Joliet penitentiary Mitchell had formed the acquaintance of a fellow convict named Thomas, who was doing time for the theft of harness. Thomas had told Mitchell that he combined preaching with larceny and mixed the duties of singing revivalist with those of "koniacker." Subsequently Mitchell had carried written communications from Biebush to Thomas, and the latter, Mitchell said, was then in St. Louis following his incongruous occupations of saving souls and passing bad money.

But little time was required to locate Thomas. A man answering our description of him was found to be preaching at the Methodist church at Morgan and Twenty-fourth streets. To all appearances Rev. Andrew Jackson Thomas (sometimes known as Austin J. Thomas) was a sincere preacher and was doing good work in the vineyard. It was found that he was living with his wife in Finney avenue, west of Grand avenue. The couple had no children, and, so far as I could learn, they lived much to themselves, so far as their neighborhood was concerned. A "shadow" was placed on the house and its occupants. The police beat on which the Thomas residence was located was patroled by Officer Weigman of the St. Louis force, a most competent officer. From him it was learned that some time before a peddler had complained to him that the minister's wife had given him counterfeit coins for vegetables. This had happened often enough to convince even the thick-witted peddler it was not a coincidence, and he told his troubles to the policeman.

Do You Realize
that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.

Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.

Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?

We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.

In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.

Why not decide to get a new piano now?

REID DEFEATS ABBOTT IN BEST MATCH OF THE DAY

DUDLEY H. BARROWS ALSO MEETS DEFEAT IN GOLF TOUNAMENT.

Jerome D. Travers, of Montclair, the national champion, and Archie Reid, of St. Andrews, won their way to the final round in the invitation tournament of the Morris County Golf Club yesterday. Travers defeated A. A. Swords, of the home club, rather easily, and then disposed of L. M. Richmond, who earlier in the day had won a close match from Findlay S. Douglas, a former national champion.

Reid mained "on velvet" through defeating a pair of Yale men, Dwight Partridge and Robert Abbott. From a scoring point of view the Reid-Abbott contest was easily the best of the day. Both drove exceptionally long balls, although as a general thing Abbott had the advantage by a few yards.

A stymie prevented Reid from halving the first hole, which Abbott won in 4. After winning the short second in 3, Reid made seven consecutive 4s, giving him a 36 going out. This enabled him to turn for home 4 up, and he contributed to Abbott's discomfiture by bringing off a put for a 2 on the tenth green. Reid lost the twelfth and fourteenth holes because of stymies, but even then he had a comfortable lead of 3 up, with only four holes to play. A 4 in the sixteenth gave Reid the match by 4 up and 3 to play.

Abbott beat Dudley H. Barrows in the second round, 5 up and 3 to play, before going down to defeat at the hands of Archie Reid, and the two Plainfielders both found themselves out of the tournament.

TOBACCO.

Northern Florida and northern Georgia can boast of some of the largest tobacco plantations in the world.

It is said that one-eighth of the revenues of the United States is derived from the tobacco industry in one form or another.

According to statistics compiled by a tobacco expert, 6,500,000 acres of ground are now required to grow the world's tobacco crop.

"CENTRAL PARK"

Was——Is——Will Be

IT WAS, only about a year ago, just a pretty farm.

IT IS to day the finest building site in Plainfield, with broad avenues macadamized their entire width, concrete curb, sidewalks, trees, gas, electric light, in fact all improvements. Nearly $100,000 expended in new and handsome dwellings, now ready for the market.

WHAT IT WILL BE we hardly dare predict, with contracts out for even more extensive improvements and twelve more handsome residences.

Central Park is that beautifully situated tract bounded by Park, Prospect, Hillside and Thornton Avenues.

Mrs. Charles H. Frost and family, of Watchung avenue, have returned from their summer home at Rideau Lake, Canada.

Heathen Idol Defies Searchers.

Ocean City, Sept. 21.—Down at the bottom of the sea in the wreck of the large ship Sindia, which went ashore here six years ago, and whose hulk attracts the attention of travelers in the vicinity of Seventeenth street, is a terrible looking Chinese god, six feet in height and weighing two tons. Many divers who have worked on the wreck at intervals during the last few years have been unable to reach this heathen idol, but it is possible that efforts will be made to rescue it during next year. It is said, too, that in the vessel's hold, covered by sand and bamboo, are three cases of fine wood carvings, each case valued at $5,000.

STRANGE AILMENT FATAL

Dr. F. S. Adam's Death Supposed to be Due to Chargres Fever.

CONTRACTED IN GUATEM

Scientist Reached New Orleans Before it Developed—Attack Puzzled Doctors and Soon Proved Fatal.

Dr. Frederick S. Adams, formerly of this city, who for many years had been recognized as a geologist of note, and whose contributions to science in the past fifteen years have ranked him among the foremost scientists of the day, died on Friday in the J. Hood Wright Hospital, New York, of a peculiar disease, which the physicians of the hospital were unable to diagnose. His death was due to a fever the exact nature of which the physicians were unable to determine, but which he had contracted while on a trip to Guatemala in the interest of a mining firm of New York city.

Dr. Adams was born in Virginia fifty-five years ago. He was a descendant of Samuel Adams, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He was graduated from the University of Maryland, and later took a course in medicine at the University of Heidelberg. For some years he practiced his profession both in this country and abroad, but later his attention was drawn to the broad fields of chemistry.

During the years that he spent in his new field of endeavor Dr. Adams worked out and originated over 3,500 new formulas. One of his achievements was the discovery of the synthetic process of making ammonia, from which he later produced synthetically pure rubber.

The discovery of maleable bronze, which could be worked either during the hot or cold stage, was one of the scientist's most remarkable achievements. This has been known for some time as "delos metal," and, while almost attaining the hardness of steel, it can be produced at much less cost.

On July 25 last Dr. Adams accepted a commission from the International Mica Company, of 41 Wall street, New York, to investigate certain mica mines to which they held the rights in Guatemala. After an exhaustive examination of the property, in which he spent much of his time in the interior among the swampy sections of that country, he left for his return trip to the United States sixteen days ago. For five days he was held in quarantine at Punta Gorda, British Honduras, where, according to the regulations of the country, his temperature was taken daily. Through this test he passed, his condition at that time being normal.

No symptoms of any virulent disease developed until he reached New Orleans on the last lap of his journey, when a fever, which defied all known remedies, developed. On his arrival in New York several days ago he went to the home of a friend, Henry Howard Douglass, at 200 West Ninety-ninth street, New York, where his condition became so alarming that it was thought better to remove him to the hospital.

The physicians attached to the staff were unable to determine the exact form of fever of which he was a victim. It was supposed by them to have been a fever, well known in tropical countries, called chagres fever, which may be in the system for months before developing.

A son by a former marriage is at present living with his grandfather in Ecuador.

Dr. Adams resided in West Seventh street until his removal from Plainfield a few months ago.

Funeral of W. H. Miller.

The funeral sevice of William H. Miller, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, who died on Saturday, following a long illness, will be held from the late home on Park avenue tomorrow, and will be private. Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate, and the burial will be in North Plainfield Cemetery. Mrs. Charles Roberts, a sister of Mr. Miller, who resides in Brooklyn, was called here Saturday by her brother's death.

Mr. and Mrs. Bird Separate.

Fred W. Bird, formerly of East Front street, in The Daily Press today advertises that his wife, Sarah Bird, left his bed and board, and that he will not be responsible for any debt contracted by her. During the past few years Mr. Bird has not resided in Plainfield for any length of time. Last winter he spent in the South and will probably return there the coming winter.

—Neuman Brothers will have a fine display of peaches, pears, plums and vegetables tomorrow morning. It will pay your to come early and purchase your fruit or vegetables.

PREPARE FOR THE SYNOD

Local Ministers Will Attend 85th Annual Presbyterian Meeting.

AT ATLANTIC CITY

Moderator to Be Elected—485 Pastors Will Attend the Sessions.

Presbyterian ministers from all over the State, including those from Plainfield and North Plainfield, will attend the thirty-fifth annual session of the Synod of New Jersey, which will be held at Atlantic City, beginning Monday night, October 21, and will continue the two following days. The session will be opened with a celebration of the Lord's Supper, and following this there will be the annual sermon by the retiring moderator, Rev. I. Alstyne Blauvent, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Roselle.

The first order of business will be the election of a new moderator. The presbyteries take turns nominating the moderator, and this year the honor falls to the Presbytery of Morris and Orange. Next fall Newark will have the privilege.

The pastors will have the several Presbyterian churches in Atlantic City, with the co-operation of their sessions, are making arrangements for the entertainment of the ministers and elders at various hotels. Last autumn, when the synod met in Asbury Park there were present 218 ministers and seventy-three elders. In the State there are 485 Presbyterian ministers and 1,670 elders.

The synod will be addressed by representatives of all the boards of thec hurch, each man being allowed twenty minutes to present the needs of his department.

Some of the clergymen from the Newark Presbytery, who will probably attend, are Rev. Dr. David R. Frazer, of the First church; Rev. Julius H. Wolff, of the Third German Presbyterian church, the permanent clerk of the synod, and stated clerk and treasurer of the Presbytery of Newark; Rev. Dr. Isaiah B. Hopwood, of the Calvary church; Rev. Dr. David W. Lusk, of the Sixth church, and Rev. Joseph F. Folsom, of the Clinton Avenue church.

The other officers of the synod besides Mr. Blauvelt and Mr. Wolff are: Vice moderator, Rev. William P. Finney; stated clerk, Rev. Dr. Walter A. Brooks, of Trenton; recording clerk, Rev. John T. Kerr, of Elizabeth; treasurer, Rev. Dr. Eben B. Cobb, of Elizabeth, and treasurer of synodical home missions, William P. Stevenson, of Roselle.

Dr. Brooks will send out the call for the synod and the docket of business about October 1. There has been a large increase in members this year, the total communicants in Presbyterian churches being 79,029. This is against 78,024 last year and 74,785 the year previous. This year there have been added on examination 3,448, and on certificate 2,313.

Aside from the 485 ministers there are sixteen licentiates, five local evangelists and eighty-eight candidates for the ministry. There are 351 Presbyterian churches in the State, 597 deacons. Persons to the number of 1,219 were restored to membership, 1,962 dismissed to other churches, 1,886 placed on suspended roll and 1,051 died. There are 75,267 members in the Presbyterian Sunday schools of the State. Adults to the number of 1,022 and children to the number of 2,146 were baptized. The congregational expenses of the churches last year amounted to $1,201,415, and the sum contributed to missions and benevolences was $345,119.13.

His Wife Relented.

Stephen Murphy, of West Third street, was arrested Saturday night on complaint of his wife, who charged him with assaulting her while in a drunken rage. Mrs. Murphy relented yesterday, and this morning she pleaded for another chance for her husband before Judge Runyon in the city court. The magistrate released Murphy under suspended sentence, but scored him sharply in disposing of the case.

Injured Ones Improving.

Arthur E. Force, Jr., son of A. E. Force, the dry goods merchants, who was injured in a collision with a trolley car on Friday last, was reported at the hospital today as improving, as was also Miss Enright, the 17-year-old girl from Belvidere avenue, who jumped off a trolley car on Woodland avenue Friday night.

George Main to Wed.

Rev. Dr. D. C. Main, formerly of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, and now dean of Alfred University, has gone to Sisco, Fla., where this week he will officiate at the wedding of his son, George Main, of Sisco, and Miss Mabel Dixon, of Shiloh, this State.

—J. V. E. Vanderhoef has purchased the Ephriam Ackor property on Clinton avenue.

MANY WANT NOMINATION

Nine Democrats Seek the Three Places on Assembly Ticket.

NOMINATE WEDNESDAY

Mr. Katzenbach Will Be Unable to Be Present But It Will Be a Lively Meeting Just the Same.

There is likely to be some lively contests at the Union County Democratic convention to be held at Elizabeth on Wednesday. At present there are no less than nine candidates for the Assembly ticket, including William E. Tuttle, of Westfield; Fred C. Hyer, of Rahway, and Carl Mueller, of Elizabeth, who are looked upon as the successful candidates. Other candidates mentioned are Frederic's Reike, James E. Desmond, Joseph T. Hague, of Elizabeth, and John P. Owen, of this city. Frank Katzenbach, the gubernatorial candidate, has been invited to attend, but other engagements will prevent him.

A delegation from the German-American Alliance, representing 29,000 citizens, attended the meeting of the County Committee on Friday night and declared its intention of supporting the Democratic ticket. Brig.-Gen. Dennis F. Collins addressed the members, informing them that the Democratic party in the county and State had never been in better condition to win a signal victory. James E. Martine, the defeated gubernatorial candidate, voiced his sentiments in a singing speech. He stated that since the convention he had received over 100 letters from as many Republicans and Democrats, some expressing regrets and others sympathy. He cherished highly the sentiments of praise expressed in the letters.

PLAINFIELD ESCAPES DAMAGE FROM EQUINOX

TAIL-END OF STORM SWEEPS OVER CITY: OTHER PLACES SUFFER.

Plainfield felt the tail-end sweep of an equinoctial storm Saturday afternoon. No damage was reported here, but the rest of the metropolitan district was not so fortunate. The storm started at 4 o'clock, with the sky overcast by inky clouds. The wind rose to a gale and threatened damage for a while, but the blow eased up in a short time, before anything happened. There was some play of lightning, but not much as big storms go.

Other parts of New Jersey were not so fortunate. Many trees were blown down and numerous places were struck by lightning. At Morristown the temporary buildings which have been erected for the Morristown Field Club show suffered severely. The wind tore the roof from one barn and carried it bodily into a ravine a quarter of a mile away. A lot of fruit was blown down.

Sidewalks and roofs of other buildings were torn away and miscellaneous pieces were strewn over the baseball field and golf links. Pieces of tar paper used for roofing made the air black in one section and large pieces were blown half a mile away.

At Hackensack trees were blown across the trolley tracks. At Teaneck one fell directly in front of a moving car, and only the promptness of the motorman prevented a wreck.

Sunday Drunks in the Borough.

Sheridan Jones and Charles Brighton, both colored, were arrested in the borough yesterday on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. They were given a hearing this morning before Recorder Dolliver. Jones was given five days in the borough lockup and Brighton his choice between $3 and three days in the lockup. He will probably take the three days.

Miss Justina L. Atterbury.

Miss Justina Livingston Atterbury, sister of Albert A. Atterbury, of West Seventh street, died at her home in Trenton yesterday, at the age of 50 years. She was a member of one of the oldest families in Trenton. She was a twin sister of Mrs. Horace Fisk, of Chicago. Mrs. William S. Stryker, widow of the late adjutant general of New Jersey, is her first cousin.

Funeral of John Cotter.

The funeral service of John Cotter, of Plainfield avenue, will be held from the late home tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock from the home and 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church. The burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

NEARLY ELECTROCUTED BY BROKEN LIGHT WIRE

LEWIS M. WILLIS ESCAPED DEATH BY FRACTION OF AN INCH.

On his way home from the matinee races, Saturday afternoon, Lewis M. Willis, of South avenue, had a narrow escape from death by electricity. As he walked beneath it at South and Leland avenues, a heavy electric light cable snapped, and one of the sections, sputtering fire, dropped on him.

The deadly end missed him by a fraction of an inch. The cable struck him with staggering force, but the bare point of wire did not come into contact with him. He realized the danger and leaped away from the wire just as the flashing end coiled toward him.

The blow from the cable did not harm Mr. Willis, but he had a shaky feeling for a while as he figured how close he came to electrocution.

PICKED HIS POCKETS WHILE HE WAS ASLEEP

CHARLES ROSE LOSES HIS WAGES ON TROLLEY CAR.

Charles Rose, employed as a motorman by the Public Service Corporation, was "touched" Saturday night, while returning to his home at 126 Watchung avenue, from Dunellen, after completing his day's work. He was making the trip home in a trolley car and being tired, quickly fell asleep. In the meantime someone boarded the car and took a seat with Rose. Before he reached this city, the stranger left the car.

When Rose arrived home he went down in his pocket for his hard-earned cash, intending to put it away for safe-keeping, when to his great surprise he discovered that his roll had disappeared. Being unable to get any trace of the stranger or his money, there is no possible chance of Rose securing the return of the cash. The theft has been reported to the police, but Chief Kiely gives Rose little encouragement as to regaining his money.

HARVEST HOME OF S. A. IS A GREAT SUCCESS

CELEBRATION WILL CLOSE WITH REPRESENTATION OF HUSBANDRY.

With a musical service illustrative of husbandry, the harvest home celebration of the Salvation Army will end tonight. The three days' affair has been a great success so far, and it is expected to wind up completely successful.

The celebration started Saturday night, with the reception of the contributions. The latter were generous. The platform front was soon piled high with fruits, vegetables and other good things. The offerings were effectively arranged, and with ropes of green and flowers to set them off, the platform presented an attractive appearance. Capt. Hopkins, the local commander, spoke, and Mrs. Hopkins sang.

Another service was held yesterday morning, and a third, a harvest home song service, was held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. At the latter service, Rev. Charles Dennis, of New York, a reformed burglar, and John Le Matty, of the Plainfield Rescue Mission, spoke. Mrs. Hopkins spoke.

At the service last night W. G. Slauson, of Cleveland, a commercial traveller who is active in Salvation Army work, spoke. His theme was "Sowing and Reaping."

At tonight's service the platform will represent a field. All the steps of plowing, planting and harvesting will be illustrated as the audience sings appropriate songs. Capt. Hopkins will make the address.

The contributions made to the "harvest" will be distributed, for the most part, among poor families of the city.

Highlanders Lose to Brooksides.

The Highlanders, of this city, who claim the city championship outside the Inter-City Amateur League, were defeated by the Brookside A. C. in a six-inning game Saturday afternoon, the score being 6 to 5. Conshee pitched a fine game for the Brooksides.

Funeral of Mabel Haffner.

The funeral service of Mabel Haffner, the 6-year-old daughter of John Haffner, of Central street, was held from the late home this afternoon. Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of Faith chapel, conducted the service, and the burial was in Hillside Cemetery.

CARDS LEAD TO MURDER

Man Accused of Cheating is Waylaid by Alleged victim at Raritan.

SHOT HIM IN THE BACK

Savero Killed Sasone After Demanding His Money Back—Three Shots Fired.

After quarreling over a game of cards in a back room of a fruit store at Raritan, in which he claimed to have lost $2, Samuel Savero waylaid Joseph Sansone and shot him twice in the back about dusk Saturday, killing him instantly. Savero, Sansone and a number of other Italians had been gambling all the afternoon and drinks were frequently passed around. Savero claimed Sansone was cheating and demanded his money back. Becoming abusive, he was put out and then broke the windows of the place with stones.

When Sansone was on his way home Savero fired three shots in quick succession and Sansone fell into the gutter. Savero walked over to the prostrate body and again shot it. Then, with the revolver in his hand, he ran to his home. Policeman Hickey found him hiding in the garret of his home on Girst street. He was arrested and later brought to the Somerset county jail.

Both men were married. Sansone was a barber and worked at Whitehouse, and Savero worked in the woolen mills at Raritan.

GETTING READY TO RAISE PRICE OF MILK

DEALERS SAY IT COST THEM TOO MUCH AT PRESENT RATE.

Local milkmen are preparing to follow the example set by the Elizabeth dealers, last week, and raise the price of milk to the consumer. They will hold a meeting tonight, according to statements made this morning, to decide on the advance.

The dealers allege several reasons for the proposed advance. Milk is scarce, they say, and they have to buy it at distant points. Feed is higher, and the dairymen want more for the product. It is said that the dealers pay almost as much for the milk now as they are getting from the consumers. It is said to cost them five or six cents a quart.

The Elizabeth dealers raised the price from eight to nine cents a quart. The price here has varied from seven to ten cents, according to the dealer. Some of the dairies and dealers here claim a "fancy" quality for their milk and get fancy prices. There will probably be a cent advance all along the line.

NEIGHBORS PUT OUT FIRE WITH BIG PAILS OF WATER.

Martin Thelan's Loss On Home Amounted to Less Than $200.

An alarm of fire sent in from Box 89, Rock avenue and West Front street, summoned the department to that part of the city at 3:15 Saturday afternoon. When the apparatus reached the box it was learned that the fire which had been burning in the house occupied by Martin Thelan on Ann street, near Leslie avenue, had been extinguished by the neighbors with big pails of water. The house is located outside of the city limits and the department was not obliged to go there. The damage to the house amounted to less than $200.

When the alarm was sent in Nos 2 and 3 hose wagons, the truck and the chemical engine from the West End house responded. On its way through West Second street, the bridle on one of the truck team broke and it was necessary to get another bridle before the apparatus could proceed.

Miss Helen Hyde Entertains.

Miss Helen Hyde, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis K. Hyde, of Mountain avenue, who leaves October 1 for Dobbs Ferry, where she will attend school, gave an informal dinner party and dance at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday night for a few of her friends. Covers were laid for twenty-four, and the affair proved to be a delightful one.

W. C. T. U. Convention.

The twenty-third annual convention of the Union County W. C. T U. will be held in the Presbyterian church, Dunellen, tomorrow. An extended program, previously published in The Daily Press, will be followed. Officers will be elected and ways and means for increasing interest in temperance work discussed.

PROBLEMS OF CHURCHMEN

Knotty Questions to Come Before Triennial Convention of Episcopalians.

DIOCESAN DELEGATES

Dean Rodman to Attend Sessions at Richmond, Va.—Bishop Scarborough to Take Part.

Deputies from the diocese of New Jersey to the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which will meet in triennial session at Richmond, Va., beginning Wednesday, October 2, and continuing three weeks or more will begin to leave this vicinity Monday, September 30, although most of them will not start until Tuesday, October 1. Bishop Scarborough will have to be present some time before the convention opens, as he will attend several commission meetings. Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace church, this city, will attend the session.

Bishop John Scarborough, of the diocese of New Jersey, will also attend, and the deputies from that body are: Clerical—Rev. Dr. Alfred B. Baker, rector of Trinity church, Princeton; Rev. Dr. W. Strother Jones, of St. Michael's church, Trenton; Rev. Rr. Bowden Shepherd, of Christ church, Riverton, and Rev. James Stoddard, of St. Andrew's church, Mt. Holly. Lay—John N. Carpenter, of New Brunswick; William D. Oliver, of Burlington; Harry Humphreys, of Camden, and Charles E. Merritt, of Mt. Holly.

At the Boston convention of 1904 a canon that no Episcopal minister should be allowed to marry a divorced person while the former husband or wife lived went through the house of bishops, but was lost in the house of deputies. However, there was a compromise, and an amended canon went through which put so many barriers around a clergyman officiating at such marriages that most of them have been extremely particular ever since. But there are still many who favor the same rule which the Roman Catholic Church has, and the principal exponent of this belief is Bishop William Croswell Doane, of Albany, brother of the late Monsignor Doane, of Newark, who is giving much of his life to this battle. The bishop calls upon all to take a stand against all divorce.

The twenty-third annual conference of Church Workers Among Colored People will be held in St. Augustine's church, Asbury Park, September 17-20.

The whole church seems to be divided on the question. There seem to be as many against the creation of colored bishops as are in favor of such a movement, and numbers are exploiting their ideas through the church publications. All are agreed that it is a condition that must be met.

The house of bishops, representing fifty-four dioceses, will be presided over by Right Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, of St. Louis, president of the house, he being the senior member in point of service. One of the questions which, it s said, will come up is as to whether it would not be better to elect from the floor a bishop to preside rather than to place all of this burden upon the eldest, who is too apt to be enfeebled by age.

Funeral of Mrs. Stites.

The funeral service of Miss Jessie Stites, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Stites, of Steiner place, were held from the late home this afternoon and were private. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, officiated. The burial was in Hillside Cemetery.

Stole Chewing Gum.

Amos Stites, keeper of a pool room on Somerset street, reported to the police this morning that small boys broke into his store yesterday and stole a chewing gum slot machine. They broke the machine and left it in the yard, stowing the gum in their clothes.

High School Filling Up.

Lack of room is beginning to make itself felt already at the new High School. It was necessary this morning, to relieve crowding, to convert the drawing room into a class room. Part of the corridor is being partitioned off for a drawing room.

All-Plainfields Defeated.

The All-Plainfield team was defeated in a game with the Lincoln A. C., played at Lincoln yesterday. The score was 3 to 2. Conshee and Schoeller formed the battery for the winning team, and Mullen and Trotter for the Plainfielders.

Hope Chapel Choir Outing.

The members of the Hope chapel choir spent a pleasant time on New Market Lake Saturday night, and after a row all adjourned to a nearby hotel for supper. The affair was arranged by Miss Edna Eckert and Frank Rimmer.

YOUNG WOMAN HELD UP

Highwayman Attacks Servant Girl at Scotch Plains.

VICTIM IS PROSTRATED

Miss Mary Dubinskie Makes Heroic Struggle But Strange Man Got $10 Booty—Attack at a Lonely Spot.

Miss Mary Dubinskie, employed as a maid by Charles Sternheim, at Scotch Plains, was the victim of a hold-up, while returning to her home from Elizabeth at 9:30 o'clock last night. She was walking along Park avenue, between the Meadow bridge and the Episcopal church, when a man jumped out from behind some bushes and attacked her.

The stranger grabbed the woman by the throat, almost choking her to death. He beat her about the face and head. She fought the highwayman with all her strength, and was about to give up, when Miss Sadie Melinsky and Miss Annie Bowliske, two friends, with whom she had visited in Elizabeth in the afternoon, came along. The thug heard their footsteps and made good his escape, leaving Miss Dubinskie in the street to her own fate. The stranger took $10 from the woman's pocket.

Weak from a severe nervous shock and from severe injuries inflicted, Miss Dubinskie was unable to reach her home alone. With the assistance of her friends she was finally taken there and a physician was summoned. Today she is confined to her bed.

Early in the afternoon the three women went to Elizabeth by trolley to visit some friends. Miss Dubinskie left Elizabeth for home about 8:30, reaching Scotch Plains ahead of her companions. At first she decided to wait for the next car, thinking they would be on it, but changing her mind she started to walk home alone, when she was encountered by the highwayman.

The citizens of Scotch Plains are so aroused that it s expected that the appointment of extra policemen for night duty will be demanded of the township committee.

GOVERNOR STOKES WILL SPEAK TO THE BANKERS.

Local Institutions Will Be Represented at the Sessions.

Governor E. C. Stokes, president of the Mechanics' National Bank, Trenton, will deliver an address of welcome Wednesday at the annual convention of the American Bankers' Association, to be held in Atlantic City. J. Herbert Case will represent the Plainfield Trust Company and William F. Arnold the City National Bank at the sessions. The Plainfield Savings Bank and the First National Bank will also be represented.

HARRY DAWSON WINS.

Adam Blair's Classy Pacer Takes First Money at Allentown.

Harry Dawson, the fast and classy pacer owned by Adam Blair, won first money in the 2:24 class at the Allentown fair, Saturday afternoon. The purse was $500. The time was 2:17¼, 2:13¼, 2:14¼. Charles Opdyke, of Somerville, who has driven Harry Dawson all this season, handled the ribbons.

Harry Dawson has performed splendidly on the circuit. He got second money at Bethlehem, first money at Nazareth, and got third money in an earlier meet at Allentown.

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra to Organize.

Martin A. Korff has been re-engaged to take charge of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra for the coming season and former members as well as any who can play an instrument, are invited to attend the first rehearsal to be held at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night, October 7, at 8 o'clock. The next concert is expected to be given on November 4 or 11.

On Training Negroes.

Rev. Dr. James E. Shepard, field secretary for work among the negroes for the International Sunday School Association, spoke on the religious training of the negro at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. The singing was by a choir of twenty voices, composed of colored singers. The attendance was good.

Mrs. Fowler W. Vail.

Mrs. Fowler W. Vail died yesterday afternoon, at her home on Washington avenue, Dunellen, after a lingering illness. She is survived by her husband and a grown family. The funeral will be held from the house Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Miss Ida Stewart, of 526 West Seventh street, has returned from Woodstock, Ulster County, N. Y., where she spent the summer.

Start life afresh. Borrow from us to pay the several you owe and make payments in keeping with your income. By so doing you keep your credit good. Ease up the pressure on yourself and have a chance to "turn around" in other things needed for the family.

An Illustration

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The W. C. T. U. convention, the program of which was published in The Daily Press a short time ago, will be held in the Presbyterian church tomorrow.

Rev. Frank Fletcher has been spending a few days at home, after passing the greater part of the summer at East Long Meadow, Mass.

Oscar Kratzel has given up his position in the employ of Jacob Young to take a course at the Plainfield Business College.

Miss Margaret Zimmerman has been spending a few days at the home of her brother, Harry Zimmerman.

The G. E. Club will meet tonight, instead of tomorrow night, at the home of Mrs. William Ackerman.

Rally day exercises were held at the Presbyterian Sunday-school yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Emma De Long has been entertaining her brother, James Wotten, of Orange.

Miss Sophia Jenner has been spending a week visiting relatives in Rutherford.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pennock have been entertaining a friend from Atlantic City.

Several children were baptized at the Presbyterian church yesterday morning.

William Dealaman has returned from a short stay at Delaware Water Gap.

An initiation will take place at the meeting of Friendship Council tonight.

Butcher L. L. Block has added a travelling "market" to his business.

Runyon Clawson has been on the sick list the past week.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The local ball team was defeated by the Rahway A. C. team at Rahway, Saturday afternoon, by the score of 7 to 0. The home team played in hard luck on hits. Anybody seemed to hit the ball, only one strike-out being credited to the Rahway pitcher. Phenomenal fielding by the A. C. team cut down all kinds of hits. This together with loose fielding at critical stages of the game told against the home team and resulted in its defeat.

Rev. George Francis occupied the pulpit again at the Baptist church yesterday morning. Rev. Dr. Pikehurst, of Milburn, being unable to be present as arranged.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grant, of West Front street, were the guests over Sunday of Mrs. Grant's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Sr.

The heavy shower Saturday afternoon did no damage in town, more than to litter the sidewalks with dead limbs from the shade trees.

The members of the Epworth League held an interesting weekly gathering in the class rooms of the Methodist church last night.

The B. Y. P. U. meeting was the only evening service held at the Baptist church last night.

An all-day clam-bake was held yesterday on the mountains, near the Back pond.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The storm of Saturday was very severe in this vicinity, knocking off much of the fruit, uprooting trees and doing much damage to the corn. The lightning struck a large willow tree, overhanging the lake on W. E. Smith's place.

Among the number from here at Bellewood Park, yesterday, were Mrs. Charles Smith and her son, Walton, Edward Hanlon, John Linaberry and Thomas Currin.

Leonard Attlee, of New York, spent Sunday at the home of his parents, Rev. and Mrs. A. C. T. Attlee.

Fred Lounsberry is putting a new fence around his property along the road front.

Mrs. Attlee is suffering from a severe attack of neuralgia in her face.

CHATHAM.

The initial enrollment of the Chatham public school is about as large as that of last year, notwithstanding the fact that the last two years of High School work have been abandoned and that the St. Patrick's parochial school has made a great bid for Catholic children in the parish to attend. The attendance this year is 200.

Seymour Best, father of Mrs. M. B. Lum, and Chatham's oldest resident, is dangerously ill at his home on Main street. Mr. Best is 94 years old.

Mrs. Timothy Stickle, of Boonton, is spending a few days with her nieces, Mrs. E. D. Kemble and Mrs. C. Lerch, on Hedges avenue.

A box social will be held under the auspices of Chatham Lodge, I. O. O. F., in its lodge rooms next Monday night.

Conrad Van Fleet has returned home after spending several days at Bangor, Pa.

SOMERVILLE.

Mrs. J. Harper Smith, of Altemont place, is entertaining her sister, Mrs. T. W. Freck, of Cleveland, O.

Miss Grace Castner has been a guest this week of Miss Mary Clarkson, at North Branch.

De Jauns La Fevre, of West Cliff street, is spending a week in Ulster county, New York.

Miss Nellie Apgar, of Middaugh street, is teaching in the public school at Newark.

Miss Eleanor Cassidy, of Jacksonville, Fla., is a guest here of Miss Alice Hoffman.

Frank Gunston sailed on Thursday for England, where he will go in business.

Robert Field is the guest of his aunt, Mrs. John Parseiles, at Asbury Park.

Miss Lillian Meseroll has been spending this week in New York.

C. V. Knowles, of West High street, is visiting relatives in Brooklyn.

SUMMIT.

Manager Joseph Mooney has been busy for several weeks arranging the schedule of the Spartan football team. Among the teams that will be encountered by the locals on the gridiron this fall are the Socials, the Invincibles, the Franklins and Shermans.

George W. Dixon, formerly physical director of the local Y. M. C. A., has been engaged as physical instructor at Montclair High School.

Miss Dennison Cooper, of Chester, has been visiting her cousin, Miss Bessie Teddel, of Oak Ridge avenue.

Howard and Stuart Thompson have returned to this city, after an absence of several months.

Herman Kehan, of Morris avenue, has been confined to his home for a few days by illness.

RARITAN.

Philip Speer, of New York, has been spending part of this week with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cain here.

Miss Tessie Greene, of New York, is a guest of her sister, Mrs. Joseph Harding, on Doughty street.

Miss Rhoda V. Corcoran has returned to her home, after spending three weeks in Connecticut.

Miss Grace Applegate has returned from Asbury Park, where she spent the summer months.

Mrs. John Gulick has returned from Newark, where she spent a week with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Hunt are entertaining Miss Ethel Schrope, of Jersey City.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Crouse has been visiting relatives in New York.

William F. Greene has been visiting in Elizabeth this week.

Miss Elizabeth Cary is a guest of friends in New York city.

MADISON.

The business places of Madison have been appropriately draped owing to the death of D. Willis James. His marked philanthropy in giving the town the park, library and mercantile buildings, besides other acts of charity, endeared him to the Madison people.

Howard E. Lum and family have returned from Spring Lake.

Harold Hope, of Florham Farms, has entered Stevens preparatory school at Hoboken.

RAHWAY.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. McNaughton celebrated the first anniversary of their marriage Friday night.

James Ritchie, of Tacoma, was in town yesterday renewing acquaintances.

Chester Riland has entered Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia.

WESTFIELD.

Nelson Everett, of Westfield, has brought suit against the Public Service Corporation for $5 000 damages. Everett was knocked down by a car last winter in Garwood. He is still under the doctor's care.

The new officers of the Epworth League of the Westfield Methodist church are: Herbert Welsh, president; Miss Florence Taylor, president.

William E. Tuttle, Jr., of Westfield, Friday consented to have his name go before the Democratic convention as a candidate for Assembly.

The tax rate in Westfield this year will be the same as last year, $1.78 on $100 valuation.

NORTH BRANCH.

John S. Everett and family, of Neshanic, and William Dalley, of South Branch, and Ward Nelson, of Brooklyn, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. William Van Fleet at Centreville.

Miss Helen F. Clark, who is the director of the New York Foreigners' Mission, lectured in the Presbyterian church yesterday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Amerman and Mr. Kennedy, of Newark, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. William D. Amerman, near Neshanic.

Mr. and Mrs. John Biggs and children, of Flemington, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Van Fleet at South Branch.

Mrs. Douglas Fraser and children, of Perth Amboy, are visiting Mrs. Fraser's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Huff, at Pluckemin.

Mrs. John G. Cadington, of this place, has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. George Van Nest, at Dover, for a few days.

Dr. James D. Van Derveer, of this place, has been re-elected president of the Thirtieth New Jersey Veteran Association.

Mrs. J. P. Hall, of South Branch, was a recent guest of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Van Derbeek, in this place.

While angling in the North Branch river a few days ago, Charles Blaufuss caught a three-pound bass.

Mrs. Henry Hammann, of North Branch, who has been ill for some time, is able to be about again.

Charles S. Messenger and family have moved from Plainfield to Neshanic.

PERSONAL.

Miss Sarah Carney, of Central avenue, is visiting relatives in Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. DeGraff, of Central avenue, are home from their summer outing.

Clarence Hand, of Fairview avenue, returned to Cornell University today to resume his studies.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Even were Shakespeare's glorious tragedy of "King Lear" to be acted here by a player of less consequence than Mr. Robert Mantell, the occasion would still be one of great interest for theatre-goers, for the play is a rarity, so far as the stage is concerned. Edwin Booth did not find in it one of his best mediums, and acted in it rather infrequently, even after his successful alliance with the late Lawrence Barrett, who, too, in his earlier days, had played the mad old king. Sir Henry Irving revived the great tragedy in London a few years before his lamented death, with Miss Ellen Terry as Cordelia; but the play did not add to the great Englishman's fame or fortune, and was soon withdrawn.

Mr. Mantell revived the tragedy in December, 1905, in New York city, in the face of discouragement from everybody save his manager, Mr. William A. Brady. Their faith in the scheme was rewarded promptly. The play was acted for seventeen consecutive nights in the Garden Theatre—an amazing run for a tragedy so fine and great that it had been regarded for years as beyond the abilities of any actor. Later, returning to New York in the following March, Mr. Mantell gave nine more performances as Lear. In November of last year, he added to the score by acting it nine times in the Academy of Music, and he gave four additional performances in April in the beautiful New Amsterdam Theatre, making in all thirty-nine performances in little more than a year of a play that had not been seen in New York city in more than a quarter of a century, save when acted in Italian by Tomasso Salvini and in German by Sonnenthal and Possart, respectively.

Mr. Mantell will be seen as King Lear on the night of Tuesday, November 1, in the New Plainfield theatre.

Add Hoyt, known in the theatrical profession as the Man Behind the Laugh, will appear in connection with D. W. Robertson's famous moving picture company that returns to Plainfield for the twelfth time. In addition all the latest moving pictures and illustrated songs will be presented. The special engagement is announced of Harry Willard, piccolo banjoist, Paul Cohn, musical director and accompanist, and other attractions.

"Peaceful Valley," the charming idyl of New England life in which the late Sol Smith Russell achieved such remarkable success, is being revived this season by E. K. Martin, who has given the play a massive production and who has engaged a company of surpassing worth to interpret it. Edward Saxon, a widely known character comedian, is to play the role of Hosea Howe, and Carson Bradford, a young Southern actor, is assuming the leading juvenile role. "Peaceful Valley" will come here on September 27.

"Around the Clock," which is a comedy with real music, by L. O. Smith and Sebastian Hiller, is underlined as the next attraction at the theatre, September 25. "Around the Clock" introduces or rather further exploits the Ritchie capabilities and those of his London Comedy Company, who have been such a success and furore at the vaudeville houses all over the country. Those who raved and laughed over the clever antics of this inimitable band of comedians and comediennes will find endless pleasure in witnessing "Around the Clock."

The company that will present Richard Brinsley Sheridan's farce comedy, "The Rivals," at the New Plainfield theatre September 30, is headed by Joseph Jefferson, who is to be the Sir Lucius, and William Winter Jefferson, who assumes the role made famous by the late Mr. Joseph Jefferson. These sons of an illustrious father, will be supported by Theodore Hamilton, Eugene O'Brien, Richard Lyle, Roger Burnham, Blanche Bender, Roberta Brennan and Emilie Melville.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

The choicest viands to be found in the market are served at Timbo's restaurant. This is the popular place to eat.

Putnam & DeGraw, the West Front street dry goods merchants, are showing an exceptionally attractive line of goods for fall and winter, well worth your attention.

Clayton M. Neagle, the West Front street druggist, prides himself on the fact that he carries a superior line of drugs, medicines and toilet articles. Prices reasonable.

The return of summer weather on Saturday made L. W. Randolph's famous soda water refreshing. However, if the weather should suddenly turn cold don't forget that Randolph has just the medicine to cure any trouble brought about by a change in the temperature.

The Misses Elise and Anna Moldenke, of Watchung, have returned to the Mary Drexel school, Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Vail, who have been spending the summer at Watchung, have returned to their home in Newark.

George Neff, of Fairview avenue, has passed his entrance examination for the preparatory school at Stevens Institute.

Mr. and Mrs. William Suydam, of New York, who have been spending the summer at Martinsville, have moved to Plainfield.

BRAKEMAN HURLED TO DEATH.

Samuel H. Leuther Loses Life as a Result of Collision With Bridge.

Elizabeth, Sept. 23.—Samuel H. Leuther, a brakeman on the Point Pleasant special of the Jersey Central, was almost instantly killed late Friday afternoon at Oceanport, as the result of his head coming into collision with a bridge. He was knocked off the train and his skull was badly fractured. He died a few minutes after being picked up. He was 21 years old, was born here and leaves a widow.

The victim was a son of Samuel Leuther, of 82 Court street, Elizabethport, and was a member of Orient Council, American Mechanics, and a communicant of Grace Episcopal cnurch, Elizabethport. His father was an old employe of the Singer Sewing Machine Company. The body was brought to his home late Friday night.

THOUGHT FIRST OF MOTHER.

Boy Ran Over by Auto Pleads Not to be Taken Home to Her.

Because he did not want to frighten his mother, the police had literally to take Donald Rupert, of 235 Front street, Trenton, by force to his home after he had been run over by City Treasurer Stokes' automobile late last night.

The boy was on a bicycle, when he was hit. He pleaded hard not to be taken home. The serious injuries he had sustained prompted the police to act promptly and carry the lad to his home near by. Rupert is seriously hurt and may have been injured internally.

Miss Lottie C. Black, of Rutherford, N. J., is spending a few days with friends in town.

Mrs. John Motley, of Manning avenue, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, remains about the same.

BIG CROWD SEE RACES

In Big Event, "Ida G." Under Wire First With Jockey Hoyt Up.

SOME EXCITING HEATS

Bay Prince Gets Senior Cup and Maud C. the Harris Cup—Bobs for Green Trophy.

The largest crowd of the season, outside of those at the money meets, attended the matinee races at the Gentlemen's Driving Park Saturday afternoon, held under the auspices of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Association. The high class card offered was a strong attraction, and lovers of trotting from all parts of the county and other sections were there.

Aside from the trotting races and running event, the feature was the exhibition of fancy riding by Miss Adele von Ohl, of this city, who appeared on "Aristocrat," a horse of extreme high action. The animal, of the mustang variety, performed in a way that won applause from the vast crowd, and the graceful manner in which he was ridden by his daring rider made the exhibition one of the stellar attractions. In addition to the many fancy and daring tricks performed by "Aristocrat," perhaps the best was that of a thirteen-foot jump, made clean and clear. Miss von Ohl showed herself to be master of her steed at all stages.

Two trotting races, the running race and all but one heat of the third event were run off, when the heavy shower which passed over the city brought the sport to a sudden termination. Purses were offered in each class by individuals and the association, and the races furnished plenty of sport for the crowd. Only two heats were run in Class C, and no decision was given. It will probably be finished on Saturday, together with Class D and other events.

Although there were but two entries in the running race, Marcus Hoyt, on "Ida G.," and W. H. Wildey, on "Yentihy," it was an exciting one. It was a half-mile go, and "IdaG." won easily in 52½ and 51½.

The judges for the races were Nate Robbins, W. H. Greason and Adam C. Blair. David C. Smalley was the starter, while C. M. Stirling and J. Wesley Johnson were the timers. The summary follows.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Lewis, of West Seventh street, will return home from Wat Hall, R. I., about December 1.

Miss Marion Phillips, of Fairview avenue, has returned to St. Joseph's College, Bordentown, to resume her studies.

Miss Pauline Denton, of Washington avenue, left town on Saturday for Belmar, where she will remain for several weeks.

Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardner, the new editor of the Sabbath Recorder, and Mrs. Gardner have leased apartments in the Babcock building.

Miss Emma Atkinson, of the Franklin school faculty, has been compelled to go to her home in Rhode Island on account of illness.

Miss Amy Moore and Miss Lizzie Porter, of the local telephone exchange, left Saturday for Carbondale, Pa., where they will spend two weeks.

Mrs. Robert Lowry and her niece, Miss Katharine Lee, have returned to their home on East Seventh street, after finishing their summer outing at Belmar.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, of Central avenue, are entertaining their daughter, Mrs. Chambliss and their granddaughter, Miss Chambliss, from Chattanooga, Tenn.

Bishop O'Connor Lays Cornerstone.

The cornerstone of the new Sacred Heart Roman Catholic church, at Rose and Bidwell avenue, Jersey City, was laid yesterday by Bishop John J. O'Connor. Assisting him were Chancellor Thomas A. Wallace, the Rev. J. C. MacErlain, rector of the church; the Rev. Father Clark, the curate, and several visiting clergymen. Owing to the rain the ceremonies following the laying of the stone were held in the present edifice at Bidwell and Jackson avenues. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Mackell, of Seton Hall College. The new building will cost $75,000.

A real "college widow" has been engaged by Henry W. Savage to play the leading role in George Ade's musical play of that title. She is Flora Browning, a graduate of the Indiana University.

$15 to $65.

New Fall Millinery.

Exquisite styles, a grand exhibition of the budding flowers of Fall fashion gathered from the fascinating style gardens of London and Paris, and when you are looking for a new hat you cannot afford to pass by the collection here presented.

A Showing of American Rugs

It's increasingly the fashion nowadays to use Rugs as floor coverings—either on a polished surface or on a plain carpet foundation.

The popularity of Rugs has incited our domestic makers to great deeds. They have drawn their inspiration from the beautiful Rugs of the Orient, and so close are the copies that it is often difficult to distinguish one from the other.

In our superb stock of Domestic Rugs we show all the very latest designs and color effects that you'll find in the Oriental Rugs, as well as the most artistic patterns of all the leading American makers, and in all sizes, from a doormat 18x36 inches to a carpet rug 9x12 feet.

Piano Prices Cut One-Third to One-Half.

Every instrument marked in plain figures, showing the Great Saving in Price to You.

If interested call early, for sale positively closes Saturday night, Sept. 28.

OPEN EVENINGS, No. 170 EAST FRONT ST.

If you could have dropped into our store on Saturday evening you would have been surprised at the number of customers eager to take advantage of this great sale.

OVER TWENTY INSTRUMENTS SOLD.

The fact that upward of twenty instruments were sold the first week to shrewd buyers and good judges of musical instruments is evidence itself that remarkable prices and terms have been given to accomplish this result.

This is as fine a stock of pianos as can be found in any city. Some of the oldest and very best makes in the market, and all are offered at prices which save you nearly one-half the regular purchase price. The stock comprises such famous makes as the Hallet & Davis, Kimball, Conway, Bowen, Wellman, and many others.

Remember, this sale closes next Saturday night at 10 o'clock, and from the way they are going, I know every instrument will be sold.

WILL YOU BE ONE OF THE LUCKY ONES?

Will you be one of the lucky ones to save a great portion of the regular purchase price on a high grade new piano?

I say in all candor as I said Saturday, if I could impress on every prospective piano buyer in Plainfield the great money saving possibilities of this sale and the extremely easy terms allowed on the purchase of a high grade piano not an instrument would be left in twenty-four hours.

You owe it to yourself to your wife, and your family to investigate and take advantage of the opportunity this absolute closing-out sale presents.

SEE THESE PIANOS AS ADVERTISED.

New upright pianos, New York make, in plain case designs, but excellent works, absolutely guaranteed, regular prices $250 to $275, to close at $137 to $157. Terms, $10 cash, $5 to $6 monthly.

New Upright Cabinet Grand Pianos, in fancy, carved, and colonial cases, regular value $300, $350 to $375, sale prices, $187, $233 to $257. Terms, $15 to $25 cash, and $6 to $8 monthly.

Highest class of cabinet Grand Uprights, comprising various fine makes, usually retailed at from $450, $500 to $550, will be closed out at prices nearly one-half off.

Payments: Will extend to you very easy terms, if desired, on these compared to the terms they are usually sold on.

STORM INTERRUPTS TENNIS TOURNAMENT

PLAY AT PLAINFIELD COUNTRY CLUB SUDDENLY STOPPED.

The men's and women's singles lawn tennis championships of the Plainfield Country Club continued on the club courts Saturday afternoon were broken up by the storm. Miss Barbara Fleming and Miss Sarah E. Schuyler were playing in the final round of the women's singles when the storm came on. Miss Fleming had the first set 6-4, and the second was 2-3 when the deluge of rain began. Clifford Crapo qualified for the finals in the men's singles. The play on Saturday began with the second round of the men's singles. The summary:

Second Round—Henry L. De Forest defeated William T. Glenney, 4-8, 7-5, 7-5; Clifford M. Crapo defeated Arthur Lovell, 6-1, 7-5; Albert D. Beers defeated S. W. Merrihew, 6-1, 6-1; Henry J. Cochran defeated W. S. Tyler, 6-0, 6-1.

Semi-Final Round—Clifford M. Crapo defeated Henry L. De Forest, 6-1, 6-2; Henry J. Cochran vs. Albert D. Beer, 6-2, 4-6, 1-3, unfinished.

Women's Singles—First round—Miss B. Fleming defeated Miss N. Merrill, 6-1, 6-2; Miss F. Goddard defeated Miss M. Carpenter, 6-3, 6-0; Miss G. Kaufmann defeated Mrs. Runkle, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3; Miss H. Ivins defeated Miss L. Booth, by default; Mrs. Weaver defeated Miss F. Stewart, 6-4, 4-6, 6-1; Miss S. E. Schuyler defeated Miss M. Brown, by default; Miss G. Burke defeated Mrs. Righter, by default; Miss A. Barclay, a bye.

Second Round—Miss E. Fleming defeated Miss E. Goddard, 6-4, 6-3; Miss H. Ivins defeated Miss G. Kaufmann, 2-0, 6-1, 7-5; Miss S. E. Schuyler defeated Mrs. Weaver, 7-5, 6-2; Miss G. Burke defeated Miss A. Barclay, 7-5, 6-2.

Semi-Final Round—Miss B. Fleming defeated Miss H. Ivins, 3-6, 6-0, 6-0; Miss S. E. Schuyler defeated Miss G. Burke, 6-1, 6-2.

Final Round—Miss B. Fleming vs. Miss S. E. Schuyler, 6-4, 2-2, unfinished.

CALKIN WINS HONORS IN GOLF TOURNAMENT

FINISHES FIRST FOR COMMITTEE CUP AT THE P. C. C.

There was a large field out at the Plainfield Country Club Saturday, but the heavy thunder shower which passed over the city the latter part of the afternoon interferred with the play to such an extent that a majority failed to complete the round and post their scores. There were a few that braved the rain and finished the eighteen holes. Leighton Calkins won first honors for the Golf Committee cup with a score of 84 from scratch, while Stuart H. Patterson finished second and Frank O. Reinhart third. The leading scores for the trophy follow:

Leighton Calkins, 84, 0-84; Stuart H. Patterson, 96, 10-86; Frank O. Reinhart, 86, plus 3-89.

A. G. Henderson won first honors for the Green Committee cup with a net score of 78. These scores were posted:

A. G. Henderson, 93, 15-78; C. C. Burke, Sr., 89, 9-80; W. L. C. Glenney, 100, 18-82.

Those who qualified for the Autumn cup, Class A, were: Stuart H. Patterson, 96, 10-86; Frank O. Reinhart, 86, plus 3-89. Class B—A. G. Henderson, 93, 15-78; W. L. C. Glenney, 100, 18-82.

In the play-off of the tie of the foursome played a week ago, L. A. Chase and E. T. Willson beat Henry D. Hibbard and C. A. Stover, with a score of 88, 9-79. The defeated pair turned in a score of 83, 3-80. As those who tied last week for the Autumn cup, Class A, either defaulted or failed to complete the round, it was decided that the contestants must play off next Saturday to determine who shall qualify for match play next month.

PARK CLUB WON BY DOMINIES GOOD PLAY

MIDDLEBROOK CLUB DOWNED BY SCORE OF 10 TO 9.

The Park Golf Club team turned the tables on the team from the Middlebrook Country Club, of Bound Brook, Saturday, defeating its rivals by the close score of 10 to 9. Part of the match was played during the worst of the rain storm, and play was exceedingly difficult. In the first match between these teams earlier in the season, the Middlebrook Club team won out by a large score, not even permitting their opponents to score a point. On Saturday the Parks put up a better game, and being well acquainted with the course, were able to make their drives and puts count to good advantage.

The older members of the home team won the game, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, Dr. H. K. Carroll and Reuben Knox each scoring three points, while W. V. Byard scored one point. For the visitors Willett Gano, E. Pettit and W. Sperling did the scoring. As each team has now won a match, the deciding one will be played on the Park course Saturday, October 12. The summary for Saturday's match follows:

Parks—A. H. Corning, 0; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 3; Charles B. Morse, 0; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 3; Rev. C. L. Goodrich, 0; Reuben Knox, 3; W. V. Byard, 1; A. W. Kenworthy, 0; Nelson A. Miller, 0. Total, 10.

Middlebrook C. C.—Willett Gano, 3; E. E. Gano, 0; E. Pettit, 3; C. Byer, 0; F. Green, 0; George Smalley, 0; H. Moore, 0; W. Sperling, 3; R. M. Suydam, 0. Total, 9.

Mr. McKelvey won the first honors for the President's Golf Club and September cups, with a score of 90, 10-80. W. V. Byard finished second and C. B. Morse third. The best scores:

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 90,10-80; W. V. Byard, 96, 8-88; Charles B. Morse, 99, 8-91; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 98, 4-94.

Sale of Lands for Unpaid Taxes

Collector's Office, City of Plainfield, New Jersey.

Notice is hereby given that the subscriber, the Collector of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, pursuant to the authority of the statute in such case made and provided, will on at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the said Collector's office, No. 151 North Avenue, in said city, expose for sale and sell the several tracts or parcels of land hereinafter specified, or any part or parts thereof severally sufficient for the purpose, on which taxes for the year nineteen hundred and six remain in arrears, to such person or persons as will purchase the same for the shortest term and pay the tax lien thereon, including interest and costs of sale, or in fee where no one will bid for a shorter term.

This sale is made under the provisions of the act of the Legislature of this State, entitled: "An Act for the assessment and collection of taxes," approved April 8, 1903, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Further particulars of the land to be sold, as shown on the City records, may be obtained at the office of the subscriber any week day prior to the day of sale, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except holidays and Saturdays, and on Saturdays between 9 a. m. and 12 noon.

The following is a list of the several tracts and parcels of lands to be sold, which shows the names of the delinquents, the supposed owners thereof as the names of the delinquent owners appear on the books of the taxing district, together with a statement of the wards of the city wherein said lands are respectively situated, and the street in which each lot is situated, the block and lot number of each lot as they appear on the Official Assessment Maps of the City of Plainfield, on file in the office of the City Collector, and the amount due from each of the said lots respectively. To the amount due on each lot and parcel as hereinafter designated, there will be added interest at the rate of ten per centum per annum from the twentieth day of December, 1906, to the day of sale, and the fees provided by said act of the Legislature, viz.: for preparing and publishing notices of sale twenty-five cents for each parcel of land advertised; and for selling twenty-five cents for each parcel sold; and for each certificate of sale, fifty cents, besides necessary disbursements for printing, postage, affidavits and acknowledgements, which are hereby estimated at three dollars for each item of arrearage, and the City Clerk's fee for recording report, ten cents for each parcel of land sold, and all said fees and expenses shall form part of the tax lien and be paid by the purchaser at the tax sale.

Sale Number.	Supposed owner or person to whom assessed.	Ward.	Block No. City Assessment Maps.	Lot No. City Assessment Maps.	Street or Avenue.	Year.	Amount of Tax.	Date from which interest will be added at 10 per cent. per annum to date of sale.

Corporation Notice.

Sealed Prosposals for Sewer Bonds for the City of Plainfield, N. J.

Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, at a meeting thereof held Sept. 3rd, 1907, notice is hereby given that the Common Council will meet on Monday, the 7th day of October, 1907, at 8 o'clock P. M., at the Council Chamber, No. 151 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, at which time and place said Common Council will receive and open sealed proposals for the purchase of sewer bonds to the amount of Sixty-eight Thousand Dollars to be issued by the City of Plainfield under the Ordinance of said City, entitled "An Ordinance for the Further Issue of Sewer Bonds under Chapter CXXXI of the Laws of 1890 and Acts Amendatory Thereof and Supplemental Thereto." Approved May 16, 1906, and the Acts of the Legislature of New Jersey entitled "An Act to provide for drainage and sewerage in cities of this State," approved April 7th, 1890, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Said bonds will bear date the First day of May, 1907, and be payable as follows: that is to say: On the first day of May Nineteen Hundred and Eight, two bonds; and on the First day of May of each and every year thereafter, down to and including the year 1941, two bonds; said bonds shall bear interest at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum, payable semi-annually.

Said bonds are to be coupon bonds and to be in the form approved by the Common Council, and now on file in the office of the City Clerk of said City.

Upon the receipt of the bids or proposals the Council will immediately proceed to unseal same and publicly announce the contents in the presence of the parties bidding, or their agents, provided said parties or agents choose to be then and there present, and also to make proper record of the prices and terms upon the minutes of the Council.

The right to reject any and all bids is expressly reserved by the Common Council.

All proposals must be endorsed "Proposals for purchase of sewer bonds," and should include the accrued interest from date of bonds. A certified check or cash for 5 per cent of the amount must be deposited with each bid. No bid for less than par will be accepted.

By order of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

Dated September 3, 1907.

J. T. MAC MURRAY,
City Clerk.

Whatever Else You get in "Furnishing Up" Your Home: Get Sanitary Bedding!

It's the only sort you'll ever find at our store, for the simple reason that every bit of bedding that enters our doors comes straight from our own New York factory—the Cowperthwait Bedding Co.

In these sanitary workrooms, spacious, bright and well-managed, nothing but the finest bedding products are ever turned out—selected materials, thoroughly inspected, up to our high quality standard, invariably guaranteed—at prices far less than you'd pay, were we not our own manufacturers.

To interest you in our splendidly equipped Bedding lines, and remarkable little bedding prices, we'll offer for a limited run:

The Cowperthwait Hair Mattress
—built on honor from the filling to the tick! Of stout, heavy hair, giving far more elasticity and comfort than the soft hair filling so generally employed. Fancy stripe, heavy tick; full size, 40 lb.

"Now, look here, men! If you want any more trouble, we're here to accommodate you. Fighting is our trade, and we don't mind working at it. But I wish to tell you right now, and straight off the handle, that you are simply making a parcel of fools of yourselves. Slavin has been killed, and nine out of ten among you are secretly glad of it. He was a curse to this camp, but because some of his friends and cronies—thugs, gamblers and dive keepers—accuse Bob Hampton of having killed him, you start in blindly to lynch Hampton, never even waiting to find out whether the charge is the truth or a lie. You act like sheep, not American citizens. Now that we have pounded a little sense into some of you, perhaps you'll listen to the facts, and if you must hang some one, put your rope on the right man. Bob Hampton did not kill Red Slavin. The fellow who did kill him climbed out of the back window of the Occidental here, and got away, while you were chasing the wrong man. Mr. Wynkoop saw him, and so did your school teacher, Miss Spencer."

Then Wynkoop stepped gamely to the front. "All that is true, men. I have been trying ever since to tell you, but no one would listen. Miss Spencer and I both saw the man jump from the window; there was blood on his right arm and hand. He was a misshapen creature whom neither of us ever saw before, and he disappeared on a run up that ravine. I have no doubt he was Slavin's murderer."

"Now, you fellows, think that over," said Brant. "I intend to post a guard until I find out whether you are going to prove yourselves fools or men, but if we sail in again those of you who start the trouble can expect to get hurt, and pay for the piper. That's all."

In front of the hotel porch he met his first sergeant coming out.

"What does the doctor say about Hampton?"

"A very bad wound, sir; but not necessarily fatal; he has regained consciousness."

"Has Miss Gillis arrived?"

"I don't know, sir; there's a young woman cryin' in the parlor."

The lieutenant leaped up the steps and entered the house. But is was Miss Spencer, not Naida, who sprang to her feet.

"Oh, Lieut. Brant; can it be truly you! How perfectly awful you look! Do you know if Mr. Hampton is really going to die? I came here just to find out about him, and tell Naida. She is almost frantic, poor thing."

Though Brant doubted Miss Spencer's honesty of statement, his reply was direct and unhesitating. "I am informed that he has a good chance to live, and I have already dispatched word to Miss Gillis regarding his condition. I expect her at any moment."

"How very nice it was of you! Oh, I trembled so when you first went to face those angry men! I don't see how you ever dared do it. I did wish that either Mr. Moffat or Mr. McNeil could have been here to go with you. Before Brant could reply his attentive ear caught the sound of a light footstep in the hallway. He met Naida just without, pale and tearless. Both her hands were extended to him unreservedly.

"Tell me, will he live?"

"The doctor thinks yes."

"Thank God! Oh, thank God!" She pressed one hand against her heart to control its throbbing. "You cannot know what this means to me." Her eyes seemed now for the first time to mark his own deplorable condition. "And you? You have not been hurt, Lieut. Brant?"

He smiled back into her anxious eyes. "Nothing that soap and water and a few days' retirement will not wholly remedy. My wounds are entirely upon the surface. Shall I conduct you to him?"

She bowed, apparently forgetful that one of her hands yet remained imprisoned in his grasp. "If I may go, yes. I told Mrs. Herndon I should remain here if I could be of the slightest assistance."

They passed up the staircase side by side, exchanging no further speech. Once she glanced furtively at his face, but its very calmness kept the words upon her lips unuttered. At the door they encountered Mrs. Guffy, her honest eyes red from weeping.

"This is Miss Gillis, Mrs. Guffy," explained Brant. "She wishes to see Mr. Hampton if it is possible."

"Sure an' she can thet. He's been askin' after her, an' thet pretty face would kape any man in gud spirits, I'm thinkin'. Step roight in, miss."

She held the door ajar, but Naida paused, glancing back at her motionless companion, a glint of unshed tears showing for the first time in her eyes. "Are you not coming also?"

"No, Miss Naida. It is best for me to remain without, but my heart goes with you."

Then the door closed between them.

CHAPTER XXIV.
The Rescue of Miss Spencer.

While Hampton lingered between life and death, assiduously waited upon by both Naida and Mrs. Guffy, Brant nursed his burns, far more serious than he had at first supposed, within the sanctity of his tent. Glencaid meanwhile recovered from its mania of lynch law, and even began exhibiting some faint evidences of shame over what was so plainly a mistake. And the populace were also beginning to exhibit no small degree of interest in the weighty matters which concerned the fast-culminating love affairs of Miss Spencer.

Almost from her earliest arrival the extensive cattle and mining interests of the neighborhood became aggressively arrayed against each other; and now, as the fierce personal rivalry between Messrs. Moffat and McNeil grew more intense, the breach perceptibly widened. While the infatuation of Rev. Mr. Wynkoop for this same fascinating young lady was plainly to be seen, his chances in the race were not seriously regarded by the more active partisans upon either side.

The regular patrons of the Miners' Retreat were backing Mr. Moffat to a man, while those claiming headquarters at the Occidental were equally ardent in their support of the prospects of Mr. McNeil. It must be confessed that Miss Spencer flirted outrageously and enjoyed life as she never had done in the effete east.

The Rev. Mr. Wynkoop always felt serenely confident of an uninterrupted welcome upon Sunday evenings after service, while the other nights of the week were evenly apportioned between the two more ardent aspirants.

On Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings the Miners' Retreat was a scene of wild hilarity, for it was then that Mr. Moffat was known to be comfortably seated in the Herndon parlor, relating gruesome tales of wild mountain adventure which paled the cheeks of his fair and entranced listener. Then on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, when Mr. McNeil rode gallantly in on his yellow bronco, bedecked in all the picturesque paraphernalia of the boundless plains, revolver swinging at thigh, his wide sombrero shadowing his dare-devil eyes, the front of the gay Occidental blazed with lights and became crowded to the doors with enthusiastic herders drinking deep to the success of their representative.

It is no more than simple justice to the fair Phoebe to state that she was, as her aunt expressed it, "in a dreadful state of mind." Between these two picturesque and typical knights of plain and mountain she vibrated, unable to make deliberate choice. While laboring in this state of indecision late one Wednesday night Moffat tramped heavily into the Miners' Retreat and called Long Pete Lumley over into a deserted corner of the barroom.

"Well, Jack," the latter began expectantly, "hev ye raily got the cinch on that cowboy at last, hey?"

"Dern it all, Pete, I'm blamed if I know; leastwise, I ain't got no sure prove-up. I tell ye thet girl's just about the toughest piece o' rock I ever had any special call to assay. Ye see it's this way. She's got some durn down east notion that she's got ter be rescued, an' borne away in the arms of her hero like they do in them pesky novels the Kid's allers readin', and so I reckon I've got ter rescue her!"

"Rescue her from whut, Jack?"

"Well, ye see, Pete, maybe I'm partly to blame. I've sorter been entertainin' her nights with some stories regardin' road agents an' things o' thet sort, while, so fur, as I kin larn, thet blame chump of a McNeil hes been fillin' her up scandalous with Injuns, until she's plum got 'em on the brain. And now, I reckon as how it's got ter be Injuns."

"Whut's got ter be Injuns?"

"Why thet outfit whut runs off with her, of course. I reckon you fellers will stand in all right ter help pull me out o' this hole?"

Long Pete nodded

"Well, Pete, this is 'bout whut's got ter be done, es near es I kin figger it out. You pick out maybe half a dozen good fellers who kin keep their mouths shet an' make injuns out of 'em. Then you lay fer her, say 'bout next Wednesday, out in them Carter woods, when she's comin' home from school. I'll kinder naturally happen 'long by accident 'bout the head o' the gulch, an' jump in an' rescue her. Sabe?"

Lumley gazed at his companion with eyes expressive of admiration. "By thunder, if you haven't got a cocoanut on ye, Jack! Lord, but thet ought to get her a flyin'! Any shootin'?"

"Sure!" Moffat's face exhibited a faint smile at these words of praise. "It wouldn't be no great shucks of a rescue without, an' this hes got ter be the real thing. Only, I reckon, ye better shoot high, so thar' won't be no hurt done."

When the two gentlemen parted a few moments later the conspiracy was fully hatched, all preliminaries perfected and the gallant rescue of Miss Spencer assured. Indeed, there is some reason now to believe that this thought Mr. Moffat and Mr. McNeil were such heroes, and yet now in this hour of desperate peril it was you who flew gallantly to my rescue! It is you who are the true western knight!"

And Mr. Wynkoop gazed down into those grateful eyes and modestly confessed it true.

CHAPTER XXV.
The Parting Hour.

To Lieut. Brant these proved days of bitterness. He had called twice upon Hampton, both times finding the wounded man propped up in bed, very affable, properly grateful for services rendered, yet avoiding all reference to the one disturbing element between them.

Once he had accidentally met Naida, but their brief conversation left him more deeply mystified than ever, and later she seemed to avoid him altogether. One day he deemed her but an idle coquette; the next, a warm-hearted woman, doing her duty bravely. Yet through it all her power over him never slackened.

The end of this nervous strain came in the form of an urgent dispatch recalling N troop to Fort Abraham Lincoln by forced marches. The commander felt no doubt as to the full meaning of this message, and the soldier in him made prompt and joyful response. Brant had learned of the consolidation of the hostile savages, incited by Sitting Bull, into the fastness of the Big Horn range; he was aware that Gen. Cook was already advancing northward from the Nebraska line. Now he realized that he was to be a part of this chosen fighting force and his heart responded to the summons as to a bugle call in battle.

Instantly the little camp was astir, the men feeling the enthusiasm of their officers. With preparations well in hand, Brant's thoughts veered once again toward Naida. He rode down to the Herndon house with grave face and sober thought. He recalled long the plainly furnished room into which Mrs. Herndon ushered him to await the girl's appearance—the formal look of the old-fashioned hair-cloth furniture, the prim striped paper on the walls, the green shades at the windows, the clean rag carpet on the floor. The very stiffness chilled him, left him ill at ease. Then he heard the rustle of Naida's skirt and turned to meet her. She was pale from her weeks of nursing, and agitated for fear of what this unexpected call might portend. Yet to his thought she appeared calm, her manner restrained. Nor could anything be kinder than her first greeting, the frankly extended hand, the words expressive of welcome.

"Mr. Wynkoop informed me a few minutes ago that you had at last received your orders for the north," she said, her lips slightly trembling. "I wondered if you would leave without a word of farewell."

He bowed low. "I do not understand how you could doubt, for I have shown my deep interest in you even from the first. If I have lately seemed to avoid you, it has only been because I believed you wished it so."

There was an embarrassing pause, as though neither knew how to get through the interview.

"No doubt you are rejoiced to be sent on active service again," she said, at last.

"Yes, both as a soldier and as a man, Miss Naida. I am glad to get into the field again with my regiment, to do my duty under the flag, and I am equally rejoiced to have something occur which will tend to divert my thoughts. I had not intended to say anything of this kind, but now that I am with you I simply cannot restrain the words. This past month has been, I believe, the hardest I have ever been compelled to live through. You simply mystify me so that I alternately hope and despair. Your methods are cruel."

"Mine?" and she gazed at him with parted lips. "Lieut. Brant, what can you mean? What is it I have done?"

"It may have been only play to you and so easily forgotten," he went on, bitterly. "But that is a dangerous game, very certain to hurt some one, Miss Naida, your face, your eyes, even your lips almost continually tell me one thing; your words another. I know not which to trust. I never meet you except to go away baffled and bewildered."

"You wish to know the truth?"

"Ay, and for all time! Are you false or true? Coquette or woman? Do you simply play with hearts for idle amusement or is there some true purpose ruling your actions?"

TRAIN AND TRACK.

One of the most remarkable railway bridges in the world is that which connects Venice with the mainland. Built on 22 arches, it is 12,050 feet long.

After many years of deliberation and delay Berlin has taken the first practical steps toward the construction of an experimental line of suspension or overhead railway, with the cars hanging from an elevated rail.

India will be the first country to attempt to put the mono rail method of locomotion to practical use. The government has granted $5,000 to Louis Brennan to experiment with his gyroscope trains, and he is soon to build a model car forty feet long and twelve feet wide to run there.

DIAMOND DUST.

The game at Crescent Oval on Saturday between Clinton Avenue and Rahway is being looked forward to with great interest. Two weeks ago the locals journeyed to Rahway and gave the aggregation in that town a great scare by defeating them. Since that time the Rahwegians have been very sore, and they say that they will get even on Saturday. The Clinton Avenues will be prepared for them.

It is rumored that Ball, the new recruit signed by Clark Griffith, may succed Jimmy Williams at second base on the Highlanders.

There is to be a generous cut in Tri-State League salaries next year. Each club will be allowed a monthly salary list of $2,600, except in cases where a club has a manager-player. Then it will be $2,800. It is said that only three clubs in the league made money this season, hence the decision to cut the salary list.

When the officials of the Inter-City Amateur League meet to plan for next season, it is to be hoped that they will consider a proposition to include Somerville. It would be a wise move for sport's sake as well as financially.

It is the intention of Professor Edwin Phelps, principal of the borough school, to have a strong baseball team in the school next year. He will begin early to get a line on candidates, and it is certain that the school will be an important factor in athletics from now on.

Despite the fact that he had suffered from an attack of tonsilitis, contracted while in the South, George Wiltse, of the Giants, has pitched consistent and winning ball this season. He is undoubtedly one of the best fielding pitchers in the National League.

"Lou" Wiltse, of the Newark Eastern League, who has again made Plainfield his home, plans to do some bowling this winter to keep in condition for next year.

GOLF.

Robert Abbott's defeat at Morris county last week was a source of regret to his many friends. The young Yale student has been playing a good game this year, as his performance at Deal and Morris county shows.

Although he played a fast game in the invitation golf tournament at the Morris County Country Club, Dudley H. Barrows was not equal to the final test. Robert Abbott defeated him rather easily in the second round.

Jason Rogers is the winner of the president's cup and club championship of the Essex Falls Golf Club, defeating J. G. Phyfe in the final round contest of thirty-six holes by 1 up on the thirty-eighth green after a hard contest in fast golf.

George Low, the Baltusrol professional, has returned to form, as was evidenced by his round of the home course in 71, thereby equalling his record. This makes the eleventh time Low has had a 71, but he says that he considers his latest effort the best, as the course was a trifle soggy in spots after a rain.

CLINTON AVENUE GETS THIS GAME BY FORFEIT

WESTFIELD NINE REFUSES TO RESUME PLAY AFTER RAIN STOPS FALLING.

After six innings of close playing, Clinton Avenue got the decision from Westfield, in the second game of their series, at Crescent Oval, Saturday, by forfeit. The rain, and a difference of opinion between Umpire Dalley and the Westfielders as to the fitness of the field for further play, caused the trouble.

The rain tumbled down after six full innings. The score was three to two in Westfield's favor, and the game had all the marks of a gingery struggle all the way. Westfield had just a shade the better of things, but the Plainfielders had it in them to wrest the lead away and are sure they would have done it.

When the rain started Dalley called the game for twenty minutes. At the end of the time the downpour had ended, and the umpire ordered the game on. The Westfielders objected, maintaining that the field was too wet for play. Clinton Avenue was ready to go on, and Dalley patiently waited for the Westfielders to change their ideas. When it was quite certain that they would not entertain the notion of playing, he declared the game forfeited to Clinton Avenue, 9 to 0. There was not much hard feeling, but Westfield felt a bit aggrieved over the turn of affairs.

FOOTBALL.

Chauncey Murphy has been elected captain of the High School eleven. Practise will be held tomorrow.

Football work has begun in earnest at Princeton. This is evident from the big squad of men hustling about. Saturday brought out several men who had not yet appeared, and the situation is taking on a more material aspect, for the coaches had started to deplore the scarcity of players. In order to get at the men searchingly the squad was put to work in three parts. Princeton's chief trouble this fall will lay in the development of a powerful line, so the coaches' efforts are concentrated in this direction. McFadden, the big guard, was moving rapidly today, and with him were Seigling, '10; Gilmore, '10; Buckingham, '10; Whaley, '09, and Ware, '09. Cox, '09, and Little, '09, who have been substituted in the back field, were out for the first time today. Rulon-Miller, the crack half-back, has returned to college. There is little chance of his being seen on the gridiron this year. Bowman, the ex-Yale star, who is coaching Hill School, was also an onlooker.

Brink Thorn, captain of the '95 team, arrived today to help coach the Yale football candidates. There was two hours of fast drilling in individual work and team formation, with Coy as fullback. The coaches tried to teach the men to fall on the ball, turnover and land on their feet. The daily drill for speed was acquired of all backfield candidates, and has been extended to include the line men as well. It is learned from the coaches that the onside kick will be practised a great deal, to be used in conjunction with passing this fall. The fact is apparent that so far there are no good substitutes for the positions at guard, conceded to Goebel and Brides. Dunbar, substitute centre, might be shifted to fill the vacancy at guard if necessary, provided Cooney is able to play.

SCOTCH PLAINS SHUT OUT BY RAHWAY NINE

DARKNESS BEFORE STORM ENDS THE GAME IN THE SEVENTH INNING.

Brilliant fielding, timely batting and Mundrane's work on the slab formed a combination against which the Scotch Plains A. C. was unable to score in its game with the Rahway A. A. at West End Park, Rahway, Saturday afternoon. The local nine registered seven times. Darkness, caused by the approaching storm, ended the contest after Mundrane had walked, with none down, in Rahway's half of the eighth. Score:

"Smiling Jimmie's" Great Work.

James Montross, of this city, who was slated for a tryout with the Newark Atlantic League team, started in to pitch a remarkable game for the Washington A. A., of Newark, against the Berkeley Heights Club, at Chatham, on Saturday, when the rain interfered in the second inning. In the first inning, after filling the bases, Montross performed a feat that no other twirler accomplished against the locals this season by retiring the side on strikes with no one out.

Change Court Day.

It was announced this morning that the District Court sessions would be held hereafter on Thursday, instead of Tuesday, mornings. The change is made for the convenience of the lawyers, who have found their out of town engagements more frequent on Tuesdays than on Thursdays.

REV. DR. KEIGWIN HEAD OF URSINUS COLLEGE.

Accepts Call to Presidency of Pennsylvania Institution, But Will Retain New York Pastorate.

New York, Sept. 23.—Rev. Dr. A. Edwin Keigwin, pastor of the West End Presbyterian church, Amsterdam avenue and 105th street, has been called to the presidency of the Ursinus College, Collegeville, Pa. Dr. Keigwin has accepted the call and will take office in the near future. He will not, however, give up his pastorate in this city, the position as college president being largely an honorary one.

It was said, though, at his home, 139 West 103d street, that he had announced to the committee of the college trustees that he had accepted the position. He has just recently returned from his summer home, Wolfeboro, Vt.

The Collegeville institution is a coeducational college which adheres to the faith of the Reformed church. It was organized in 1869, and in the thirty-seven years has had 428 graduates. Last season there were 229 pupils and twenty instructors.

Dr. Keigwin has been pastor of the West End church almost three years, succeeding Rev. Dr. John Balcom Shaw, now of Chicago. He came to New York from the pastorate of the Park Presbyterian church, Newark, N. J., where he was in charge about five years. He is a graduate of Lafayette College and Princeton Theological Seminary.

BIG HIGH SCHOOL, RECENTLY BUILT, ALREADY CROWDED

Lack of Accommodations in $125,000 Structure Necessitates Emergency Measures.

MAY NOW BUILD WINGS

Superintendent's Secretary Alleges That Out-of-town Pupils Have Not Caused Present Condition.

Notwithstanding the fact that when the new Plainfield High School was erected a year ago at a cost of about $125,000, exclusive of furnishings, it would meet the school requirements of a high school for several years to come, the increased enrollment this year has rather upset the calculations of the Board of Education, and a question of sufficient room in the new building now confronts the authorities. Only last week it was necessary to take the drawing room on the top floor and make use of it for a class room. Under present conditions it will only be a question of a short time when it will be necessary to build a wing or two on the building.

Some believe that the crowded condition is attributed to the fact that children from Scotch Plain, Fanwood, Dunellen, Bound Brook and South Plainfield have been admitted to the local school. In speaking of this phase of the question, Frank B. Clark, secretary of the Board of Education, says that the outside children are so generally distributed throughout the various grades that they do not materially effect the situation. The total enrollment of children in the public schools this year is considerably over 3,000, a substantial increase over that of last year.

The erection of a new primary building on Darrow avenue at a cost of $90,000, exclusive of furnishings, will not relieve the crowded condition at the high school, and if more room is to be had it can only come through the building of additions to the present building. This may not be necessary this year, but if the increase continues as it has during the past two or three years or even longer period, the additional room will have to be secured within the next two years at least.

"For some time there has been a growing demand for another school in the West End, and last summer the Board of Education purchased a desirable piece of land on West Front street, between Mariners and Clinton avenues, where it is hoped to erect a building in the near future.

That the education of Plainfield children is costing the taxpayers a considerable sum is realized, but a majority of them, it is said, believe it to be money well expended. It was the increased amount of money needed this year for schools that jumped the local tax rate from $1.35 to $1.47, but it is hoped that Plainfield will benefit largely next year through the extra revenue expected from the railroad's share of the State tax.

SOMERSET W. C. T. U.

Annual Convention to Be Held in Millstone On October 1.

The twenty-second annual convention of the Somerset County W. C. T. U. will be held in the Reformed church at Millstone on Tuesday, October 1. The morning session will open at 10 o'clock, with Mrs. Deborah P. Peeke, of Millstone, the county president, in the chair. After devotions the Millstone pastors will extend greetings and Mrs. Peeke will respond. Committees will be appointed and superintendents of departments will make their annual reports.

Mrs. William Bartle, of Martinsville, will lead devotions at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Leonard C. Davis, of Somerville, will read a paper on "Our Beginnings." Mrs. Emma Bowne, of Newark, the State president, will answer queries taken from the question box.

In the evening the Rev. Floris Ferwerda, pastor of the Reformed church, will conduct devotions and the address will be made by Mrs. Emma Bourne. The Ys, of Bound Brook, will do the singing.

High School Growing Yet.

The High School enrollment was swelled yesterday by 19. The pupils came from the Whittier School in regular course of promotion.

Dinner to Nine.

The Y. M. C. A. will give a dinner to the baseball nine on October 5. Details of the affair will be arranged next week.

OPERATIC ASSOCIATION IS LIKELY TO DISBAND

ITS PRODUCTIONS HAVE BEEN GIVEN AT A LOSS.

The members of the Plainfield Operatic Association have made no efforts thus far to plan for the fall and winter work, and the present indications are that the association will not present any operas this season. Ever since the association was formed, with but one or two exceptions, the productions have been given at a loss, and those at the head of the organization do not feel like continuing under such conditions.

The operas given by the association include "Pinafore," "The Chimes of Normandy," "The Pirates of Penzance" and "Mikado," in addition to a popular concert, but the expense has usually been so heavy that there was little chance of any profit. One opera given for the benefit of the Day Nursery did net a small profit, but as a rule there was a substantial loss.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, as the president of the organization, has been generous, and on several occasions made it possible for the members to continue their work, but he cannot be expected to continue to stand financial losses. There was some talk of presenting "Robin Hood" this season, but this has been found inadvisable, owing to the many strong attractions at the New Plainfield theatre. It has been found by experience that persons who patronize theatricals would rather see the professional rather than the amateur, and there is an apparent lack of local pride. Heretofore, William Holmes, the director for the association, has been willing to contribute his efforts without charge, at a loss to him from other sources. This he is not willing to do in the future, and the chances are that nothing will be done this season.

It is expected that a meeting will be called within a short time and steps taken to disband the organization. This will be done, unless some more attractive proposition is presented that would warrant the maintenance of the association, and at present this does not seem likely.

CLUBDOM SWELLED BY ANOTHER "ORGANIZATION."

First Nighters Launched at Iroquois With First-Night Dinner.

Something new in local clubs came into being last night. Under the guidance of Jerome Leary, of the Hotel Iroquois, the First Nighters was—or is it "were?"—organized at the Park avenue hostelry. The First Nighters are dedicated to the enjoyment of initial performances at the theatre and of such other innocent amusements as make evenings pleasant.

Marcus Hoyt, who has a record as a real first-nighter, was elected president. Mayor N. B. Smalley is vice president, and D. J. Carney is prompter—otherwise secretary.

The First Nighters launched themselves in the club world with due appropriateness. The inevitable dinner was the first formal affair held at the hotel under the new dining room management, and it was tendered by the management. Steward Daniel Weber, who has an awe-inspiring record as a cookery expert to people whose names get in the New York papers, prepared the dinner himself. It was up to the record. The table was handsomely decorated. The dinner had one feature noteworthy above all others. There were no speeches.

High Court of Foresters to Meet.

The annual meeting of the High Court, of New Jersey, Independent Order of Foresters, will convene in the Opera House, Red Bank, on Thursday, and the following delegates from Court Plainfield, No. 1144, will attend: Court Deputy Charles J. McCarthy; Chief Ranger James T. Carty; Past Chief Rangers Louis Feiring, James M. Smith, Henry Hansen, John F. Casey, Edward J. McCue and James Patterson. Judge Howell, of Newark, the high chief ranger, has appointed Past Chief Ranger Hansen, of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, a member of the mileage committee.

PLANS FOR HODGE PODGE

Society Women to Produce "Gathering of the Clans" at the Casino.

ON OCT. 17, 18 AND 19

Attractions of All Kinds Being Arranged—Committees Are Appointed for the Undertaking.

Plans for "The Gathering of the Clans," the society hodge-podge to be held for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, were discussed at a meeting held this morning at the Casino. This was the first step taken toward the formation of definite plans for the affair, and the many women interested entered into the spirit of the occasion with great enthusiasm. It was decided to hold the affair at the Casino on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 17, 18, 19, 21, 22 and 23, from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 11 o'clock at night each day.

Both the Casino building and the grounds will be used, and the latter will be inclosed to prevent outsiders from looking at the many outdoor attractions to be provided.

In the Casino building there will be attractions of all kinds, including fancy booths and the sale of all kinds of goods. Besides there will be a different entertainment every afternoon and evening on the stage by high class talent.

Mrs. Charles A. Reed and Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies are the heads of the various committees to be appointed, and today thec hairmen of the different committees were announced as follows:

Fancy, Mrs. Henry L. Hall; stationery, Mrs. John Gray Foster; silhouettes, Miss Edith Tracy; cake, Mrs. William A. Pinto; welsh rarebit, Mrs. Henry A. McGee; outdoor attractions, Mrs. Frederick W. Butler; candy, Mrs. F. D. Warren; lemonade well, Mrs. A. M. Most; cigars, Charles Faber; industrial and ice cream, Mrs. J. L. Slevin; orange grove, Mrs. Lewis E. Waring; canned fruits, jellies, etc., Mrs. J. Stockton Schoonmaker; dolls, Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde.

The different chairmen will soon select the other members of their committees and work will begin in earnest. It is the intention of the women to make the affair the most elaborate and best of the kind ever given for the hospital.

SHE'LL THROW A BRICK.

Mrs. Ten Eyck Won't Stand Anything More From Al Sanderson.

Following a quarrel over a dog, Mrs. Addie Ten Eyck, colored, had Albert Sanderson, also colored, arrested yesterday on a charge of using indecent language and acting disorderly. Judge Runyon allowed both sides to talk themselves out and suspended sentence after each of the principals had promised to leave the other alone. Mrs. Sanderson caused some amusement by solemnly assuring the magistrate that she would hit Sanderson with a brick if he bothered her again. "I mean it," she said, "and I certainly will do it. I'll have that brick and I'll come right down here and give myself up to you, judge your honor."

She stuck to the threat in spite of Judge Runyon's request that she promise to see him before throwing anything.

Funeral of John Cotter.

The funeral of John Cotter was held this morning at 8:30 o'clock from the late home on Plainfield avenue, and at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church, where there was a large attendance of members from the T. A. B. and Ancient Order of Hibenians, of which Mr. Cotter was one. Both societies contributed beautiful floral tributes. Father Delehanty was the celebrant of the mass, and the bearers were James O'Keefe, Thomas O'Keefe, William Owens, John Leahey, Frank Connolly and Patrick Herrington. The burial was in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Small Boys Arrested.

John Harrigan, 13 years old; Eddie Peterson, 13; Frank Green, 12; Hudson Peterson, 10; Walter Halliwell, 10, and George Blount, 10, all West End boys, were arrested yesterday, charged with having broken into Amos Stites' poolroom on Somerset street Sunday to steal a chewing gum slot machine. Judge Runyon laid the case over until Saturday.

Threatened Conductor.

Boardman Mosher, a Public Service Corporation conductor, reported to the police last night that a negro, put off the 10:30 car at Richmond and Fifth streets for acting disorderly, drew a revolver and threatened to shoot. He ran off after making the threat. Mosher could furnish only a meagre description of the man.

MISS PENTON DROWNED IN LONG ISLAND SOUND

PARENTS BELIEVE SHE PERISHED IN STORM.

After searching the Long Island Sound and shores from New Rochelle to Bridgeport on the east and City Island on the west for Miss Beatrice Penton and Guido de Angelis, of New Rochelle, who were last seen on the Sound Sunday afternoon during the heavy thunder storm, yachtsmen and other resident-searchers have given them up for lost. Miss Penton is the daughter of Thomas B. Penton, Jr., who formerly resided in North Plainfield. The family was well known here.

Miss Jenton and de Angelis went out early Sunday for a sail. It is believed that the boat was caught in the storm, the sail blown away and the occupants drowned. Some of the clothes of the young man were found in the New Rochelle Rowing Club's boathouse.

Several weeks ago the young woman's parents forbid her to have anything to do with de Angelis and when he persisted the case was taken before a magistrate and the young man was threatened with legal proceedings if he did not desist. At the time de Angelis promised not to see his sweetheart again until the consent of the parents was obtained. Mr. and Mrs. Penton have given their daughter up for lost, and a launch has been engaged to continue the search for the body.

POLICE CARING FOR LITTLE UNFORTUNATE

WEARY, LIMPING SMALL BOY RESCUED FROM HARDSHIPS OF RUNNING AWAY.

George Bremmer, of 1207 West Seventh street, found a ragged boy asleep in his barn at 8:30 o'clock last night. He turned the lad over to Policeman Martin Vanderweg, who took him to the station house.

The boy is about 12 years old, said he had no name that he knew of, but was called Harry Stull. He said he worked for a milkman named Dencklau, who lived near New Market, and ran away because he was ill-treated. He had no stockings on, and one foot was so sore he could hardly walk on it. He wore a pair of shoes with the tops cut off. He was taken to the milkman's place, he said, from Newark. He had never been to school, he said.

The police will care for him until Mrs. Emily Williamson, the probation officer has had a chance to look into the case.

GAS PLANT EXPLOSION KILLS AGED EMPLOYE.

Accident at Perth Amboy Works Shakes Town.

An explosion that shook the entire city occurred at the Perth Amboy gas works at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, wrecking the purifying building and killing Abram Johnson, 65 years old, an employe. Fire followed, threatening the big gas tanks and causing a general alarm to be sounded, calling out the entire fire department.

Johnson was the father of the assistant superintendent of the works, Lloyd P. Johnson. With three other men he was at work in the building when the explosion occurred. All but Johnson managed to escape. He was caught under a falling wall, and it was twenty minutes before he was taken out. His bodly was horribly burned, and he lived but a short time after reaching the hospital.

The only explanation given for the explosion is that a light must have been taken into the building. There were four tanks filled with iron oxide and lime in the structure. The building was razed and flames leaped many feet in the air, threatening the entire plant as well as neighboring houses.

Senator John Kean and his brother, Hamilton F. Kean, of Elizabeth, are the principal owners of the Amboy gas company. They also control the works at Elizabeth, which has mains extending south almost to Woodbridge. As the Amboy works supply Woodbridge, it was announced that connections would be made at once with the Elizabeth mains so that Perth Amboy can get gas from there until repairs can be made.

Returned From Their Honeymoon.

Mrs. Catherine Horner, of 651 West Fourth street, and William Fairbanks, of West Fifth street, who were married at St. Mary's rectory on Friday, September 13, by Father Bogan, have returned home from Albany, N. Y., where they spent their honeymoon.

SOMERSET COURT OPENS

Judge Schenck on the Bench and Charges Grand Jury.

REFERENCE TO GHOULS

Bernardsville Grave Desecration—Duke Estate Strike to Be Investigated— Cases of Interest to Plainfielders.

The fall term of the Somerset county courts opened in Somerville this morning. Plainfield lawyers were present.

Judge Schenck was on the bench. He charged the grand jury on the desecration of Margaret Kuhlwind's grave at Bernardsville, and in the strike trouble at the Duke estate; referring to the latter the court said an indictment should be found if anybody was guilty of inciting a riot.

There is an unusually large number of Supreme and Circuit cases to be disposed of and the grand jury has a large number of complaints to investigate. The following constables have been selected for the term:

John R. Stevens, Charles W. Hill, George V. H. Weaver, George D. Totten, Andrew D. Flammer, Dennis Wyckoff, Job Coddington, Arthur S. Dixon, William N. Pangborn and Jacob F. Laing.

The petit jurors summoned to serve from North Plainfield are as follows: Ephraim Ackor, Charles S Amerman, Percy Culvers, John Herman, Adrian Martin and Augustus Mobus. Those from Warren township are: George G. Bowers, Ira L. Mundy, William Mernaugh and Rudolph Sachs.

The list of causes of interest to Plainfielders is as follows:

Supreme court, Andrew Wilson vs William H. Kirch, on contract, Geo. W. Bird and Codington & Swackhamer; Reed & Coddington, filed August 12, 1907.

Circuit court, Electric Vehicle Co. vs. Harry L. McGee, on contract, Carlos C. Gallop; Reed & Coddington, issue joined August 14, 1905. Horace Codington vs. George H. Fairchild, on contract; Clarence Garretson, Francis J. Blatz, issue joined April 19, 1906.

Quarter Sessions, Robert Fleming ads. George W. McGuire, chief inspector of the State Board of Health, court, Coddington & Swackhamer Robert H. McCarter, attorney general; appeal from Justice Mundy. State of New Jersey vs. James Gunn, court, Robt. H. McCarter; Codington & Swackhamer; appeal from Justice Mundy.

Justice's appeals, Frank T. Rice ads. Joel Codington, jury; tried June 25, 1906; Justice Kitchen; Reed & Coddington, Horace Codington.

The court granted Albert S. Denise, of North Plainfield, a hotel license. The grand jurymen from North Plainfield are Drs. J. Hervey Buchanan and D. C. Adams.

WATER COMMISSION HAS BEEN DORMANT.

Several Months Since Body Has Held a Meeting; Secrecy of Sub-Committee.

Summer lethargy secured such a strong hold on the municipal water investigating commission that it has been several months since a meeting was held. A member of the commission was seen today and he declared that he was totally ignorant of what was being done. At the last meeting of the commission the engineering committee was authorized to go ahead with its investigations, for the purpose of learning the exact conditions and what it would be possible for Plainfield to do toward securing a municipal water supply.

What the committee has accomplished is not known by other members of the commission, but it is likely that a meeting will be held sometime this fall to receive the report of the body. Whatever investigation has been made has been done with the utmost secrecy as the members are supposed to be collecting valuable data which will help the commission to decide the advisability of recommending the purchase of the present water plant or establishing an independent one.

Approaching Wedding.

Invitations have been issued by Dr. and Mrs. Frank W. Westcott, of Fanwood Borough, to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Lillian Fancher, and Edward Frank Howe, of Troy, N. Y. The event will be celebrated Saturday night, October 12, at 7 o'clock at the Baptist church, Scotch Plains.

Grace Woolston Woodland.

Grace Woolston Woodland, aged 2 months, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Woodland, died this morning at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston, 30 Fairview avenue. The funeral will be held from that residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

STEPS TAKEN TO ERECT HOME FOR JR. O. U. A. M.

Past Officers of Four Local Councils Plan Organization For That Purpose.

COMMITTEE SELECTED

T. E. Currin, Jr., Chairman—Somerset, Franklin, Benevolent and Plainfield Represented.

Steps were taken last night at a meeting of past officers of the local councils of the Jr. O. U. A. M. toward forming a Past Councilors' Association, with the ultimate purpose of securing more hearty co-operation among the members of the lodges and eventually erecting a modern building which shall be the home of the Jr. O. U. A. M., of this city, and in every way adapted to its needs.

The movement was started by Thomas E. Currin, Jr., of Franklin Council, and the proposition met with hearty response on the part of officers in the other councils. There are now over fifty past councilors identified with Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, and it is believed that a strong organization can be effected. It is also the purpose to make the new association a sort of governing body for the councils in deciding matters of importance concerning them, and while their acts will not be binding on the different councils they will be largely governed by them.

The question of establishing a home for all four councils is not altogether a new one. It has been under discussion for some time. It is confidently believed that such a structure can be erected and supported through the revenue from each council as well as through the rental of stores that would occupy the ground floor, and possibly offices on the second floor.

Representatives of the four councils have been appointed as a committee, with Mr. Currin as chairman. The next meeting of the committee will be held Wednesday night, October 2, at which time more definite plans for completing the organization of past councils will be considered. The question of erecting a Junior building will be decided later.

STORM MADE WETTEST DAY OF YEAR SO FAR

RAINFALL TWO AND SIX-TENTHS INCHES—TELEPHONES SUFFER.

Plainfield experienced its wettest day of the year yesterday. The fall of water was just like the "line storm" that father used to see. According to the official guage the fall measured two and six-tenths inches, but the layman found places where a two-foot rule would have gone under.

The storm brought considerable trouble to the telephone company. A good many 'phones were put out of business, not only here, but in Bound Brook, Westfield and Somerville. It will take a day or two to get things running as usual. The electric light service suffered some, and there were hitches in the trolley schedules.

The rain was no private graft for these regions. Hartford, Conn., got 3.64 inches in twelve hours ending last night. Washington's streets trickled from a downfall of 2.06 and Baltimore underwent a washing of 2.92 for twelve hours. On the other hand, Philadelphia only experienced a downfall of .96, while Albany had .98. There was no rain at all in Western New York and Western Pennsylvania.

The storm was one that has been loafing around the Gulf of Mexico for several days and which passed inland over New Orleans. The centre was at Montgomery, Ala., on Sunday night, and yesterday morning found the headquarters of the disturbance off the Virginia capes. The storm hugged the Atlantic coast and was still so engaged when last heard from. Since leaving Alabama it has held northeast. At 8 o'clock last night the centre was over southern Connecticut and the storm was steadily moving northeastward. Locally the storm was not accompanied by high winds, except for a few minutes late yesterday afternion, and when things began to dry off here early last night the wind shifted from the southeast to southwest.

BATTERY TO BE IN LINE.

Orangeites to March in Elizabeth's Old Home Parade.

Preparations for the Old Home Week celebration at Elizabeth are rapidly nearing completion. Contributiins in aid of the project are being received daily. Richard C. Jenkinson, of Newark, sent a check for $50 this morning. Total contributions to date are $1,892.

The decoration of the city has already been begun. Several mercantile houses in Elizabeth have placed an order for extensive decorating, and it is believed that this feature will be unsurpassed in the history of the town. Flags have been extended from every trolley pole for several miles on both sides of Elizabeth avenue, Broad street, First, Third and Trumbull streets. There will also be quite an electrical display. The parade, of course, will be the biggest feature of the celebration. A request to be allowed to march was received from the famous Battery A, of Orange, today. It will be granted gladly.

DRYDEN TROPHY BATTERED.

Cup Reaches War Department in Bad Shape.

The Dryden trophy, offered in 1903 by Senator Dryden as a prize in the annual marksmanship tournaments at Sea Girt, was sent to the war department at Washington, D. C., yesterday so badly battered and tarnished that it is a question if it can ever be repaired.

This year the cup was won by the cavalry team from the army and was shipped from Trenton last week. When it was opened it was practically a wreck. None of the war department officials are able to account for the damaged condition of the trophy. An investigation will be started at once and an effort will be made to ascertain whether it will be possible to repair the prize.

Dr. Zelio Withdraws Claim.

The claim of Dr. P. J. Zeglio for $401.50 against the estate of the late John Rehman, of Warren township, has been withdrawn and the settlement of the accounts of the estate, in the Somerset County Orphans' Court, has been laid over for two weeks. This is the case in which Judge Schenck ordered the exceptions to the account withdrawn. The suit in the Supreme Court for the same claim, it is said, has also been withdrawn.

John Morton, of West Front street, who has been spending the summer in Scotland, will sail for home tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. White, of Rockview avenue, are planning a trip to Cuba, expecting to sail early in October.

SELLS HIS LIVERY.

George Cole Disposes of His Business.

George Cole, of West Second street, proprietor of one of the oldest livery ond boarding stables in the city, has sold his business to Cyrus Boice and Charles E. Ball, who have formed a partnership. The new firm will take possession October 1. In the meantime the stables will be thoroughly renovated and improveed. Mr. Cole will continue in the undertaking business, and his office will be at its present location.

Mr. Ball has been associated with the Prudential Insurance Company as superintendent for a number of years, while his partner, Mr. Boice, was employed for a long time by C. K. Compton, manufacturer of confectionery, having charge of his route through the country districts.

Race for Ponies.

The Fair Acres Riding and Driving Association met at the Hotel Iroquois last night to plan the matinee meet for next Saturday. A running race will again be a feature of the card. The race will be for ponies.

Miss Adele Von Ohl, formerly of the Hippodrome riders, is expected to perform again. She will probably ride Rifle, champion high jumper.

To Ride at Essex Fair.

Marcus Hoyt, who rode Ida G. under the wire first in the running race of the matinee meet Saturday, will pilot the mare in a race at the Essex County Fair Thursday afternoon. He is confident of winning. Ida G. has some of the best blood of the turf in her, and Mr. Hoyt has won her so she runs with all her spirit for him.

Matriculate at Smith.

Among the young students from this city to enter Smith College this season are Miss Fredricka Mead, daughter of Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, of East Front street, and Miss Blanche Buttfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Buttfield, of Rockview avenue.

—The High School glee club has been organized with S. B. Howe, Jr., in charge.

—Bert McDonald was arrested in the borough this morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. He will be given a hearing tonight.

Alva A. Clark, of Somerville, has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, of Myrtle avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert Condict, of Central avenue, have been enjoying their outing in the Adirondacks.

John C. Lynch, of Elizabeth street, continues to improve at the hospital and he expects to return home within a short time.

Jersey Priests Change Parishes.

Bishop John J. O'Connor, of the Catholic diocese of Newark, has announced several changes among the priests of his diocese. The Rev. J. A. Reynolds, curate at St. Stephen's church, Arlington, has been transferred to St. Aloysius' church, Newark, succeeding the Rev. Father Kehoe. The Rev. D. J. Hogan, of Nashville, Tenn., goes to Arlington. Father Kehoe will leave on Wednesday for his new charge in Bergen county.

If an employe doesn't know his place he need not expect to keep it long.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Robert Mantell will appear in "King Lear" at the New Plainfield theatre next Tuesday night.

Good, clean comedy, bright catchy music, pretty girls, gorgeous scenery and a wealth of costumes are a few of the features in the merry musical comedy, "Around the Clock," which will be the attraction at the theatre tomorrow.

One of the quaintest and most delightful characters in all the wide range of the modern drama is Hosea Howe, the central figure in that charming play, "Peaceful Valley," which is being revived this season under the direction of E. K. Martin. Edward Saxon is investing this part with a simple lovableness that is winning his work favorable comparison with that of Sol Smith Russell's delineation of this role.

The management of the New Plainfield theatre announces the return to Plainfield of D. W. Robertson's advanced moving picture organization of New York city. Mr. Robertson intends to eclipse all his previous efforts on the return to this town on Thursday evening, September 26.

On November 21, 1899, through the illness of the late Joseph Jefferson, his son, William Winter Jefferson, had the opportunity of appearing in his father's part of "Bob Acres" in "The Rivals," Sheridan's brilliant comedy, and was pronounced with unanimous accord a positive success. He has been playing the part ever since, and accompanied by his brother, Joseph, who plays "Sir Lucius," and an exceptionally efficient company, including Theodore Hamilton, Eugene O'Brien, Richard Lyle, Roger Burnham, Blanche Bender, Roberta Brennan and Emilie Melville, will present this classical comedy here on September 30.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

TenEyck & Harris, the coal dealers, are prepared to fill all orders promptly. The best anthracite at the lowest prices.

Charles E. Vail, the Park avenue jeweler, is an expert in the work of repairing watches or clocks and his stock of jewelry is second to none.

Cigars—of the finest quality at M. C. Dobbins' store, North avenue, seasoned or fresh, as preferred, but all of pure tobacco—no dope. All smoking tobaccos.

Dudley Miller, the Park avenue druggist, carries a complete stock of drugs and medicines, including the celebrated Rexall goods. Prescriptions promptly and accurately compounded.

The only proper way to save your earnings is to place them in the Plainfield Savings Bank, where liberal interest is paid. This institution is up-to-date and progressive and well affords every convenience for banking.

When you want first class fruits or vegetables, the best to be found in the market, go to S. Scheuer & Co.'s on West Front street. Don't forget that the firm also carries a choice line of groceries and the highest quality meat. Prices are reasonable.

—Mrs. Hughes, of Shirley & Johnston's store, has returned from her annual vacation.

—The next regular meeting of the Common Council will be held on Monday night, October 7.

—All work on the brick pavement contract was stopped yesterday by the rain, it being impossible as well as impractical to lay the concrete foundation.

—Mrs. Rufus Lincoln, of West Eighth street, has awarded the contract to Alex Milne for an addition to be built on her handsome residence. Evarts Tracy is the architect.

There will be initiation at the meeting of Franklin Council No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., Thursday night and details for the coming entertainment perfected.

Fred Brewer, of Stone street, and John Carney, of Lincoln place, have arrived at Seattle, Wash., their place of destination, and in letters to friends here say that they like the country very much.

A School of Dress.

Would you know the season's styles? Would you view the most attractive models that the fashion makers have produced? Would you be rightly guided in your choice of Fall and Winter apparel? Would you see the widest possible variety of styles?
Then enter the portals of this greatest of New Jersey's emporiums—this "School of Dress," on any of the days set aside for our formal Autumn presentation of the season's fashions—a liberal education awaits you.
The showing will be colossal. It will outrank any other Newark exhibit if for no other reason than the fact that we have ample space in which to make the show. It will rival the most sumptuous of New York's openings because we have the finer things from the best sources abroad and at home.
Our faith in Newark's ability and desire to buy the best has led us to bring to this city many rare and beautiful gowns and hats—some actually Paris-made, many others the result of Paris thought.
It will be a great fashion show, and we hope to count you among our visitors.

Autumn Opening Days
Wednesday, September 25,
Thursday, September 26.
PROMENADE CONCERT IN THE PIANO STORE THRUOUT WEDNESDAY.

The Hats Are Gorgeous.

Great is the word! Hats never were larger—never so extravagantly and gorgeously trimmed. They startle you at first glance and you wonder how you are going to wear such immense things, but when you see them worn on the right heads you conclude that they are not so awful after all. Anyhow, not all the hats are large. Those who like the less pretentious and Frenchy effects are well cared for. In fact it is a season admitting of greater diversity than any we can remember—tho everything, in style and color and treatment, tends to showiness.
Our direct importations of Paris made hats will doubtless excite a great deal of comment and criticism. In Paris, you know, they go to extremes—at least we more conservative Americans think so—and these Paris Pattern Hats may not please everyone, but we promise you you'll see some real beauties in the collection—hats that are novel, yet beautiful and wearable. The Paris hats form a feature that stands the Hahne & Co. showing apart from the commonplace.
Mothers will be delighted with the quaint little French Bonnets we've imported for the little folks. Bring the little girls to the opening.
The hats from the hands of our own artist milliners are surpassingly beautiful, and reveal a taste and skill as rare as it is valued. Even in the most popular priced hats there is distinctiveness and beauty.

Revelations in Gowns.

If we had established an Art Gallery of Fashion and hung therein paintings of the season's styles by a Gainsborough, we could not have invited you to a more interesting nor a grander exhibition than the one you will see in our immense Apparel Store and especially in the Grand Salon, which has always been a show place here.
Some of the most sumptuous evening gowns and wraps we have even shown will be seen. There will be a liberal collection of distinctive models in rich frocks and suits—some strikingly novel and beautiful masterpieces from the world's foremost tailors being among the exhibits.
Automobile Apparel and Furs will be features of the opening show.

SUITS AND DRESSES FOR MISSES.

Equally as important to many as the presentation of women's garments will be our showing of apparel for misses and petite women—and we are going to open the eyes of all who come to the fact that nowhere in New Jersey is there such interest shown in the requirements of the younger folks. The collection of tailored suits is particularly pleasing, as it embraces so many smart styles and unique colorings.

THE NEW WAISTS WILL DELIGHT YOU.

With Opening Days we will begin a series of Waist Presentations that will be a source of great pleasure to lovers of the beautiful in dress. We are going to show more elaborate and costly waists than ever, and this is saying a great deal for we have always led in showing the better things in this line.
Needless to attempt to describe the rare and rich creations which will be seen at the opening and afterwards. You must see them to enjoy them and to appreciate their real beauty.
EXTRA SPECIAL.
In conjunction with the opening we are going to offer beautiful new waists of French Messaline and Chiffon Taffeta—copies of splendid French models; effects that you would only expect in waists that sell for from $10 to $12; the French Messaline in white, light blue, pink, fawn and lavender; the Chiffon Taffetas in white, light blue and pink; richly embellished with German Valenciennes, Irish Point and Filet Laces, with insertions of Valenciennes in front and sleeves; novel and pretty sleeve effects; waists that almost anyone would put in the $10 class; priced for Opening Days at only $5.95

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

DIAMOND DUST.

The season's series is over between the Highlanders and the Athletics, the former winning ten out of nineteen games.

Umpire Dalley was right in the stand he took at Crescent Oval, Saturday. Westfield should have been willing to play after it cleared off, even though rain did follow ten minutes later.

Rahway, the claimants for the county championship, will meet Clinton Avenue on Crescent Oval, Saturday, and a red hot contest is anticipated. Rahway cannot forget that last defeat.

Hal. Chase, the first baseman of the Highlanders, is credited by the Philadelphia North American as being pre-eminently the best initial sacker, barring none.

It seems that the real name of Warhop, the pitcher signed by Hugh Jennings, is Schmidt and that he is a German, not an Indian. Those who had the latter impression must have thought his name was Warpaint.

The St. Louis Cardinals have not much to be proud of, but the distinction of not having won a game in Pittsburg this season is one that rivals cannot take away from them.

Ban Johnson has dismissed one of his umpires, Jack Stafford. The latter says that he is confident that his work has been satisfactory except in Philadelphia, recently.

A matter of great interest in the West is just how soon the Quakers will pass McGraw's men. The possibility that such an occurrence may not come to pass at all seems not to be entertained.

FOOTBALL.

Yale's first week of football practice has passed propitiously and ended last night with forty candidates at the training table. Coach Knox says no scrimmage work will be done until the middle of this week. All of the graduate coaches who have been working with the team are in high spirits and believe the Blue will triumph again. Seldom in the history of the sport at Yale have the candidates had the services of such men as Knox, Al Sharpe, Morse, Paul Veeder, Walter Camp and Brink Thorne the first few days of training.

About forty candidates for the Naval Academy football team turned out yesterday afternoon. Capt. Douglass, who has suffered more or less with his leg since he broke it three years ago, has returned and is in better condition than at any time since the accident. Among the old men who are back are Northcroft, Meyer and Spencer. Clay and Deyo, of the new fourth class, are showing up well.

Coach Bosey Reiter, of the Wesleyan football team, will make an endeavor this year to develop a fast eleven and one that can handle the spiral forward pass, as this will probably be the play most often used. The squad loses Capt. North, Jake Reiter, Cunningham, Norton, Smith and Finley, and the prospects for entering material are not bright, for the only man thus far in sight is Hess, a quarterback from Peddie Institute. Coach Reiter probably will use Capt. Taylor and Joy at tackles and Doe at centre. Hammond and Tompkins will probably be used as guards. Gildersleeve, Moore and Munson will make halfbacks, while Van. Tassel will be played at fullback. The loss of Cunningham leaves the eleven without a good punter. The outlook on the whole is not considered bright.

Preparations for Michigan's games with Wabash and Vanderbilt are on in earnest. Director Baird announced last night that the first game would be played next Saturday, when the varsity will be given a go at the reserves. As a result of this announcement it will be necessary for Coach Yost to begin signal practice tomorrow. The arrival of Schultz, the giant centre, makes practically complete the list of veterans who were expected to return. The big fellow is not in the best of condition, but Yost is confident that before the Case contest he will be able to put up his best game.

TENNIS.

The rain interfered with the tennis tournament at the Park Club on Saturday to such an extent that only two or three matches were played. It will be continued on Saturday, weather permitting.

Plainfield, N. J., September 24, 1907.

It is a long time before election day, but it is nevertheless a certainty that the Democrats have no hope of success in Union county, however meritorious their county ticket may be. As good a man as he is Mr. Katzenbach will make a poor showing in this section. Nobody is ignorant of the fact that the corporations' ways and means committee brought about his nomination. The trolley lawyer will stay in private life and devote his entire time to corporate practise if the decision rests with Union county.

If the independent voter is to decide upon a choice for the Governorship, there does not seem to be much doubt of the success of former Justice J. Franklin Fort at the polls on election day. Granting that his rival, former Mayor Frank Katzenbach, of Trenton, is a clean and able man, the Republican nominee is head and shoulders above the Democratic candidate in every possible way. His wide experience in public life and his splendid record are his strong points. In these he is far and away above his opponent, who is almost unknown to the great mass of voters. The platform upon which he stands also gives him a most marked advantage, and his unequivocal and courageous utterances regarding his position on a cardinal question of the hour—one upon which the Democratic candidate and platform remain silent—stamp him as the candidate worthy of the support of all independent and honest voters.

POLITICAL NOTES

Lieutenant Colonel Alexander R. Fordyce, Jr., of Middlesex county, will support J. Franklin Fort for governor and probably will make several speeches for him. Colonel Fordyce has been one of the most enthusiastic lieutenants of Senator Colby in the "New Idea" movement. He is a lawyer and deputy quartermoster general of New Jersey.

United State Senator Frank O. Briggs has won his fight for the renomination of Prof. Henry D. Thompson, member of Assembly from Princeton and a lecturer in Princeton University. Prof. Thompson was opposed by General C. Edward Murray and a number of the Mercer county leaders because he refused last winter to vote for the re-election of United States Senator John R. Dryden. The Mercer county leaders have agreed to his nomination and the fight is over.

Governor Stokes has announced that he will make a number of campaign speeches in behalf of Judge Fort. Speeches will also be made throughout the State by some of the "New Idea" leaders. It is expected that State Senator Everett Colby, leader in the "New Idea" movement, will be named as one of the members at large on the Republican State committee.

Governor Stokes, United States Senator Frank O. Briggs, chairman of the Republican State committee, and Judge J. Franklin Fort, of Essex county, the Republican Gobernatorial candidate, held a long conference yesterday relative to affairs of the campaign. It was decided that a meeting of the State committee should be held on Wednesday, and at that time details for Judge Fort's itinerary about the State will be completed.

Frederick Krafft, candidate of the Socialistic party for Governor, has sent the following open letter to J. Franklin Fort, the Republican candidate, to debate the question: "Does the history of the Republican party offer sufficient guarantee that your party will, if elected, carry into effect the platform adopted at Trenton September 19, 1907?"

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Conner, of Hillside avenue, have gone to the Jamestown Exposition.

DREW FORTY YEARS 'OLD

Anniversary of Famous Methodist Theological Seminary on Nov. 6.

WAS BANKRUPT IN 1875

Member of Faculty Saved It From Ruin—Its Halls Once Splendid Mansions.

On November 6 Drew Theological Seminary, the well known school of theology situated at Madison, will celebrate its fortieth anniversary. Drew Seminary is a Methodist institution, and is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast as a very excellent school for the instruction of Methodist preachers. The grounds of Drew were known at one time as the "Forest," and comprised the estate of William Gibbons, who, with his brother, Aaron Ogden, formed a steamboat company, the rival of Livingston and Fulton. The mansion, known as Mead Hall now, was in the old days considered one of the finest structures in the country, and the stone wall along Madison avenue, the massive iron gates and the stone porter's lodges are memorials of former grandeur. Asbury and Embury halls, which flank the right of the mansion, are buildings of the original estate.

Drew Seminary no doubt owes its existence to the counsels of the Rev John Parker, the intimate friend and pastor of Daniel Drew, a wealthy New York broker; who gave $270,000 for such an institution. Mr. Drew spent about $500,000 in order that the seminary might be formed. In the spring of 1875 Drew failed and the endowment for the running expenses was swept away. Professor John F. Hurst, president of the seminary, and Professor (now president) Henry A. Buttz, with mighty efforts and through the generous aid of friends of the seminary, raised the amount needed to run the seminary. The growth of Drew Theological Seminary has been fast, and over 1,900 men have pursued their theological education there.

The grounds of the seminary are exceedingly beautiful, and one would hardly think that a college, harboring probably 200 students, was situated there. Mead, Asbury and Embury halls are the original buildings of the estate, the former being used for the president's and registrar's offices, while the two latter buildings are used for the dining hall, stationery store, tailoring shop and laundry agency. The Cornell Library, which is situated in the central part of the campus, was the gift of John B. Cornell and others, being built in 1888 at a cost of $90,000. It is one of the finest buildings on the campus and contains over 80,000 volumes, exclusive of pamphlets, etc., making it the largest library in any theological seminary.

In 1895 Hoyt-Bowne Hall, the largest dormitory at Drew, was completed at a cost of $100,000, and was the joint gift of William Hoyt, formerly president of the board of trustees, and Samuel W. Bowne, the present president of the board. The administration building, probably the finest appearing structure at Drew, was dedicated in 1899, and cost over $100,000. The furnishings of this building are splendidly wrought and beautifully adapted to the needs of the work. The two friends of the seminary, who made this gift, have withheld their names. About forty years of earnest labor by some of the best minds and hearts in Methodism have given Drew Seminary a character distinctively its own, and the best thought of today is assimilated to the traditions of the past in a manner conducive alike to scholarship and evangelistic fervor.

ROB TICKET AGENT OF $600.

Highwaymen Knew Asbury Park Man Carried Receipts With Him.

Highwaymen held up George Hampton, ticket agent of the New York & Long Branch Railroad Company, early yesterday morning at Asbury Park and got about $600 in acsh, part of Saturday's receipts at the station.

Hampton was hurrying from his home in Avon at 5 o'clock when three men jumped out on him from a clump of trees.

A black skirt was thrown over Hampton's head by one of the men, while a second held the ticket agent's arms close to his sides. The third took the money.

When Hampton closed the station Saturday night he took with him, as usual, the recipts of the day, which footed up between $600 and $700. There is no safe in his station, and the agent frequently has to carry large sums. Apparently the highwaymen knew this.

Liquor Question Bothers Club.

Cranford, Sept. 24.—The Golf Club stockholders and members held a meeting Saturday night to vote on the proposition to amend the by-laws by placing the management and control in the hands of a board of fifteen directors. After an animated discussion the proposition was voted down. The club is in a quandary, with reference to its liquor license, which was allowed to lapse with the privilege of renewal, at $25 a year. It will now cost $250 to secure a new license, and the club is "dry."

The Woodhull & Martin Store.

The New Fall Goods

are arriving daily. Each department is taking on its fall dress. A big store like this is a sort of Panorama—a constantly changing scene, something coming and going all the time. Not one item in a hundred sees itself in print. The only way to keep in touch with the many new things is to come and see us often. We want you to feel free to come in and look around. Whether you have anything to buy or not, make yourself at home. You are entirely welcome at all times.

Advance Showing of New Fall Costumes.

The prevailing styles are semi-fit and three-quarter length Coats in three-quarter and full length sleeves, in cheviot and broadcloth, stripes, checks and plain colors, at prices ranging from $15 to $65.

New Fall Millinery.

Exquisite styles, a grand exhibition of the budding flowers of Fall fashion gathered from the fascinating style gardens of London and Paris, and when you are looking for a new hat you cannot afford to pass by the collection here presented.

A Showing of American Rugs

It's increasingly the fashion nowadays to use Rugs as floor coverings—either on a polished surface or on a plain carpet foundation.

The popularity of Rugs has incited our domestic makers to great deeds. They have drawn their inspiration from the beautiful Rugs of the Orient, and so close are the copies that it is often difficult to distinguish one from the other.

In our superb stock of Domestic Rugs we show all the very latest designs and color effects that you'll find in the Oriental Rugs, as well as the most artistic patterns of all the leading American makers, and in all sizes, from a doormat 18x36 inches to a carpet rug 9x12 feet.

Extraordinary Piano Selling at Closing Out Sale

Of the Hallet & Davis Piano Store's Large Stock of the Highest Grade and Most Reliable Pianos. Only Four Days More of This Great Sale.

People Anticipating Piano Needs Two and Three Years

Buying Now Because They Are Saving From One-third to One-half the Ordinary Prices On These New High-grade Guaranteed Pianos.

Long Credit and Easy Terms at Cash Sale Prices

So that all can participate in this Great Money Saving Event.
SALE ENDS SATURDAY THIS WEEK.

OPEN EVENINGS, No. 170 EAST FRONT ST.

Probably I should say extraordinary piano buying.

However, it makes little difference whether I say extraordinary buying or extraordinary selling—either or both are equally true of this great sale.

Many styles of the highest grade pianos are being closed out at prices almost half customary retail prices.

To say that the "interest is unabated" in this great opportunity to shrewd piano buyers, is putting it mildly.

As the sale is drawing to a close, only four days more remaining, the enthusiasm and interest waxes greater, the purchases are made quicker than ever when the great reductions, marked plainly on every instrument are shown.

Many have availed themselves of this unprecedented opportunity—Plainfield's best people and best judges of pianos and piano values; music teachers who are artists; musicians who are good judges; doctors, lawyers, and all people, and all have secured bargains that cannot be duplicated in a lifetime. Why not you?

Remember, I am absolutely closing out the stock; every instrument must and will be sold by Saturday night.

Profits have been sacrificed and the pianos are going at prices which barely cover cost.

SEVERAL BOSTON-MADE PIANOS.

We have six large sized Upright Pianos, beautiful case designs, of a standard Boston make, in the mahogany, English oak, and burl walnut cases, which regularly sell at from $350 to $400. Sale prices on these pianos from $237 to $252.

Terms, $10 to $15 cash, and $6 to $8 monthly.

New Upright Pianos of New York make in plain case designs, but excellent works, regular prices $250 to $275, sales price $137 to $157¼.

Terms, $10 cash, $5 monthly.

A BARGAIN IN A USED UPRIGHT.

We have just one used upright left, which should be sold for $125 to $150 if real value was considered. This will go at $90. Terms to suit. Call early, this will be snapped up quickly.

UPRIGHTS OF THE HIGHEST CLASS.

In this class we include various instruments of the most famous makers in the world; these are instruments the exact counterparts of those used by such world's famous artists as Adelina Patti, Emma Eames, Lillian Nordica, Walter Damrosch and many others. In short, they represent the acme of the piano builder's art.

Think of getting one of these $400, $450, $500 to $600 pianos for $287, $317 to $387.

Payments can be arranged, if desired, on these instruments.

Once more would urge upon you the necessity of making haste. If you ever expect to buy a piano you owe it to yourself to take advantage of the great price reductions this closing-out sale affords.

Remember, when I say this sale closes next Saturday night and that after that time should any pianos be left unsold they will be shipepd away, these statements are facts—cold facts. Do not think otherwise. The piano buyer's opportunity is nearly over.

MR. HUDSPETH GETS HIS OFFICES READY.

Democratic Headquarters Opened in Fuller Building, Jersey City.

Jersey City, Sept. 24.—Democratic State headquarters were formally opened in a suite of three rooms on the second floor of the Hudson street side of the Fuller building, immediately opposite and looking into the office of President Edward E. F. C. Young, of the First National Bank, here yesterday.

The suite until recently was occupied by M. J. Sage & Co., a firm of brokers, which remained in operation until the police authorities objected. The fact that the rooms were formerly an alleged bucketshop had no depressing effect when it was noted that the suite adjoins that of George T. Werts, the last Democratic Governor of the State, and that the suite was formerly occupied by the late ex-Governor Joseph M. Bedle.

NEW DIVORCE LAW FOR NEW JERSEY

IT FORBIDS THEM FOR OFFENCES NOT RECOGNIZED ELSEWHERE.

Any one who is entitled to a divorce under the present law of the State of New Jersey, but who has postponed it, had better look up the new law, which goes into effect January 1 next, on the subject.

This law, recommended by the Uniform Divorce Law Commission and adopted by the present Legislature with some slight amendments, does not change the statutory grounds for divorce in New Jersey, but does make one very radical condition. It is this: If a person sues for divorce in New Jersey on grounds furnished in another State, the decree will be refused if the offense is not recognized in the other State as sufficient for divorce.

For instance, in New Jersey adultery and desertion are recognized as grounds for absolute divorce and cruelty for limited divorce. In New York adultery only is recognized. A New Yorker suing in New Jersey for divorce for a desertion committed in New York, cannot obtain a decree here after January 1 next.

A South Carolinian could not obtain a divorce here on any ground whatever, the offense taking place in South Carolina, because no divorce is permitted in that State.

It is likely that all divorce cases in which proceedings are instituted before January 1 will be decided under the old law, even though the decision comes after that.

Pastor Changes Pulpits.

Rev. Clifford P. Case, for six years pastor of the Reformed church at Franklin Park, Somerville, moved today to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he will occupy the pulpit of the First Reformed church. Dr. Van Giesen, his predecessor, had served there for forty years.

STRING OF CONVENTIONS

Sunday School Workers of All Counties Preparing for Meeting.

NO DATES TO CONFLICT

Mr. Fergusson Hopes to Attend Them All—Union County Workers to Meet October 17 at Roselle.

Sunday school workers throughout the State are busy now with their annual conventions. Several have already taken place and others are scheduled for every week from now on tor November 7. The Union county convention will be held at Roselle October 17. Rev. E. Morris Fergusson, of Newark, general secretary of the New Jersey State Sunday School Association, will make an effort to attend every convention. To permit this ,the meetings have been planned so that no two come on the same day. This will occur only once this season, and these two sessions are not so far apart but that Mr. Fergusson can attend to both.

The places and times of meetings for county associations are: Morris county, at Boonton, September 25; Monmouth county, at Atlantic Highlands, September 26; Hunterdon county, Presbyterian church of Flemington, October 1; Gloucester county, First Baptist church, Woodbury, October 3; Mercer county, Baptist church, Hamilton Square, October 8; Union county, First Presbyterian church, Roselle, October 17; Ocean county, at Tuckerton, October 18; Cape May, at Cape May City, October 12; Cumberland county, at the Methodist Episcapoal church, Newport, October 24; Bergen county, Methodist Episcopal church, Ridgewood, October 25; Burlington county, Burlington, October 31; Atlantic county, Methodist church, Hammonton, November 1; Passaic county, First Baptist church, Passaic, November 5; Hudson county, Park Reformed church, Jersey City, November 5; Camden county, Presbyterian church, Haddonfield, November 7.

A provisional program has already been issued for the forty-seventh anniversary and annual meeting of the State Association at Freehold, November 19, 20 and 21. Five churches will be used for the convention. Most of the first morning will be given up to an excursion to the Monmouth Battlefield and Old Tennent church. President James L. Griggs, of Somerville, will preside. Mayor D. P. Smith will make the address of welcome, and Walter M. Irving, chairman of the executive committee, will respond.

A number of officers of the International Sunday School Association will speak. These are Mrs. J. Woodbridge Barnes, of Newark, who is international primary secretary; William N. Hartshorn, of Boston, chairman of the executive committee of the International Society, and William C. Pearce, international secretary of adult Bible classes. Among the other speakers will be Rev. Dr. Charles R. Erdman, a professor at Princeton; Miss Josephine L. Baldwin, who prepares the Sunday school lessons for a number of religious magazines; Rev. John W. Lyell, of Camden; William D. Porter, of Summit, and Ralph E. Diffendorfer, of Madison.

JUDGES FOR CIRCUIT COURT.

Chief Justice Gummere Announces Where They Will Preside.

Trenton, Sept. 24.—Judge Frederic Adams will continue to preside in Essex County Circuit Court, according to the announcement made by Chief Justice Gummere. Other assignments announced are as follows:

Judge Wilbur A. Heisley will sit in Essex, Monmouth and Hudson; Judge Frank T. Lloyd will hold court in Mercer, Middlesex, Hunterdon, Burlington, Gloucester and Salem; Judge James F. Minturn, recently appointed, has been assigned to Bergen, Passaic, Morris, Sussex and Warren counties. Judge Benjamin A. Vail will hold the circuit courts in Hudson, Union and Somerset counties; Judge Charles W. Parker will be occupied solely in the Hudson County Circuit, and Judge Allan B. Endicott has been assigned to the counties of Atlantic, Cumberland, Camden and Cape May.

NEW COTTAGE OPENING.

Frank Bergen Among Speakers at Washington's Headquarters.

Somerville, Sept. 24.—The opening of the caretaker's cottage of the Wallace House, Washington's headquarters, took place here Saturday. A luncheon was served, and a large delegation of Newarkers was in attendance. Among the guests were Richard F. Stevens, of Newark, vice president of the Sons of the American Revolution; Mrs. William D. Kearfoot, of Montclair; Frank Bergen, chief counsel for the Public Service Corporation of Newark, and Mrs. Bedle, of Jersey City. Mrs. Bedle and Mr. Bergen made addresses during the afternoon. The cottage, which was built at a cost of $3,500, from money furnished by the various Revolutionary societies of the State, is of a colonial style.

RIVALS FOR GOVERNOR MEET AT SPRING LAKE

KATZENBACH AND FORT ARE NEIGHBORS AT SUMMER RESORT.

By leaning over the fence that surrounds his summer home at Spring Lake, former Mayor Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., of Trenton, can shake hands with his rival for the Governorship of New Jersey, former Justice J. Franklin Fort. The two candidates for Governor have been summer neighbors for years and the best of friends. The little Katzenbachs play about the lawn of the Fort cottage, and there has never been any sign of friction between the two men of opposite political faiths.

Fresh from Thursday's convention, in which he promised to give the people of the State good government if he was elected, Mr. Fort went down to Spring Lake Friday afternoon, and Mr. Katzenbach was just ahead of him.

"Can't wish you success, judge," said Mr. Katzenbach, "but next to myself I don't know of any man I'd rather see Governor."

"That's about the way I feel," replied the Republican candidate, "but I'm going to do my everlasting best to give you the worst thrashing you ever got."

The two men didn't look like real rivals at all, and the people of Spring Lake are wondering for which they will vote because they like both and both are good friends of the resort.

Mr. Katzenbach is preparing his speech of acceptance of the Democratic nomination, because the committee of notication will meet him in Trenton next Tuesday or Wednesday and tell him what the convention has done and explain that the people of New Jersey would be looking to him to carry the standard for good government through the coming campaign. He is receiving hearty assurances of support from active men in all parts of the State, and they are not Democrats alone, but prominent independent voters who have an abiding faith in the breadth and character of the man chosen by the Democratic convention.

Oddly enough election day is Mr. Katzenbach's birth anniversary, and friends recall that several important events besides that particular one have happened in his career. He was chosen Mayor of Trenton on one birthday, and his friends say it is an omen of success.

BOB HAMPTON of PLACER

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY A. C. McCLURG & CO.

She looked directly at him, her hands clasped, her breath almost sobbing between the parted lips. At first she could not speak. "Oh, you hurt me so," she faltered at last. "I did not suppose you could ever think that. I—I did not mean it; oh, truly I did not mean it! You forget now young I am; how very little I know of the world and its ways. Perhaps I have not even realized how deeply in earnest you were, have deceived myself into believing you were merely amusing yourself with me. Why, indeed, should I think otherwise?"

"I love you," he said, with simple honesty. "I seek you for my wife."

She started at these frankly spoken words, her hands partially concealing her face, her form trembling. "Oh, I wish you hadn't said that! It is not because I doubt you any longer; not that I fail to appreciate all you offer me. But it is so hard to appear ungrateful, to give nothing in return for so vast a gift."

"Then it is true that you do not love me?"

The blood flamed suddenly up into her face, but there was no lowering of the eyes, no shrinking back. She was too honest to play the coward before him.

"I shall not attempt to deceive you," she said, with a slow impressiveness instantly carrying conviction. "This has already progressed so far that I now owe you complete frankness. Donald Brant, now and always, living or dead, married or single, wherever life may take us, I shall love you."

Their eyes were meeting, but she held up her hand to restrain him from the one step forward.

"No, no; I have confessed the truth; I have opened freely to you the great secret of my heart. With it you must be content to leave me. There is nothing more that I can give you, absolutely nothing. I can never be your wife; I hope, for your sake and mine, that we never meet again."

Brant stood like a statue, his face grown white. He did not in the least doubt her full meaning of renunciation.

"You will, at least, tell me why?" It was all that would come to his dry lips.

She sank back upon the sofa as though the strength had suddenly deserted her body, her eyes shaded by an uplifted hand.

"I cannot tell you. I have no words, no courage. You will learn some day from others, and be thankful that I loved you well enough to resist temptation. But the reason cannot come to you from my lips."

He leaned forward, half kneeling at her feet, and she permitted him to clasp her hands within both his own. "Tell me, at least, this—is it some one else? Is it Hampton?"

She smiled at him through a mist of tears, a smile the sad sweetness of which he would never forget. "In the sense you mean, no. No living man stands between us, not even Bob Hampton."

"Does he know why this cannot be?"

"He does know, but I doubt if he will ever reveal his knowledge; certainly not to you. He has not told me all, even in the hour when he thought himself dying. I am convinced of that. It is not because he dislikes you, Lieut. Brant, but because he knew his partial revealment of the truth was a duty he owed us both."

"You leave me so completely in the dark," he said; "is there no possibility that this mysterious obstacle can ever be removed?"

"None. It is beyond earthly power—there lies between us the shadow of a dead man."

He stared at her as if doubting her sanity.

"A dead man! Not Gillis?"

"No, it is not Gillis. I have told you this much so that you might comprehend how impossible it is for us to change our fate. It is irrevocably fixed. Please do not question me any more. I cannot bear it!"

Brant rose to his feet and stood looking down upon her bowed head, her slender figure shaken by sobs.

"Naida, as you have asked it, I will go; but I go better, stronger, because I have heard your lips say you love me. I am going now, my sweetheart, but if I live I shall come again. I know nothing of what you mean about a dead man being between us, but I shall know when I come back, for, dead or alive, no man shall remain between me and the girl I love."

"This—this is different," she sobbed, "different; it is beyond your power."

"I shall never believe so until I have faced it for myself, nor will I even say good-by, for, under God, I am coming back to you."

He turned slowly and walked away. As his hand touched the latch of the door he paused and looked longingly back.

"Naida."

She glanced up at him.

"You kissed me once; will you again?"

She rose silently and crossed over to him, her hands held out, her eyes uplifted to his own. Neither spoke as he drew her neatly to him and their lips met.

"Say it once more, sweetheart?"

"Donald, I love you."

A moment they stood thus face to face, reading the great lesson of eternity within the depths of each other's eyes. Then slowly, gently, she released herself from the clasp of his strong arms.

"You believe in me now? You do not go away blaming me?" she questioned, with quivering lips.

"There is no blame, for you are doing what you think right. But I am coming back, Naida, little woman; coming back to love and you."

An hour later N troop trotted across the rude bridge and circled the bluff on its way toward the wide plains.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Mr. Hampton Resolves.

Mr. Bob Hampton stood in the bright sunshine on the steps of the hotel, his appreciative gaze wandering up the long, dusty, unoccupied street, and finally rising to the sweet face of the young girl who occupied the step above. As their eyes met both smiled as if they understood each other.

"There is nothing quite equal to feeling well, little girl," he said, genially, patting her hand where it rested on the railing, "and I really believe I am in as fine fettle now as I ever have been. Do you know, I believe I'm perfectly fit to undertake that little detective operation casually mentioned to you a few days ago. It's got to be done, and the sooner I get at it the easier I'll feel. Fact is, I put in a large portion of the night thinking out my plans."

"I wish you would give it up all together, Bob," she said, anxiously. "I shall be so dull and lonely here while you are gone."

"I reckon you will, for a fact, but, Naida, it isn't likely this little affair will require very long, and things are lots happier between us since my late shooting scrape. When fall comes I mean to take you east and put you in some good finishing school. Don't care quite as much about it as you did, do you?"

"Yes, I think I do, Bob." She strove bravely to express enthusiasm. "The trouble is, I am so worried over your going off alone hunting after that man."

He laughed, his eyes searching her face for the truth. "Well, little girl, he won't exactly be the first I've had call to go after. Besides, this is a particular case, and appeals to me in a sort of personal way. If you only knew it, you're about as deeply concerned in the result as I am, and as for me, I can never rest easy again until the matter is over with."

"It's that awful Murphy, isn't it?"

"He's the one I'm starting after first and one sight at his right hand will decide whether he is to be the last as well."

"I never supposed you would seek revenge, like a savage," she remarked, quietly. "You never used to be that way."

"Good Lord, Naida, do you think I'm low down enough to go out hunting that poor cuss merely to get even with him for trying to stick me with a knife? Why, there are 20 others who have done as much, and we have been the best of friends afterwards. Oh, no, lassie, it means more than that, and harks back many a long year. I told you I saw a mark on his hand I would never forget—but I saw that mark first 15 years ago. This is a duty I owe a friend, a dead friend, to run to earth this murderer. Do you understand now? The fellow who did that shooting up at Bethune 15 years ago had the same sort of a mark on his right hand as this one who killed Slavin. That's why I'm after him and when I catch up he'll either squeal or die."

"But how do you know?"

"I never told you the whole story and I don't mean to now until I come back and can make everything perfectly clear. It wouldn't do you any good the way things stand now, and would only make you uneasy. But if you do any praying over it, my girl, pray good and hard that I may discover some means for making that fellow squeal."

She made no response but stood gazing thoughtfully past him.

"Have you heard anything lately, Bob, about the Seventh?" she asked finally. "Since—since N troop left here?"

He answered with well-simulated carelessness. "No; but it is most likely they are well into the game by this time. Crook's column, I have just heard, was overwhelmingly attacked on the Rosebud, and forced to fall back. That leaves the Seventh to take the brunt of it, and there is going to be hell up north presently, or I've forgotten all I ever knew about Indians. But come, little girl, as I said, I'm quite likely to be off before night, provided I am fortunate enough to strike a fresh trail. Under such conditions you won't mind my kissing you out here, will you?"

She held up her lips and he touched them softly with his own. Her eyes were tear-dimmed. "Oh, Bob, I hate so to let you go," she sobbed, clinging to him. "No one could have been more to me than you have been, and you are all I have left in the world. Everything I care for goes away from me. Life is so hard, so hard!"

"Donald, I Love You."

"Yes, little girl, I know," and the man stroked her hair tenderly, his own voice faltering. "It's all hard; I learned that sad lesson long ago, but I've tried to make it a little bit easier for you since we first came together. Still, I don't see how I can possibly help this. I've been hunting after that fellow a long while now, a matter of 15 years over a mighty dim trail, and it would be a mortal sin to permit him to get away scot-free. Besides, if this affair only manages to turn out right, I can promise to make you the happiest girl in America. But, Naida, dear, don't cling to me so; it is not at all like you to break down in this fashion," and he gently unclasped her hands, holding her away from him while he continued to gaze hungrily into her troubled face.

"Sometimes I feel just like a coward, Bob. It's the woman of it; yet truly I wish to do whatever you believe to be best. But, Bob, I need you so much, and you will come back, won't you? I shall be so lonely here, for—for you are truly all I have in the world."

With one quick, impulsive motion he pressed her to him, passionately kissing the tears from her lowered lashes, unable longer to conceal the tremor that shook his own voice. "Never, never doubt it, lassie. It will not take me long, and if I live I come straight back."

He watched her slender, white-robed figure as it passed slowly down the deserted street. Once only she paused and waved back to him and he returned instant response, although scarcely realizing the act.

"Poor little lonely girl! Perhaps I ought to have told her the whole infernal story, but I simply haven't got the nerve, the way it reads now. If I can only get it straightened out, it'll be different."

Mechanically he thrust an unlighted cigar between his teeth and descended the steps, to all outward appearance the same reckless, audacious Hampton as of old.

The military telegraph occupied one-half of the small tent next the Miners' Retreat, and the youthful operator instantly recognized his debonair visitor.

"Well, Billy," was Hampton's friendly greeting, "are they keeping you fairly busy with 'wars and rumors of wars' these days?"

"Nuthin' doin' just now," was the cheerful reply. "Everything goin' ter Cheyenne. The Injuns are gittin' themselves bottled up in the Big Horn country."

"Oh, that's it? Then maybe you might manage to rush a message through for me to Fort A. Lincoln without discommoding Uncle Sam?" and Hampton placed a coin upon the rough table.

"Sure; write it out."

"Here it is; now get it off early, my lad, and bring the answer to me over at the hotel. There'll be another yellow boy waiting when you come."

The reply arrived some two hours later.

Fort A. Lincoln, June 17, 1876.
Hampton, Glencaid
Seventh gone west, probably Yellowstone. Brant with them. Murphy, government scout, at Cheyenne waiting orders. BITTON, Commanding.

He crushed the paper in his hand, thinking—thinking of the past, the present, the future. He had borne much in these last years, much misrepresentation, much loneliness of soul. To run this Murphy to cover remained his final hope for retrieving those dead, dark years. Ay, and there was Naida! Her future, scarcely less than his own, hung trembling in the balance. The sudden flashing of that name into his brain was like an electric shock. He cursed his inactivity. Great God! had he become a child again, to tremble before imagined evil, a mere hobgoblin of the mind? He had already wasted time enough; now he must wring from the lips of that misshapen savage the last vestige of his secret.

He dressed for the road, for hard, exacting service, buckling his loaded cartridge belt outside his rough coat and testing his revolvers with unusual care. He spoke a few parting words of instruction to Mrs. Guffy and went quietly out. Ten minutes later he was in the saddle, galloping down the dusty stage road toward Cheyenne.

Do You Realize
that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.
Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.
Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?
We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.
In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.
Why not decide to get a new piano now?

AMENDMENTS PROPOSED TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY BY THE LEGISLATURE OF 1907.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION, NO. 1.

BE IT RESOLVED (the House of Assembly concurring), That the following amendment to the constitution of this State be and the same is hereby proposed, and when the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to the Senate and House of Assembly, the said amendment shall be entered on their journals, with the yeas and nays thereon, and referred to the Legislature next to be chosen, and published for three months prior to the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November next in at least one newspaper of each county, to be designated by the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Assembly and the Secretary of State;

Strike out the proviso in section three of article four, and insert in place thereof the following:

The Legislature shall, in the year one thousand nine hundred and nine, and at its first session after each United States decennial census thereafter, and not oftener, divide and arrange the counties of this State into districts for the election therein of members of the General Assembly. Each assembly district so constituted shall contain, as nearly as practicable, an equal number of inhabitants, and shall consist of convenient and contiguous territory, in a compact form; provided, that each county shall, at all times, be entitled to at least one member, and the whole number of members to be chosen shall never exceed sixty.

The Court of Errors and Appeals is hereby invested with exclusive original jurisdiction and with full power under such procedure as it may by rules prescribe to review any division and arrangement made by the Legislature into assembly districts of the counties of this State, for the purpose of determining whether such arrangement and division or any part thereof is in accordance or in conflict with this section, and if in conflict herewith, to adjudge the same, or such part thereof as may be in conflict herewith, null and void. In case said court shall determine such arrangement and division, or any part thereof, to be null and void, the Legislature shall proceed to make a new arrangement and division, entire or partial, as the action of the court may require.

MINERS MORTALLY HURT

Seven Injured and Two Will Die as Result of Drop Down Shaft.

AT UPPER HIBERNIA

Victims Helpless for Hours in Pit, While Physicians Try Vainly to Get to Them—"Skip" Broke.

Seven miners were injured by being dropped in a "skip" to the bottom of a shaft in the Wharton mines at Upper Hibernia, near Morristown, yesterday, when they started from the surface to the working levels. Two of them were taken mortally hurt to All Souls' Hospital at Morristown.

The men lay for hours helpless at the bottom of the shaft helping each other as best they could while physicians summoned from nearby villages waited for the rigging of a temporary skip on which rescuers could proceed to aid the men below.

Daniel Ryan, the engineer, was suddenly taken ill while the skip was descending. He tried to shut off the power and stop the skip with its load of men, but before he could do so he collapsed. The skip shot on down the shaft past the dismounting platform and dashed to pieces on the stone flooring of the pit.

Finally a new cage was sent down, after hours of waiting, with mine officials and doctors. John Najak and Charles Parode, who were hurt internally in addition to sustaining broken bones, are the men who are not expected to live. The other men were severely but not seriously injurd.

Oxen for Farm Work.

Thomas Hill, a farmer, of Lawrenceville, near Trenton, has turned back the hands of time a hundred years and returned to the use of oxen on his farm. He says he finds them cheaper and better than horses or mules. In addition to having oxen for general farm work, he has trained a bull to run a treadmill that pumps water, churns butter and does all of that kind of work. The bull, Hill says, beats a windmill or gasolene engine, and the work keeps his temper sweet and prevents him from doing damage with his horns.

Wallace Morton, of West Front street, is detained at home by illness.

WHITE RIBBONERS MEET

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Mrs. Tomlinson Speaks On the Necessity of Effecting Political Action—Oratorical and Musical Contest at Night Session.

Looking back on a year of activity and progress, the county organization of the Women's Christian Temperance Union held its annual convention at the Presbyterian church, of Dunellen, which is included in the Union county body, yesterday, and started on a new twelvemonth under most promising conditions. The attendance was large, eighty delegates being present at the afternoon session. All the towns in the organization, Plainfield, Elizabeth, Rahway, Westfield, Cranford and Dunellen, were represented. There are eight unions, Elizabeth and Rahway having two each.

The convention opened at 10 o'clock, with the crusade psalm. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, of this city, the president, was in the chair. The secretary, Mrs. T. C. Bodine, of this city, was at her desk. Mrs. Ramsey Blair offered the prayer. Mrs. W. W. Casselberry extended the greeting of the Dunellen union, and Revs. W. W. Casselberry, of the Presbyterian church, and E. C. Dutcher, of the Methodist church, extended the greeting of the churches. Mrs. D. D. Irving, of Cranford, made the response.

Mrs. E. A. Parse, of this city, was made chairman of the resolutions committee. After the organization of the committees and some other bits of routine business, Mrs. Tomlinson presented her annual report as president. In part, Mrs. Tomlinson said:

"Given a society of Christian women with world wide organization, praying unceasingly, planning wisely, working with tireless energy toward the abolition of the liquor business, and its twin infamy—the house of shame—but never reaching the goal, it necessarily follows that to their inspired intelligence must come the thought, 'Why are our prayers unanswered? Why are we unsuccessful? Why do men and women, boys and girls still rush headlong into perdition by way of the saloon, in spite of all our prayers, in scorn of all our tears?'

"Pursuing the matter to its logical sequence, woman found herself in the realm of politics; for politics is the science of government, and the liquor traffic is permitted—nay—licensed and fostered by government, which is but the will of the sovereign voter registered at the ballot box and expressed by statute. Then woman, with her purpose fixed against the deadly foe; her feet swift and fearless in stern pursuit; her heart hot with indignation, and sore with grief determined to follow wherever her enemy leads, and smite him in his lair, halts short of victory to hear the imperial voice of government declare that the saloon is the protege of law and licensed to prey upon the home; its work of destruction is as lawful as her own pure love; and so in spite of all her prayers and tears, her passionate appeals and her brave endeavors, the rum power entrenches itself behind the ballot box, whither she is forbidden to come, although immigrants in our land only a few days can have the privilege of citizenship, and a Christian nation will have it so. Impelled by the voice of God, the W. C. T. U. has stood at the parting of the ways and said to the Christian voter 'this way leads to home protection, righteousness and peace, and that way leads to home desecration, the dominance of sin and the destruction of my people. In God's name choose the right. All reformers must suffer for their convictions, 'twas ever thus, and I sometimes query whether there would not be a greater number among that class now, if the paths were easier to tread, and there were no lions in the way, but the battle is not to the strong alone; it is to the vigilant, the active, the brave.'

"One of the great hindrances to reform is that so many Christians say 'We cannot mix religion with politics.' Why not? If politics is the science of government, and if politics is builded and established in righteousness and truth, what higher standard can we possibly attain to or hope for? If our politics in county, State and nation is not built on the highest platform of truth and morality, whose fault is it? Who is responsible? The citizen is the monarch of the ballot box, and who is the citizen? Not woman surely for she is deprived of casting her vote for God and humanity and can only use her influence, and many times that is very little; for many men will not cast their ballots as their wives

MR. MURPHY CHAIRMAN

Former Governor's Selection as State Committee Head Approved.

ANNOUNCEMENT TODAY

State Committeemen In Session at Trenton—Fort to Speak In Union County.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy, of Newark, was appointed chairman of the Republican State committee at a meeting held at Trenton today. His name was suggested by former Justice J. Franklin Fort, the party's Gubernatorial candidate, and it met with unanimous approval. Mr. Murphy will open his headquarters at Newark at an early date.

Mr. Fort assurred County Chairman Frank H. Smith, who held the proxy of former County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean at the State committee meeting that he would deliver as many speeches in Union county as desired, and would render all possible assistance in this district. Mr. Murphy announced that he would hold himself subject to the orders of the national committee, and had received assurances that speakers of national importance would help in New Jersey's campaign.

Failing in his ambition to become chairman of the State committee, the Governor is said to have endeavored to secure the appointment of Senator Bloomfield Minch from his home county as member-at-large, in order to have a staunch friend on the committee for the next three years, in the event of himself not being returned from Cumberland county next year, when all the county members' terms expire.

David Baird was not in accord with this plan and insisted that the South Jersey member-at-large ought to be Senator William J. Bradley. Congressman Henry C. Loudenslager, of Gloucester, considered himself the man and said so, but David O. Watkins, present county member from Gloucester, would not stand for Loudenslager, and as an easy solution of the problem the candidate is believed to have determined on a personal appointment and selected Senator Robbins, of Burlington, the county in which Mr. Fort was born.

KATZENBACH ACCEPTS; DODGES EXCISE MATTER

DEMOCRAT ADMITS SEEKING NOMINATION FOR GOVERNOR.

Former Mayor Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., of Trenton, was formally apprised of his nomination for Governor by the Democratic State convention at noon yesterday. The ceremonies took place in the Colonial room of the Trenton House, which was thronged with Democratic leaders from all over the State, as well as numerous local friends and admirers of the nominee. Former State Chairman William B. Gourley, of Paterson, as chairman of the convention which nominated Mr. Katzenbach, made the notification speech.

After thanking the committee, which consisted of the chairman of each county's convention delegation, for the honor, he frankly confessed that he had sought the nomination, but had made no pledges or promises, he said, of political preferment, if successful. He said the platform as adopted meets with his approval. Declaring that the issue to be determined is good State government, he said nothing of the excise question.

Funeral of W. H. Miller.

The funeral service of William H. Miller was held from the late home on Park avenue yesterday afternoon, and was private. Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, officiated. There was present a delegation from the Elizabeth Lodge of Elks, of which Mr. Miller was a member, and the pallbearers were members of that lodge. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes.

Loot Out For Frost.

Householders who care anything about their flowers and plants are cautioned to be on the lookout tonight for a light frost. Weather Prophet John Neagle received word today that there is likely to be a slight frost in exposed places in the interior. There has been a decided change in the temperature during the past forty-eight hours, the thermometer registering 65 degrees this morning.

Secretary Robbie Recovering.

Secretary Kenneth Robbie, of the Y. M. C. A., is recuperating after a week's illness at Norwich, Mass. He will return to his desk next Monday. Philip Van Arsdale is in charge of the office during his absence.

FORT REAPPOINTS KEAN

Union County Statesman One of Four Members-at-large of State Committee.

SOMMER ALSO NAMED

Franklin Murphy and Samuel K. Robbins the Other Two Appointees.

John W. Griggs, as chairman of the State Republican convention which nominated John Franklin Fort for Governor last Thursday, announced yesterday, in accordance with custom, the four men selected by the candidate to serve as members-at-large of the Republican State committee, one of whom the candidate designates as chairman.

The four notified by Mr. Griggs of their appointment, and each of whom, it is said, has agreed to accept the position tendered are: Franklin Murphy, of Essex, Frank H. Sommer, of Essex; John Kean, of Union, and Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington.

As soon as the names of the members-at-large were formally announced Candidate Fort said he had tendered the position of State chairman to former Governor Murphy, and that State headquarters would be opened in Newark as soon as the necessary preliminary arrangements were completed.

While the nominee refuses to discuss the manner in which he arrived at his selections, it is understood that each of the four was named without suggestion or solicitation on the part of any person or persons, with the exception of Sheriff Sommer, whose name was presented as the choice of the "New Idea" wing of the party in preference to others who had been suggested.

Additional attractions in the way of entertainment will be a series of what the promoters term "ations," under the direction of Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, and a picture entertainment which will be in charge of Mrs. F. H. Andrews. There will be many other forms of entertainment.

Funeral of Grace W. Woodland.

The funeral of Grace Woolston Woodland, only child of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Woodland, was held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the home of the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston, on Fairview avenue. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, officiated. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

JOHN FOWLER POUND BECOMES A BENEDICT

MISS HELEN SPARKS A HIGH NOON BRIDE.

Miss Helen Lillian Sparks, daughter of the late George W. Sparks, of Philadelphia, and John Fowler Pound, son of Daniel S. Pound, of West Front street, were married at noon today at Truell Hall, Netherwood, in the presence of nearly 200 guests from New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and this city. Rev. E. E. Roberson, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, performed the ceremony, which took place in the large ball room.

The bride wore a princess gown of white crepe de chine, over white taffeta. She also wore a tulle veil, caught up with a spray of orange blossoms, and carried bride roses. She was attended by Miss May Ella Pound, a sister of the groom, as maid of honor, who was gowned in white point d' esprit and carried pink roses.

The groom was attended by Walter S. Shaw, of Philadelphia, as best man. Master Fowler Pound, a nephew of the groom, acted as page, while Miss Edna May Pound, niece of the groom, was the flower girl. She was gowned in white and carried a basket of flowers.

After the guests were seated in the ball room, the bridal party entered, while an orchestra played the Mendelssohn Wedding March. The flower girl led the way, followed by the maid-of-honor and the bride, escorted by her cousin, Mrs. John R. Thayer, of Brooklyn, gave her away in marriage. Mrs. Thayer was gowned in gray liberty satin princess. Following the ceremony, which was performed with a ring, the couple received congratulations of the guests and a wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Pound left on an extended trip. On their return they will reside in Philadelphia. The bride is a descendant of Colonel Nathaniel Greene, of the Revolutionary Army. The groom is a descendant of Robert Fulton, of steamboat fame. He is a member of the firm of Dodge & Olcott Company, New York. Mrs. Pound received a large collection of valuable gifts, including solid silver, cut glass, furniture, linen, etc.

DEDICATION EXERCISES AT FAITH CHAPEL

ADDITION TO EDEFICE CAUSE FOR THANKSGIVING.

Under the auspices of the Baraca Class and the Philathea Women's Bible Class, the commodious new addition to Faith chapel was dedicated, last night. There was a large attendance of members of both classes and friends and the entertainment and social features were greatly enjoyed.

The program was opened with an address of welcome by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson, who also congratulated the organizations upon securing such well-adapted quarters for their meetings. He spoke of the phenomenal growth of the Baraca Class and the more recently organized Philathea as well as the Junior Baraca Class, of which L. W. Randolph is the teacher. Mr. Musson is the teacher of the senior Baraca Class and U. B. Crane teaches the women's Bible class.

The musical program included vocal selections by a quartet comprising William Holmes, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz, Mr. and Mrs. David Patterson, accompanied on the piano by Howard Case. There were also soprano solos by Miss Leila Druse, accompanied by Miss Florence Dickerson, while William Holmes gave several solos, and Whitney Frazee gave cornet solos.

Other addresses were made by L. W. Randolph, U. B. Crane and William Drake. After the program all adjourned to the new addition, where refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. The chapel was elaborately decorated for the occasion with flowers, while large streamers bearing the names of the Bible class organizations occupied a prominent place. The members were congratulated upon their excellent work and the fact that they have in so short a time secured the needed class rooms.

Dr. Gardner Will Speak.

Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Gardner, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. meeting Sunday afternoon. It will be Dr. Gardner's first public address in this city. His subject has not been announced.

—The macadam taken off of Park avenue is being spread on the avenue below Fourth street, and the steam roller is now being used there to put the thoroughfare in condition.

BUILDING IMPROVEMENTS

Silbert to Erect Large Building on East Front Street.

BUYS FROM MARSHALL

Acquires 47 Feet Front Adjoining Hotel Waldorf—To Build a Three Story Structure.

An important realty deal was effected today when Marcus Silbert, the Park avenue jeweler, purchased H. W. Marshall's valuable property on East Front street, just east of the Hotel Waldorf. It has a frontage of forty-seven feet and a depth of about 180 feet. The buildings are among the few old structures now remaining in the business section. The stores are now occupied by Cyrus Boice, as a cigar store, while the other store is used as a pool room and barber shop.

Mr. Silbert plans to tear down the old buildings and erect a handsome modern structure three stories in height. He will occupy one of the stores himself. Owing to the lateness of the season he will not begin to build before next year.

U. B. Crane, of West Front street, has purchased the property on the east adjoining the remaining portion of this old property, while Dr. Albert Pittis recently purchased the remaining portion of this old property, extending from that of Mr. Crane to George Finger's new one story building. This means that eventually the property will be improved with modern buildings which will greatly improve that part of East Front street.

GOOD CARD PREPARED FOR SATURDAY'S MEET

TWO CUPS TO BE RACED FOR—GIFT FOR MISS VON OHL.

Sport in plenty will be offered by the Fair Acres Club at the matinee meet at the Driving Park, Saturday. The Class C cup and the Class D cup will be raced for again, to settle the races left unfinished by the downpour last Saturday.

Class A and B horses will be out agagin, stepping for ribbons this time. The cups in those classes were won last week. The horses are in fine shape, and some pretty racing will undoubtedly be seen.

Miss Adele Von Ohl will again give an exhibition of horsewomanship. She is to be presented with a handsome silver loving cup by the association.

A special running race for ponies will be a feature. The entries are to be 14.3 hands or under. Gentlemen jockies will ride, the riders to be members of the Watchung Hunt Club or the Association.

The entries for Saturday are as follows:

ON TRUST COMPANIES.

J. Herbert Case Delivers Able Address Before Bankers' Convention.

Before the trust company section of the American Bankers' Association, in national convention at Atlantic City, yesterday, J. Herbert Case, secretary of the Plainfield Trust Company, delivered an address on "Progress and Development of New Jersey Trust Companies." It was an able paper, and received marked attention from the practical men in the audience. Mr. Case is vice president for New Jersey for the Bankers' Association.

Among the other speakers yesterday was former Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith, of Philadelphia. His theme was the difference between the meaning of "trust" company in the banking sense and in commercial life.

Funeral of Miss Atterbury.

The funeral service of Miss Justina Livingston Atterbury, sister of Albert A. Atterbury, of West Seventh street, was held from the home of her cousin, Mrs. William S. Stryker, 321 West State street, Trenton, yesterday afternoon. Rev. Ralph Urban, rector of All Saints' Episcopal church, conducted the service. The burial was in Trenton.

MRS. H. S. EDWARDS DEAD

Mother of Mrs. H. R. Phillips Passes Away in Her Eighty-third Year.

A CHRISTIAN WORKER

Husband Killed In Civil War—Daughter of English Clergyman and Mother of Capt. Edwards, of Cranford.

Miss Harriette S. Edwards, widow of Captain George Edwards and daughter of the late Rev. Jesse Pound, a well known English clergyman, died last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry R. Phillips, 11 Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, aged 82 years. Although her last illness was only of ten days' duration, Mrs. Edwards had been in poor health for several years.

She was a native of Maidstone, England, where she was born in 1826. She came to this country when a young girl and later married Captain George Edwards, who lost his lif in the Civil War. He went to the first as captain of the First New York Volunteer Engineer Corps and died in battle.

Rev. Jesse Pound's last charge was at Rossville, Staten Island, where he died several years ago. Mrs. Edwards was a woman of exceptional character and her entire life up to the time that health prevented was devoted to Christian effort, and she was always doing good. She was a member of Grace church.

Mrs. Edwards is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Henry R. Phillips, of the borough; Mrs. J. S. Walker, of San Francisco, and one son, Captain George F. Edwards, of Cranford.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, will have charge of the service to be held from the late home on Rockview avenue, Friday morning at 11 o'clock. The burial will be at Rossville, Staten Island, and will be private.

FREEHOLDERS HOLD THEIR CLAM-BAKE

COUNTY CHAIRMAN AND OTHER POLITICIANS ATTEND IT.

The first annual clambake of the Union County Board of Freeholders was held yesterday at Bendep's Hotel, Roselle. The entire membership of the board, excepting Freeholder Darby, of Mountainside; Freeholder Swain, of Summit; Freeholders Morrow and Donohue, of Elizabeth, and Dr. F. W. Westcott, the county physician, being present. Those from Plainfield present were Freeholders S. P. T. Wilbur and J. Hervey Doane; County Attorney W. R. Codington, B. Frank Coriell, County Chairman F. H. Smith and William T. Kirk.

The festivities began at noon with the serving of a chowder dinner. Late in the afternoon the bake was "opened."

While Freeholder J. Logan Fay, of Elizabeth, was chairman of the committee in charge, Freeholder George Cladek arranged the "bake" and personally supervised it. Others who assisted included Freeholders Hulskamper and S. R. Ryno, clerk of the board, while Fred Bender was proprietor of the hotel, who did all in his power to make the outing a success.

After the dinner the freeholders adjourned to the hotel bowling alleys, where a hotly contested game was rolled between teams captained by J. Hervey Doane and Thomas Pierson. Freeholder Doane's team won out by a score of 1,390 to 1,389.

JUDGMENT BY DEFAULT IN WRIGHT VS. SMITH.

Former Senator Ignored Assemblyman's Suit for Slander and Decree Is Entered.

On motion of William Mayo Atkinson, counsel for Assemblyman Edward H. Wright, Jr., in the latter's suit against James Smith, Jr., for $100,000 damages for alleged slander an interlocutory judgment was entered upon the records of the Circuit Court at Newark yesterday. It is now up to a jury to assess the amount of damages.

Mr. Atkinson said that the summons had been served August 16, and the return day was September 23, but the defendant had failed to file a plea of demurrer within the time required by law. Under the circumstances the lawyer had had judgment given the plaintiff by default.

—The work of putting a top dressing on Somerset street, between the bridge and Jackson avenue, has been completed and the thoroughfare presents an attractive appearance.

NOMINATE MR. STEENGRAFE

South Plainfielder on Middlesex Republican Ticket for Assembly.

THE COLBYITES LOSE

Steengrafe the Only "New Idea" Man to Win—Mr. Fort's Ring-Speech.

J. Franklin Fort, the Republican candidate for Governor, addressed the Middlesex Republican county convention at New Brunswick yesterday. It was his second campaign speech, and he was greeted with cheers. The "New Idea" men submitted a reform platform, but it was voted down, 60 to 46. Dr. Frank D. Crowther, former Assemblyman, of Perth Amboy, was named for surrogate; Edwin McKeag, for city attorney; William Stults, of Cranbury, and Archibald Steengrafe, a "New Idea" man, were named for the Assembly.

Other nominations were: For freeholders, Frank H. Pownall, of Jamesburg; J. E. Montgomery, of South Amboy; George S. Bunting, of Piscataway; William Stacey, of Perth Amboy, and A. L. Mundy, of New Brunswick. For mayor of New Brunswick, Theordore Whitlock. Mayor Drury W. Cooper refused a renomination.

In his convention speech Mr. Fort said:

"The keynote of the campaign is harmony. We are more united today than we have been in the last three years. Up our way everything is a love feast. There is no controversy and everybody is happy. Last night at a meeting at East Orange Colby and Sommer and Dalrymple and the rest of the regulars and "New Idea" men all stood shoulder to shoulder and pledged for the success of the campaign.

"And why not? This grand old Republican party is big enough for all. It is grand enough and courageous enough to meet any issue. If it is right it will stand for it, and if it is wrong it will throw it out and stand for that which is right and just.

"If by your votes I am elected Governor, the door of the executive chamber will be opened to every Republican in the State of New Jersey, and there will be no back door. Every man who is a Republican and supports the principles of the Republican party will stand on an equal footing with every other Republican, and every man, be he Democrat or Republican, will get the same hearing and receive the same consideration on any question of State policy.

"Let us go into the campaign in a broad, catholic spirit. United, let us stand together, and by thus doing achieve success, not only that the Republican party may win—no, that is too low a motive—but to see that some good may come through victory to the whole State."

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Miss Caro B. Gano Is Now "Sweet Sixteen."

Miss Cora B. Gano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Gano, of 170 Grove street, celebrated the sixteenth anniversary of her birthday last night by an informal gathering of friends. Covers were laid for ten. The home was attractively decorated. Golden rod and ferns were used in the parlor, and the color scheme in the dining room was red and white. A feature was a red and white birthday cake, which occupied a place in the centre of the table, surrounded by sixteen candles.

Miss Gano was generously remembered by her friends, receiving a large number of gifts, including a collection of post cards from far and near. Guests were present from Annandale, Raritan and this city.

Funeral of Mrs. Shotwell.

The funeral service of Mrs. Edmund V. Shotwell was held from the late home on East Fifth street, yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including many of the older residents who had known Mrs. Shotwell during her residence here. Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Shotwell was a charter member and active worker, conducted the service. There were many beautiful floral tributes. The bearers were A. L. Cadmus, William H. Shotwell, Theodore J. Pruden, Myron Heath, Louis Heath and Walter Heath. The burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

James E. Church, delegate to the national convention of the National Protective Legion, recently held at Buffalo, will give a report of the gathering at the meeting of Plainfield Legion in the Coward building tomorrow night. Among the interesting things he will describe will be the imitation of 1,000 persons in one class in the presence of about 5,000 members of the order.

GOLF.

The annual championship and the handicap of the East Jersey Golf League will be decided tomorrow and Saturday at the Canoe Brook Country Club. The championship is open to all members who have played three or more match games on teams, eight to qualify at eighteen holes medal play on Friday morning. In this there will be a prize for the low score, a runner up prize and a prize for the beaten four of the first round. There will also be a cup open to all and similar minor prizes, eight to qualify. The eighteen-hole handicap will be on Saturday afternoon, for a low gross and three net score prize, but no player may win more than one prize. The par of the Canoe Brook course is 74. The new rule is made that no one by virtue of his handicap may beat the par of the course, so that all net scores of 74 or better will be considered a tie and will be played off. On the tournament committee are A. W. Maine, Jr., T. W. Maley, Jr., and F. W. Baldwin.

Tomorrow, Friday and Saturday the Metropolitan District Advertising Men's Golf Club will hold a tournament at the Dunwoodie Country Club. There will be "eight dandy prizes," to quote the circular, for handicap foursomes and singles. Besides there will be lawn tennis on six courts for prizes, with music and a little entertainment on the side. The Dunwoodie Country Club extends all privileges to the players and visitors, so that a sociable time is expected. The entertainment committee for the advertisers will be E. E. Calkins, F. J. Ross and S. K. Evans, and the tournament committee W. C. Conklyn, W. C. Freeman, W. J. Ryan, J. C. Cook and W. H. Beers.

In the way of open golf there will be the third annual tournament of the Philadelphia Cricket Club on tomorrow, Friday and Saturday and Ira L. Williams and A. W. Tillinghast are trying to "get some of the fast ones from the outside over for the cup competitions." Four sixteens will qualify for the St. Martin's and three more cups, besides the usual minor prizes. Entries should be sent to the club by tomorrow.

Professionals will meet in a thirty-six-hole match race on Saturday at the Marine and Field Club, the first special contest at the course since the open tournament of 1899 in which W. J. Travis beat H. S. Bowns in the final. Aleck Smith and Dave Hunter will be opposed to Herbert Strong and George J. Bouse, the latter the promising young homebred who is the club's professional.

A competition for a cup has been arranged at the Baltusrol Golf Club for members who have a handicap of twenty or more and who have never won a prize at Baltusrol. The qualifying round will be on Saturday, sixteen to keep on at handicap match play. If there are thirty-two or more entries there will be a cup for a second sixteen.

The Montclair Golf Club will hold an invitation tournament on Friday and Saturday, October 11 and 12. The best thirty-two will qualify into four eighis on Friday morning. The eights will play at scratch Friday afternon. The semi-finals will be played on Saturday morning and finals on Saturday afternoon. All matches will be eighteen holes. An eighteen-hole handicap will be played on Saturday, open to all invited guests and Montclair members. Handicaps will be limited to ten strokes. Prizes will be given to the lowest score in qualifying round, to winners of each eight, to runnerup in first eight and the lowest gross and net scores in the handicap.

Tomorrow the third annual seniors tournament will be held at the Apawamis Club. It will be a thirty-six-hole medal play handicap over the full course, for two gross and two net score prizes, with additional prizes for the net score of the morning and afternoon. To be fifty-five years of age or over is the condition of entry.

Charles D. Thom, of the Lenox Golf Club, holds the best record for the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club course, a 66, which breaks all previous records. Six were the greatest number of strokes taken on any one hole, the ninth, and he had a number of 3's.

An open golf tournament for women will be held at the Essex County Country Club, October 15, 16, 17 and 18. Although the programme giving the details has not as yet been printed, it may be said that the contestants will qualify in eights, the preliminary round being at eighteen holes medal play. Only one round in the tournament proper will be run off each day, and this will give ample time for a number of side attractions such as driving, approaching and putting competitions and a mixed foursomes.

It is several years since the women have competed in an important tournament at the club near West Orange. Back in 1902 Mrs. E. A. Manice won the metropolitan title there and during that tournament Mrs. Charles T. Stout, then Miss Genevieve Hecker, made a remarkable round of 77. But since then the course has been lengthened considerably.

According to Jerome D. Travers,

Open 8.30 a. m., close 6 p. m.; Saturdays 10 p. m.

IMPORTERS · NEWARK'S STORE BEAUTIFUL BROAD, NEW AND HALSEY STREETS · RETAILERS

See the Magnificent Night-Time Window Exhibit at Hahne & Co.'s

Show Day, Thursday, Sept. 26

It sounds commonplace to say that Newark has never seen a greater show of millinery than the one we are making this week. It is a stereotyped claim, but we would like you to satisfy yourself of the truth of this statement by seeing the magnificent display of Imported and American Millinery which is being made in our show windows and in the Millinery Salon.

Perhaps credit is not due to us for the splendid display. It may be due to the remarkable effects produced in the hats this season—they are so big, so gorgeous.

It puzzles some people to know why so many of the hats are so immense in size. They wonder where the milliners got their inspiration for the creation of such showy headgear.

It is said that Lewis, the famed Parisian milliner, lacking in ideas, strolled into the galleries at Versailles and the Luxembourg and Louvre, and there studied the hats of those who were court and social queens in the days of long ago—then came the inspiration which has borne fruit in the big hats that are to be the vogue this season—that is why we see so much of the type of hat that was worn during the reign of Louis XVI., and we imagine that the automobile has had its influence on the hat fashions—hence the tendency of the brims to droop, making the wearing of veils easy.

Some of the rich hats shown are worthy a word today, especially those we have imported direct from Paris.

A hat of remarkable proportions and great beauty is one by Georgette, of purple satin faced with purple velvet, with large brim, high crown, a wreath of black cut ostrich completely encircling the crown, the top surmounted with a pompon of cut black ostrich and white marabout. At first glance you would not imagine the hat could easily be worn, but there are plenty of women on whom it will look graceful and becoming. The price is $95.

A Green French Felt Hat by Crozet has an immense green ostrich plume flowing from the right front to the back, where it falls gracefully over the brim; a rich gold buckle of great size ornaments the right side. The price is $40.

One hat has a Napoleonic turn to the brim and shows a solid black velvet surface in front on the turned-up underbrim. It has a high crown covered with white moire silk. The hat is bedecked with three beautiful standing plumes of ostrich in gray and black, and there is a large cut jet buckle ornamenting the back. It is an imported creation by Aylwin. From every point of view it is a beauty, and it will cost yo u $40.

Very rich, indeed, is this hat by Georgette—of myrtle green taffeta silk, surrounded with a double chou of seduidant velvet, and surmounted with a large bird of paradise, making a wonderful show. This hat is marked $75.

One of the richest hats in our most notable collection is one by Cargiere made of elegant apricot velvet lined with wine colored satin. It has twelve graceful ostrich tips, running from cream to apricot, standing around the brim. Expensive? Yes, but beautiful, indeed! $85.

Marix & Cie send us a hat of green satin beaver with high crown, surrounded with a novel, fluffy ruching of black maline edged with green maline, with large bird with red breast and immense, graceful plumage of green shading to purple—a very remarkable conception, indeed; decidedly original and very beautiful. Price $45.

The exhibit of Costumes, Tailored Gowns, Evening Wraps and Waists is eliciting most extravagant praise. Some surprise is expressed at the ability of any Newark store to sell such elegant apparel, but those who are surprised are those who have not yet awakened to the fact that a Greater Newark has been born and that it has a store that measures up to the highest metropolitan standards.

La Vida Corsets

THIS MAKE AND OTHERS IN NEW FALL AND WINTER MODELS.

The wise woman will make sure of the right model in the corset before she undertakes the consideration of a gown, for the corset is the real foundation of the dress. Upon it depends the perfection of contour and fit. Here an expert will fit any corset we sell, high or low price, so that you are assured of getting just the model best adapted to your figure.

the national champion, the decision of the joint committee to substitute the old-fashioned two-ball foursomes for the four-ball affairs at the tricity matches to be held at the Country Club of Brookline on October 25 and 26 may cause some awkward complications. This is due to the various makes of balls now on the market.

It is a fact that the rubber core no longer has a monoply, and to become convinced of this it is only necessary to visit any open or invitation tournament where a hundred-odd amateurs are competing. Different kinds of cores are now turned out, and there is one ball which is used quite extensively that has no core at all. The latter acts differently on the green from any of the others. When a golfer becomes accustomed to one certain ball he is loath to change, and the contention of Travers is that unless the pairs are made up of players using the same ball there is likely to be trouble. This is, of course, a new situation, a product of the times, and something that would have been practically impossible in the old days of the solid gutty.

The outlook is bright for a strong golf team at Princeton this fall. Four members of last year's team are in college. Besides Captain R. Peters, Jr., '08, there are W. T. West, '08, who did excellent work this summer in the amateur championships; H. J. Van Dyke, 3d, '08, and D. Roberts, '09. A number of other good men who have had experience are also eligible. Among these are W. S. Heyniger, '09, and C. W. Hunt, '09. The members of last year's freshman class, who are now eligible to play on the university team, include F. H. McAdoo, who was runner-up in the invitation tournament last spring; T. Atkinson, C. G. Ballin and A. G. Van Dyke. There will be the usual fall tournament for the college championship, beginning the latter part of this week, and one for freshmen later on in the fall.

A special meeting of the Eastern Profesional Golfers' Association will be held on Monday morning at the Astor House to make final arrangements for the championship at the Country Club, Brookline, October 29 and 30.

FOOTBALL.

There is as much trouble in getting the name of Brides, of Yale, spelled right as there was with Lynah, of Cornell, a few seasons back.

Seven veterans of last year's eleven are gone from the University of Minnesota equad, three of whom were stars.

Lieutenant Hackett, prominent as a halfback at West Point and later as a gridiron referee, has gone into business in Pittsburg.

Macklin and Regan are expected to do the punting for Pennsylvania this season and to make the Quakers stronger in that department than last year.

They are having their troubles at Swarthmore. Captain Krueger is laid up with typhoid fever, and Coble, the giant pivot man, is on the hospital list with an injured ankle. Coble is one of the best centres in the football arena.

Soldiers' Field has the best device in the country for enabling spectators to keep track of plays and players, it being the number system gotten up by Melville Webb, and one that would be appreciated on other fields.

The football managers at Yale and Princeton—Foster and Wheeler, respectively—are both Hill school products.

Carl Flanders, whose coaching was a big help to the Indians last season, has joined the gridiron faculty at New Haven.

A drying apparatus has been introduced in the Yale gymnasium which will dry wet football togs quickly. This sort of weather requires two driers.

Bert Waters, Edgar Wrightington, Carl Marshall and Jack Hallowell, former football stars at Harvard, are tennis enthusiasts and were out on the courts together at Longwood the other day.

Stein, one of the Syracuse University backs, has done some accurate passing of from thirty to forty yards in practise. If he gets away with a forward pass or two of that length in the Yale game the Elis will be hoist with their own petard.

THE STATE COMMITTEE.

In reappointing United States Senator John Kean as a member-at-large of the Republican State committee, Gubernatorial Nominee Fort has done a praiseworthy act. To no single man in the State do the Republicans owe so much for their success in Union county as to that eminent citizen of Elizabeth. This can not be said of his fellow-townsman, Congressman Charles N. Fowler, whose term as a committeeman-at-large will soon expire. The representative of the Fifth district had no claims worthy of the slightest recognition. The general regard in which he is held in his own county was amply demonstrated when he last ran for re-election as an absentee member of the Federal House. The marble man, whose name recalls to mind that beautiful free public library in Elizabeth, lost his own county, a Republican stronghold, and came within a few hundred votes of being defeated in what is under normal conditions a solid Republican district. There are plenty of better men who might be named in his place, and among the number is Charles J. Fisk, who is the avowed candidate of the regular leaders for the position.

The proposition to erect a Jr. O. U. A. M. home is a splendid one. The order is the strongest fraternity in Plainfield, and is a factor for good in the community. A structure of its own would not only be a desirable building improvement, but would be a monument to that prosperous and excellent organization.

The Elizabeth Times speaks of "Jim" Martine, the victim of a party's ingratitude, as a warrior of a dozen campaigns. The farmer-orator had taken part in nearly three times that number before the editor of the Times was born.

It is to be expected that the Democrats "in convention assembled" at Elizabeth tonight will "view with alarm" and "arraign with indignation."

Candidate Katzenbach should have an intimate knowledge of corporations. In the hour of need, he appeared to have no better friends.

Bryan wants to be President, but then he is no different than the rest of us. Don't we all want something we know we can't get?

An accident in the press room was responsible for a two hours' delay in the delivery of yesterday's issue of The Daily Press.

William R. Hearst says he doesn't want to be President. What a terrible blow to the nation!

Who instructed Frank Katzenbach to ignore the liquor problem in his speech of acceptance?

Yes, Constant Reader, it's Frank Silence Katzenbach.

POLITICAL NOTES

The selection of ex-Governor Murphy is taken as forecasting a desire on his part to become a candidate for the United States Senate upon the expiration of Senator Kean's term in 1910. It is no secret that Governor Murphy has been ambitious to represent the State in the United States Senate.

It is expected that the State committee will meet at the Democratic headquarters in the Fuller building, Jersey City, Friday, for the purpose of arranging dates for Mr. Katzenbach's appearance in the various counties. Mr. Katzenbach will not wait for such action before beginning his campaign, however, as he has decided to start active campaigning today, when he will attend the Gloucester county convention at Woodbury, the county seat. Tonight Mr. Katzenbach will be the guest of the Democrats of Union county at a meeting in Elizabeth. It is likely that he will deliver addresses at both places.

Tomorrow Frank S. Katzenbach, the Democratic nominee for Governor, will attend the State fair at Mt. Holly. J. Franklin Fort, the Republican nominee, will also be present at the fair. It will be the first time since their nomination that the two candidates will have appeared together in public.

The fact that two of the candidates mentioned in connection with the Democratic nominations for the Assembly have withdrawn from the race, has not dampened the ardor of the members of the party in the county and they are more zealous possibly than ever. The county convention will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in Turn Hall, Elizabeth. There will be plenty of good music and an abundance of enthusiasm. James E. Martine will address the convention in the absence of Frank S. Katzenbach, the gubernatorial nominee. There are plenty of candidates for every office, and no trouble is anticipated in nominating a strong ticket.

Mr. Katzenbach cannot possibly be made stronger by any attempt to show that Mr. Martine was weak. Mr. Martine has shown his strength in Union, Morris and Warren counties. Mr. Katzenbach has yet to demonstrate his strength outside of the city of Trenton and we believe if his fool friends will not muss things up for him he will do it.—Hunterdon County Democrat (Democratic).

Robert Abbott, of Yale, is spending a few days in town with his parents previous to returning to college.

Miss Sarah Smith, of Cranford, who has been spending several days in town with relatives, has returned home.

Alfred W. Dunavan and E. A. Laing, who are making a tour of the Thousand Islands, Montreal, Quebec and other points of interest, are expected to arrive home today.

Mrs. Sarah M. Tomlinson, of Chicago, has leased the extensive property at Madison avenue and Sixth street from F. H. Smith and will conduct a high class boarding house.

The Woodhull & Martin Store.

are arriving daily. Each department is taking on its fall dress. A big store like this is a sort of Panorama—a constantly changing scene, something coming and going all the time. Not one item in a hundred sees itself in print. The only way to keep in touch with the many new things is to come and see us often. We want you to feel free to come in and look around. Whether you have anything to buy or not, make yourself at home. You are entirely welcome at all times.

Advance Showing of New Fall Costumes.

The prevailing styles are semi-fit and three-quarter length Coats in three-quarter and full length sleeves, in cheviot and broadcloth, stripes, checks and plain colors, at prices ranging from $15 to $65.

New Fall Millinery.

Exquisite styles, a grand exhibition of the budding flowers of Fall fashion gathered from the fascinating style gardens of London and Paris, and when you are looking for a new hat you cannot afford to pass by the collection here presented.

A Showing of American Rugs

It's increasingly the fashion nowadays to use Rugs as floor coverings—either on a polished surface or on a plain carpet foundation.

The popularity of Rugs has incited our domestic makers to great deeds. They have drawn their inspiration from the beautiful Rugs of the Orient, and so close are the copies that it is often difficult to distinguish one from the other.

In our superb stock of Domestic Rugs we show all the very latest designs and color effects that you'll find in the Oriental Rugs, as well as the most artistic patterns of all the leading American makers, and in all sizes, from a doormat 18x36 inches to a carpet rug 9x12 feet.

A BIG SALE OF COUCHES.

We've too many Couches on the floor, the space they occupy is needed for New Fall Goods that are clamoring for room. In order to move them quickly we have made deep cuts in the prices, for instance:

6.50 Couches for 4.98
10.50 Couches for 7.98
15.00 Couches for 10.98
8.50 Couches for 6.50
12.50 Couches for 9.25
16.50 Couches for 12.50

Select Your Piano Now Before the Sale Closes.

Hallet & Davis Piano Store's Closing-Out Sale of Good Pianos at About Half Retail Prices.

Is Drawing to a Prompt Closing.

If you need a piano at all, or if you expect to buy the little ones an instrument in two years, it will pay you to attend this sale.

OPEN EVENINGS, No. 170 E. Front St. Four Days More.

A look in our store most any hour of the day will fully convince you of the great importance of this sale.

You will note the number of people buying and the bargains to be had, for each instrument is marked in plain figures showing the reduction from the lowest retail prices to the now "closing out sale price," each and every price tag plainly shows an actual saving of $100 to $165 on upright pianos. This is not fiction or fancy, but facts, cold, bare facts.

I must, and I am, and quickly, too, closing out this great stock, rather than ship away.

You buy now and here, as the dealer buys. You buy at factory prices, and on very easy, very convenient terms.

Will you be one of the lucky ones to secure one of these great bargains?

There is no getting away from the fact that any person is lucky who secures one of these finest of makes at these almost cut-in-half-prices.

Here are the very best pianos the market affords, such as the Hallet & Davis, Kimball, Conway, Bowen, Wellman, and numerous others.

If you want a piano at all, I am sure you will find a make and style of piano to suit you in this list.

Now, if money saving is an object you should make haste and make your selection, for the sale prices are away below the lowest regular prices; more than that, the pianos are being taken quickly, and it looks as if they will all go before the closing date of this great sale.

Only a few days more of this great sale remain.

SALE MAKES PIANO BUYING EASY.

This great sale makes piano buying easy and pleasant. You will be dealing with the big, lenient company, where they are not only willing but able to extend to you the easiest kind of terms and all the courtesies that you could wish.

SQUARE PIANOS AND ORGANS.

We have one or two square pianos and organs that will be sold at almost your own price and terms. See them.

UPRIGHT CABINET GRAND PIANOS.

New Upright Pianos, worth $250 to $300, to close at $123 to $187. Terms cash or payments $5 to $8 monthly.

One used upright piano, worth $125 to $150, to close at $90. Terms to suit.

New $325, $350 and $375 pianos, standard makes, closing out sale prices $190, $210 to $247.

Upright pianos of the highest class makes, worth $400, $450 to $500, will be sold at prices from $287, $342 to $387 for the most elaborate cased ones.

Terms $15 to $25 cash, $7 to $12 monthly.

COME IN THE EVENING.

Come out in the evening. Bring you wife and the children. Will keep our store open every evening until 9 o'clock for the special benefit of the work-a-day people.

COME AT ONCE.

If you need an instrument at all come and see me right away, come before the best bargains are taken.

Remember but three days more; Sale Closes positively Saturday night at 10 o'clock.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Around the Clock" comes to the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and night with the clever comedian, Billy Ritchie, at the head of a very capable company of comedians, singers and dancers.

Carson Bradford, the young Southern actor, who is supporting Edward Saxon An the revival of Sol Smith Russell's greatest success, "Peaceful Valley," is a member of one of the wealthiest and most prominent families in Tennessee. He is an enthusiastic motorist and carries his White Steamer with him throughout the country. It has a special place in the baggage car which is used in carrying the production.

Mr. Bradford has driven motor cars through thirty-seven States and has made the trip from coast to coast six times, which is something of a record. Wherever possible—that is to say, wherever the roads are in passable condition and where the jump is not too long—he rides from town to town in his car during the tour.

He holds several speed records, the most notable being that between Dayton, O., and South Bend, Ind. He covered the distance, 300 miles, in eight and a half hours. This was considered a wonderful performance at the time that it was made—something over a year ago—and his name is widely known throughout the automomible world as a consequence. Mr. Bradford is an actor of exceptional talent, with a marked personality and an infectious flow of good spirits.

"Peaceful Valley" is to be the offering at the theatre on Friday night. It is being presented on a lavish seale, and the revival is proving to be a most successful one, not only from a financial standpoint but from an artistic one as well.

Tomorrow night at the New Plainfield theatre D. W. Robertson will give another of his moving picture entertainments, introducing all the latest subjects in life motion pictures, scenes of travel, pictures mysterious, novel and interesting. Among the most sensational of all the moving pictures will be "Ski Jumping in Norway," "The Bethrothed Nightmare," "The Yawner," "A Trip to Niagara Falls," "The Old Mashers" and other attractions. New illustrated songs and special program of entertainment will be given in addition to the moving pictures.

JAMESTOWN'S JERSEY DAY

Governor and Other Officials Will Be at Exposition on Oct. 17.

STATE'S FINE BUILDING

James T. MacMurray One of the Commissioners and Miss Little An Attache—The Exhibits.

The New Jersey State day exercises at the Jamestown exposition will be held Thursday, October 17. Governor Stokes and his staff, together with the State officers and invited guests, will leave on a special train for the exposition Tuesday, October 15. City Clerk James T. MacMurray, one of the New Jersey commissioners, will be among the party. Wednesday will be given up to general sightseeing at the exposition and on Thursday morning the formal exercises will be held at the reviewing stand and a review of the troops on the grounds will be tendered the governor. A card reception will be given for the governor during the afternoon and the party will return to their homes that evening. The program is also expected to include a banquet at the Chamberlain Hotel at Old Point. Miss Edith Little, of this city, is one of the principal attaches at the New Jersey building.

New Jersey's Building.

Colonel Lewis T. Bryant, secretary of the New Jersey Jamestown commission, is enthusiastic over the figure New Jersey cuts at the exposition. He has just had printed some photographs of the New Jersey building there, which is the finest structure the State has ever erected at an exposition.

Colonel Bryant says that "this building is built somewhat along the lines of the structure which was used at both the Columbian exposition, at Chicago, and the Louisiana Purchase exposition, at St. Louis. It now stands at Sea Girt, where it is used as the governor's headquarters at the State camp there, having been transferred from the St. Louis exposition. The location of the building is considered very attractive, as it has an unusually large plot of ground, which has been sown with grass and contains a number of beautiful flowers, it being generally considered that the grounds of the New Jersey building are superior to any others at the exposition. The building fronts on a park, and looking across the park we have a beautiful view of Hampton Roads, and the Chamberlain Hotel in the distance."

The State's Exhibits.

"In addition to the building, the State has made exhibits in the States' Exhibit palace, where you will find a display from the State museum, consisting of specimens of our game and other birds, the animals which inhabit the State and also good specimens of fishes which inhabit our waters.

"The mosquito exhibit, which was prepared by Professor John B. Smith, the State entomologist, is also exhibited in this building, and, as usual, is attracting a vast amount of attention. It gives numerous specimens of the various breeds of mosquito which are propagated in the State, showing them from the larvae period to the mature mosquito. Then, by means of transparencies and also the actual ingredients and methods used in the extermination, the system of exterminating the pest as practiced by Professor Smith is very aptly demonstrated. It is one of the most complete and scientific exhibits of its kind ever prepared in this country.

"Across the aisle from this exhibit is a comparative school exhibit, which in itself is unique in this line. Professor S. R. Morse has preserved specimens of various exhibits made by this State during past expositions, and they are displayed for comparison as between those expositions and new work which has been prepared for the Jamestown exposition. Work is there found from the Centennial exposition, which was held in Philadelphia in 1876, and from all the various expositions which have been held from that date to the present time.

"A small section is assigned to the summer and winter resorts of the State, in which the State simply supplied space and cabinets, and the resorts which cared to participate furnished the photographs and literature for distribution. Among the resorts represented are Atlantic City, Asbury Park, Long Branch, Wildwood, Belmar and Lakewood.

"In the Social Economy building New Jersey has a very comprehensive exhibit of the institutions maintained by the State and also the departments of health, banking and insurance, good roads, bureau of vital statistics and the Industrial Art school at Trenton.

Mr. Lee's Historical Exhibit.

"In the fireproof History building New Jersey has prepared, under the direction of Francis B. Lee, a historical exhibit of considerable note. He has not simply gone into old manuscripts, but demonstrates by the use of maps the progress of the State from the days of its early settlement up to the present time, showing the early location of cities, Indian tribes, religious influences throughout the State, the progress in the War of the Revolution, giving the points and outlines of General Washington's movements within its borders and the number of engagements held therein.

"In addition to these maps there are two cabinets containing hundreds of souvenir postal cards from points throughout the State, giving views of historic interest. A large case of guns is displayed in the centre of the exhibit, which shows the development of this firearm through succeeding generations up to the present time, and this particular portion of the exhibit has been very highly commented upon by a number of military authorities. There is also a large number of very valuable manuscripts and photographs, displayed in cabinets. This exhibit is unique and most interesting.

"A very fine display of the mineral and clay resources of the State has been prepared by Dr. Henry B. Kummel, the State geologist, which shows specimens of ores of various character, also of the sands and clay throughout the State.

"All of the exhibits at the exposition have been collected and prepared with the thought of, so far as possible, turning the material back to the State museum, so that it will become the property of the State and be placed on public view at the State House."

AFTER ("SISSY") RELIGION.

Bishop Doesn't Blame Men for Staying Away.

"A 'sissy' religion delivered by a 'sissy' preacher is driving men from the church," said Bishop Warren Candler, of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, in an address to the Methodist preachers at Atlanta, Ga.

"No wonder the men won't go to church," continued the bishop, "when they are forced to listen to a lot of 'sissy' talk. There is too much of this effeminate religion.

"I have often thought, what does the average man think of this effeminate religion and dainty lullabyes. I don't mind telling you what I often do when I go to a church like that. I get in some comfortable place and go to sleep. When a man trifles with religion it's a good thing to do. But you mustn't snore.

"There must be virility in religion if the men are to be held."

Chief T. O. Doane is able to be out again after being detained at home a few weeks with an attack of erysipelas.

Dr. and Mrs. M. O'M. Knott, of Putnam avenue, will soon leave Plainfield and make their home at Millbrook, Conn., a fashionable summer resort.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Weekes and daughter, of Oswego, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Henry Van Name, of Madison avenue, have returned home.

Miss Beekman, of West Front street, who has been in the Adirondacks for several months for the benefit of her health, has returned greatly improved.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Trail of Silent Murphy.

The young infantryman who had been detailed for the important service of telegraph operator sat in the Cheyenne office, his feet on the rude table, his face buried behind a newspaper.

"Could you inform me where I might find Silent Murphy, a government scout?"

The voice had the unmistakable ring of military authority, and the soldier operator instinctively dropped his feet to the floor.

"Well, my lad, you are not dumb, are you?"

The telegrapher's momentary hesitation vanished; his ambition to become a martyr to the strict laws of service secrecy was not sufficiently strong to cause him to take the doubtful chances of a lie. "He was here, but has gone."

"Where?"

"The devil knows. He rode north, carrying dispatches for Custer."

"When?"

"Oh, three or four hours ago."

Hampton swore softly but fervently, behind his clinched teeth.

"Where is Custer?"

"Don't know exactly. Supposed to be with Terry and Gibbons, somewhere near the mouth of the Powder, although he may have left there by this time, moving down the Yellowstone. Murphy's orders were to intercept his column somewhere between the Rosebud and the Big Horn. No other scout along this border would take such a detail. But that old devil of a Murphy just enjoys such a trip. He started off as happy as ever I see him."

"How far will he have to ride?"

"Oh, 'bout 300 miles as the crow flies, a little west of north, and the better part of the distance, they tell me, it's almighty rough country for night work. But then Murphy, he knows the way all right. Sorry you didn't come along a little earlier," he said, genially. "Do you know Murphy?"

"I'm not quite certain. Did you happen to notice a peculiar black scar on the back of his right hand?"

"Sure; looks like the half of a pear. He said it was powder under the skin."

A new look of reviving determination swept into Hampton's gloomy eyes—beyond doubt this must be his man.

"How many horses did he have??"

"Two."

"Did you overhear him say anything definite about his plans for the trip?"

"What, him? He never talks, that fellow. He can't do nothing but sputter if he tries. But I wrote out his orders, and they give him to the 25th to make the Big Horn. You wasn't planning to strike out after him, was you?"

"I might risk it if I only thought I could overtake him within two days; my business is of some importance."

"Well, stranger, I should reckon you might do that with a dog-gone good outfit. Murphy's sure to take things pretty easy to-day, and he's almost certain to follow the old mining trail as far as the fork over the Belle Fourche, and that's plain enough to travel. Beyond that point the devil only knows where he will go, for then is when his hard ridin' begins."

The moment the operator mentioned that odd scar on Murphy's hand, every vestige of hesitation varnished. Beyond any possibility of doubt he was on the right scent this time. Murphy was riding north upon a mission as desperate as ever man was called upon to perform. The chance of his coming forth alive from that Indian-haunted land was, as the operator truthfully said, barely one out of a hundred. To the end, to the death if need were, he would follow!

The memory of his old plain craft would not permit any neglect of the few necessaries for the trip. He bought without haggling over prices, but insisted on the best. So it was four in the afternoon when he finally struck into the trail leading northward. He rode a mettlesome, half-broken bronco, a wicked-eyed brute, which required to be conquered twice within the first hour of travel; a second and more quiet animal trailed behind at the end of a lariat, bearing the necessary equipment.

He had, by persistent questioning, acquired considerable information, during that busy hour spent in Cheyenne, regarding the untracked regions lying before him, as well as the character and disposition of the man he pursued. Both by instinct and training he was able to comprehend those brief hints that must prove of vast benefit in the pathless wilderness.

The night was already dark, but stars were gleaming brilliantly overhead, and the trail remained easily traceable. It became terribly lonely on that wilderness stretching away for unknown leagues in every direction, yet Hampton scarcely noted this, so watchful was he lest he miss the trail. To his judgment, Murphy would not be likely to ride during the night until after he had crossed the Fourche. There was no reason to suspect that there were any hostile Indians south of that stream, and probably therefore the old scout would endeavor to conserve his own strength and that of his horses, for the more perilous travel beyond.

About midnight, the trail becoming obscure, the rider made camp, confident he must have already gained heavily on the man he pursued. He lariated his horses and flinging himself down on some soft turf, almost immediately dropped asleep. He was up again before daylight, and, after a hasty meal, pressed on. The nature of the country had changed considerably, becoming more broken, the view circumscribed by towering cliffs and deep ravines.

Late in the afternoon he reined up his horse and gazed forward into a broad valley, bounded with precipitous bluffs. The trail led directly down toward where a considerable stream of water shone silvery in the sun, half concealed behind a fringe of willows. And yonder, close in against those distant willows, some black dots were moving. Hampton glued his anxious eyes to the glass. The leveled tubes clearly revealed a man on horseback, leading another horse. The animals were walking. There could be little doubt that this was Silent Murphy.

Hampton lariated his tired horses behind the bluff and returned to the summit, lying flat upon the ground, with the field-glass at his eyes. The distant figures passed slowly forward into the midst of the willows, and for half an hour the patient watcher scanned the surface of the stream beyond, but there was no sign of attempted passage. The sun sank lower and finally disappeared behind those desolate ridges to the westward. Hampton's knowledge of plainscraft rendered Murphy's actions sufficiently clear. This was the Fourche; beyond those waters lay the terrible peril of Indian raiders. Further advance must be made by swift, secret night riding, and never-ceasing vigilance. This was what Murphy had been saving himself and his horses for. Beyond conjecture, he was resting now within the shadows of those willows, studying the opposite shore and making ready for the dash northward. Hampton believed he would linger thus for some time after dark, to see if Indian fires would afford any guidance. Confident of this, he passed back to his horses, rubbed them down with grass, and then ate his lonely supper, not venturing to light a fire, certain that Murphy's eyes were scanning every inch of skyline.

Darkness came rapidly, while Hampton sat planning again the details of his night's work. Then, with the two animals trailing cautiously behind, he felt his slow way on foot down the steep bluff, into the denser blackness of the valley.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Haunting of a Crime.

Murphy rested on his back in the midst of a thicket of willows, wide awake, yet not quite ready to ford the Fourche and plunge into the dense shadows shrouding the northern shore. Crouched behind a log, he had so far yielded unto temptation as to light his pipe.

Murphy had been amid just such unpleasant environments many times before, and the experience had grown somewhat prosaic. Even Indian-scouting degenerates into a commonplace at last. So Murphy puffed contentedly at his old pipe.

But suddenly there was the faint crackle of a branch to his left, and one hand instantly closed over his pipe bowl, the other grasping the heavy revolver at his hip. There came a plain, undisguised rustling in the grass,—some prowling coyote, probably; then his tense muscles immediately relaxed, and he cursed himself for being so startled, yet he continued to grasp the "45" in his right hand, his eyes alert.

"Murphy!"

That single word, hurled thus unexpectedly out of the black night, startled him more than would a volley of rifles. He sprang half erect, then as swiftly crouched behind a willow, utterly unable to articulate. For the instant his very blood ran cold; he appeared to shrivel up.

"Hampton Glued His Anxious Eyes to the Glass."

"Oh, come, Murphy; speak up, man; I know you're in here."

That terror of the unknown instantly vanished. This was the familiar language of the world, and, however the fellow came to be there, it was assuredly a man who spoke.

"Who—the hell—are ye?" he blurted out.

The visitor laughed, the bushes rustling as he pushed toward the sound of the voice. "It's all right, old boy. Gave ye quite a scare, I reckon."

Murphy could now dimly perceive the other advancing through the intervening willows, and his Colt shot up to the level. "Stop!—ye take another—step an' I'll—let drive. Ye tell me—first—who ye be."

The invader paused, but he realized the nervous finger pressing the trigger and made haste to answer. "It's all right, I tell ye. I'm one o' Terry's scouts."

"Ye are? Jist the same—I've heard—yer voice—afore."

"Likely 'nough. I saw service in the Seventh."

Murphy was still a trifle suspicious. "How'd ye git yere? How'd ye come ter know—whar I wus?"

The man laughed again. "Sorter hurts yer perfessional feelins, don't it, old feller, to be dropped in on in this unceremonious way? But it was dead easy, old man. Ye see I happened thro' Cheyenne only a couple o' hours behind ye, with a bunch o' papers fer the Yellowstone. The trail's plain enough out this far, and I loped 'long at a pretty fair hickory, so thet I was up on the bluff yonder, and saw ye go into camp yere just afore dark. You wus a-keepin' yer eyes skinned across the Fourche, and naturally didn't expect no callers from them hills behind. The rest wus nuthin', an' here I am. It's a darn sight pleasanter ter hev company travelin', ter my notion. Now kin I cum on?"

Murphy reluctantly lowered his Colt, every movement betraying annoyance. "I reckon. But I'd—a damn sight—rather risk it—alone."

The stranger came forward without further hesitation. The night was far too dark to reveal features, but to Murphy's strained vision the newcomer appeared somewhat slender in build, and of good height.

"Whar'd—ye say ye—wus bound?"

"Mouth o' the Powder. We kin ride tergether fer a night or two."

"Ye kin—do as ye—please, but—I ain't a huntin'—no company,—an' I'm a'—goin' 'cross now."

He advanced a few strides toward his horses. Then suddenly he gave vent to a smothered cry, so startling as to cause the stranger to spring hastily after him.

"Oh! My God! Oh! Look there!"

"What is it, man?"

"There! there! The picture! Don't you see?"

"Naw; I don't see nuthin'. Ye ain't gone cracked, hev ye? Whose picture?"

"It's there!—O Lord!—it's there! My God! can't ye see?—An' it's his face—all a-gleamin' with green flames—Holy Mary—an' I ain't seen it—afore in—15 year!"

He seemed suddenly to collapse, and the stranger permitted him to drop limp to the earth.

"Darn if I kin see anythin', old man, but I'll scout 'round thar a bit, jest ter ease yer mind, an' see what I kin skeer up."

He had hardly taken a half dozen steps before Murphy called after him: "Don't—don't go an' leave me—it's not there now—thet's queer!"

The other returned and stood gazing down upon his huddled figure. "You're a fine scout! afeard o' spooks. Do ye take these yere turns often? Fer if ye do, I reckon as how I'd sooner be ridin' alone."

Murphy struggled to his feet and gripped the other's arm. "Never hed nuthin' like it—afore. But—but it was thar—all creepy—an' green—ain't seen thet face—in 15 year."

"What face?"

"A—a fellow I knew—once. He—he's dead."

The other grunted disdainfully. "Bad luck ter see them sort," he volunteered, solemnly. "Blame glad it warn't me es see it, an' I don't know as I keer much right now 'bout keepin' company with ye fer very long. However, I reckon if either of us calculates on doin' much ridin' ternight, we better stop foolin' with ghosts, an' go ter saddlin' up."

They made rapid work of it, the newcomer proving somewhat loquacious, yet holding his voice to a judicious whisper. It was he who led the way down the bank, the four horses slowly splashing through the shallow water to the northern shore. Before them stretched a broad plain, the surface rocky and uneven, the northern stars obscured by ridges of higher land. Murphy promptly gave his horse the spur, never once glancing behind, while the other imitated his example, holding his animal well in check, being apparently the better mounted.

They rode silently. The way became more broken and rough as they advanced, causing them to exercise greater caution. Flying clouds obscured the stars, yet through the rifts they caught fleeting glimpses sufficient to hold them to their course. And the encroaching hills swept in closer upon either hand, leaving them groping their way between as in a pocket, yet ever advancing north.

Finally they attained to the steep bank of a considerable stream, found the water of sufficient depth to compel swimming, and crept up the opposite shore dripping and miserable, yet with ammunition dry. Murphy stood swearing disjointedly, wiping the blood from a wound in his forehead where the jagged edge of a rock had broken the skin, but suddenly stopped with a quick intake of breath that left him panting. The other man crept toward him, leading his horse.

"What is it now?" he asked, gruffly. "Hev' ye got 'em agin?"

The dazed old scout stared, pointing directly across the other's shoulder, his arm shaking desperately.

"It's thar!—an' it's his face! Oh, God!—I know it—15 year."

The man glanced backward into the pitch darkness, but without moving his body.

"There's nuthin' out there, 'less it's a firefly," he insisted, in a tone of contempt. "You're plum crazy, Murphy; the night's got on yer nerves. What is it ye think ye see?"

"His face, I tell ye! Don't I know? It's all green and ghastly, with snaky flames playin' about it! But I know; 15 years, an' I ain't fergot."

He sank down feebly—sank until he was on his knees, his head craned forward. The man watching touched the miserable, hunched-up figure compassionately, and it shook beneath his hand, endeavoring to shrink away.

"My God! was thet you? I thought it was him a-reachin' fer me. Here, let me take yer hand. Oh, Lord! An' can't ye see? It's just there beyond them horses—all green, crawlin', devilish—but it's him."

"Who?"

"Brant! Brant—15 year!"

"Brant? Fifteen years? Do you mean Maj. Brant, the one Nolan killed over at Bethune?"

"He—he didn't—"

The old man heaved forward, his head rocking from side to side; then suddenly he toppled over on his face, gasping for breath. His companion caught him and ripped open the heavy flannel shirt. Then he strode savagely across in front of his shrinking horse, tore down the flaring picture, and hastily thrust it into his pocket, the light of the phosphorous with which it had been rubbed being reflected for a moment on his features.

"A dirty, miserable, low-down trick," he muttered. "Poor old devil! Yet I've got to do it for the little girl."

He stumbled back through the darkness, his hat filled with water, and dashed it into Murphy's face. "Come on, Murphy! There's one good thing 'bout spooks; they don't hang 'round fer long at a time. Likely es not this 'un is gone by now. Brace up, man, for you an' I have got ter get out o' here afore mornin'."

Then Murphy grasped his arm and drew himself slowly to his feet.

"Don't see nuthin' now, do ye?"

"No. Where's my—horse?"

The other silently reached him the loose rein, marking as he did so the quick, nervous peering this way and that, the starting at the slightest sound.

"Did ye say, Murphy, as how it wasn't Nolan after all who plugged the major?"

"I'm damned—if I did. Who—else was it?"

"Why, I dunno. Sorter blamed odd though, thet ghost should be a-hauntin' ye. Darn if it ain't creepy 'nough ter make a feller believe most anythin'."

Murphy drew himself up heavily into his saddle. Then all at once he shoved the muzzle of a "45" into the other's face. "Ye say nuther word—'bout thet, an' I'll make—a ghost outer ye—blame lively. Now, ye shet up—if ye ride with me."

Do You Realize
that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.
Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.
Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?
We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.
In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.
Why not decide to get a new piano now?

LOOK HERE FOR IT.

Many a Plainfield Reader Will Be Interested.

When people read about the cures made by a medicine endorsed from far away, is it surprising that they wonder if the statements are true? But when they read of cases right here at home, positive proof is within their reach, for close investigation is an easy matter.

Mrs. Julia Molloy, of 740 West Front street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Many so-called cures for backache and kidney disease have been taken by me, but no medicine ever stopped my aches and pains until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's Pharmacy. I took the pills according to directions, and found before finishing the first box that they were far more healing and brought even more relief from backache than their owners claim for them. I continued with the treatment and was cured, and now do not suffer from aches or pains or kidney troubles."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

TO THE PUBLIC.
On and after September first, I will reduce the price of all shines from 10 cents to 5 cents. I have also stationery, confectionery, cigars, tobacco and a large assortment of souvenir post-cards for sale.

THIS SPLENDID FALL MILLINERY SHOW.

Did you come to our millinery opening last week? Is so we can feel sure your friends will also come to see these beautiful hats—for there was nothing but praise heard on all sides—and no wonder, the praise was well merited. Miss Strohuber worked with unbounded energy—working by day—dreaming at nights of nothing but hats, and Miss Strohuber has talent recognized by leading milliners in New York. Such energy by so high class a milliner in not only bringing out the newest, but at a moderate price, was bound to result in winning your approval. We believe those who visited this millinery shop will advertise Tepper hats this fall. New hats are being turned out every day, and you will enjoy to visit here though many of the first lot are gone, there are others in work just as pretty to take their place.

"CENTRAL PARK"

Was—Is—Will Be

IT WAS, only about a year ago, just a pretty farm.

IT IS to day the finest building site in Plainfield, with broad avenues macadamized their entire width, concrete curb, sidewalks, trees, gas, electric light, in fact all improvements. Nearly $100,000 expended in new and handsome dwellings, now ready for the market.

WHAT IT WILL BE we hardly dare predict, with contracts out for even more extensive improvements and twelve more handsome residences.

Central Park is that beautifully situated tract bounded by Park, Prospect, Hillside and Thornton Avenues.

Lots selling rapidly—Prices very low—Great investment or speculative opportunities.

WHITE RIBBONERS MEET

and mothers might wish, so her influence is lost in these cases upon the desert air. May God hasten the time when women will be classed with sane people and her rights restored to her. Until then may the men arise in their God given right and powers and demand a righteous government.

"Hold more public meetings. It keeps our work before the people. Observe the Red Letter Days, and see how they will inspire renewed hope and courage. Hold social meetings. Invite to them those you especially want to win. Do not be discouraged if the people do not come. Invite them again. Hold membership contests. I wish that each union would strive to have an increase of twenty-five members next year. See if your teachers are teaching the right books in your schools relating to temperance. Hold teachers' receptions that we may come in closer touch with them. Let us work against cigarettes. Have a series of medal contests. There is nothing better for a sentiment maker. Hold mothers' meetings, and invite the mothers not belonging to the union. Keep plenty of good literature and pass it at your meetings. There are so many good leaflets, to be obtained in Chicago from Miss Gilbert. After every business meeting send a report of the work done during the month to the daily papers."

The other important features of the morning session were the reports of the secretary and treasurer, and the election of officers. The secretary reported a membership of 524, a gain over last year. There are 85 honorary members, and 286 members of the Loyal Temperance Legion, the junior branch of the work. The treasurer received $303 during the year, and expended $270. The financial condition of the organization is highly satisfactory.

The officers were all re-elected They are: President, Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, Plainfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. L. Rarick, Dunellen recording secretary, Mrs. T. C. Bodine, Plainfield; treasurer, Mrs. Mary T. Cox, Cranford; honorary vice presidents, Mrs. Scriven-Stoddard, Elizabeth; Miss Julia A. Barker, Rahway.

After noontide prayer, adjournment was taken for lunch, which was served in the basement of the church. The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock, with scripture reading and prayer, by Mrs. J. L. Manning, of Dunellen. Most of the afternoon was taken up with reports from county superintendents on the different departments of the work. The reports were presented as follows: L. T. L. Secretary, Miss May Howlett, Plainfield; Work Among Foreigner, Mrs. L. Ussing, Cranford; Medical Temperance, Mrs. A. F. Schmidt, Elizabeth; Scientific Temperance Instruction, Mrs. D. D. Irving, Cranford; Sunday-school Work, Mrs. F. R. Baker, Westfield; Literature, Miss Emma L. Starr, Westfield; The Press, Mrs. L. H. Noe, Elizabeth; Medal Contests, Mrs. E. R. Fuller, Rahway; Anti-Narcotics, Mrs. C. W. Scott, Elizabeth; Evangelistic and Almshouse, Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, Westfield; nfUermented Wine, Mrs. Scriven Stoddard, Elizabeth; Soldiers and Sailors, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Plainfield; Prison and Jail, Miss S. J. Keron, Elizabeth; Sabbath Observance, Mrs. M. Winter, Plainfield; Purity and Mother's Meetings, Miss Julia A. Barker, Rahway; Railroad Men, Motormen and Firemen, Mrs. E. A. Parse, Plainfield; Flower Mission, Miss M. L. Underhill, Rahway; Social Meetings and Red Letter Days, Mrs. M. F. Francis, Elizabeth; Legislation and Petition, Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, Plainfield; Christian Citizenship, Mrs. H. W. Smith, Elizabeth.

Miss Howlett's report on the Legion was particularly interesting. Good work has been done; a gain of fifty members was made, and a colored legion formed in Rahway. Plainfield made the banner gain, adding 35 new members; the total membership here is 65. Miss Howlett made a strong plea for co-operative effort among the members to advance every department.

The convention adjourned for supper at 5:30 o'clock. The evening session was largely devoted to a musical and oratorical contest. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson won the oratorical prize, with an address on the work, and Miss Orrel L. Wrench won the music prize, with a song, "The Sister's Prayer." Each received a silver medal. Mrs. T. C. Bodoine presented the oratorical medal, and Mrs. E. C. Dutcher present the music medal. Both made eloquent little speeches. The other numbers on the program were as follows:

Solo, "Hold Thou My Hand," Mrs. E. A. Chapman, Elizabeth; recitation, "Saloons Must Die," Miss Emma L. Starr, Westfield; recitation, "How Mrs. Henessey Saved Her Boy," Miss May E. Howlett; solo, "The Battle Song," Miss Nancy Randolph, Plainfield; recitation, "The Goose Tale," Mrs. C. W. Scott; recitation, "Hans Prinkerhough on the Benefits of Drinking," Miss Orrel L. Wrench.

STATE TRUST COMPANIES

J. Herbert Case Addressess the National Bankers' Association.

AT ATLANTIC CITY

Plainfielder Delivers Able Speech on "Progress and Development of Trust Companies in New Jersey."

The thirty-third annual convention of the American Bankers' Association at Atlantic City was officially opened at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. President G. S. Whitson, of the National City Bank, of New York city, called the delegates to order and then introduced Governor Stokes, of New Jersey, a bank president himself, who extended a welcome in behalf of State and city.

The day before the regular convention met, was devoted to sectional meetings. The sections elected the following officers:

Trust company sections—President, Philip S. Babcock, New York; vice president, A. A. Jackson, Philadelphia; secretary, James Branch, New York; members of the excutive committee, U. H. McCarter, Newark, N. J.; Hamilton A. S. Post, Baltimore; Arthur Adams, Boston; H. G. Lloyd, Philadelphia, and L. L. Gillespie, New York. Savings bank section—President, Lucius Teter, Chicago; first vice president, J. H. Johnson, Detroit; secretary, William Hanhart, New York; members of the executive committee, E. L. Robinson, Baltimore; J. H. Haas, Davenport, Ia., and H. A. Oren, Beloit, Wis.

One of the principal addresses of the day was delivered by J. Herbert Case, secretary-treasurer and a director of the Plainfield Trust Company. He is vice president for this State. Mr. Case's topic was the "Development and Progress of Trust Companies in New Jersey." His paper was listened to with rapt attention, and at the conclusion he was congratulated for its high merit. Mr. Case said in part:

"On behalf of the State which has the honor of entertaining this great convention, I am glad to report that, in trust company circles, the past year has been the most prosperous one in our history. A summary of our present figures may be of interest:

Total number of trust companies, 71
Total amount of permanent capital	$14,000,000
Total surplus and earned profits	23,000,000
Deposits, about	150,000,000

"By comparison with the figures of a year ago, the following increases may be noted:

Increase in the number of companies, 71.
Increase in permanent capital	$1,000,000
Increase in capital and earned profits	1,000,000
(In addition to which substantial dividends have been paid.)
Increase in deposits, about	20,000,000

"All this is strong testimony to the great prosperity of our commonwealth during the past year, which is further evidenced by the increase in the National, State and Savings Bank deposits as well.

"Class of Business—Our trust companies, generally, are equipped to transact whatever business may legitimately come within the scope of such institutions. In addition to conducting a general banking business which is, at present, the main source of our in come, we are prepared—always for a modest consideration—to act as executor, trustee or administrator of estates, as guardian, assignee or receiver, and to take entire charge of real estate or other property; in short, our facilities enable us to care for the financial affairs of the living and to properly conserve their interests after death. No other branch of our business receives more careful and minute attention on the part of the trust company officers than this business of a fiduciary nature. Many companies also maintain safe deposit and storage vault departments. This is found not only necessary to meet the demand of our clients, but is extremely profitable as well.

"Deposits—More than 50 per cent. of our $150,000,000 deposits are 'deposits on time.' While we are permitted, under the law, to receive deposits at interest, under a recent ruling of the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance, we are not allowed to maintain a 'saving department,' or to in any way advertise or solicit 'savings bank deposits.' Our time deposits are, therefore, solicited under the caption of 'special department,' 'provident department' or 'time deposit department.' We are not only seeking business of this character, but, what is better, are receiving and caring for a large part of the people's savings, the public being fully satisfied that, with the large capital, surplus and earned

MISS DEMAREST NOW MRS. JOS. W. VOUGHT

REV. DR. ZELIE OFFICIATES AT THE CEREMONY.

Miss Frances Demarest, daughter of F. A. Demarest, of Park avenue, and Joseph Wallace Vought, of New York, were married at 7 o'clock last night. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of guests from New York, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Jersey City and New Orleans.

The bride wore a gown of white silk, princess, en traine, and she wore a tulle vail fastened with a diamond crescent, the gift of the groom. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses. Robert Earl, of New York, as best man, was the only attendant. A reception followed the ceremony, after which the couple left on an extended wedding tour through the South. Upon their return they will reside in New York, where the groom is a wealthy manufacturer. The bride received a large collection of gifts.

WARREN CHAPEL MEN FORM AN ASSOCIATION.

Andrew J. Stiglitz Is Chosen President at Largely Attended Meeting.

In response to an invitation of Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, between forty and fifty men who are identified with the chapel, gathered at his home on Grandview avenue last night for the purpose of forming a men's association. There was considerable interest and thirty-nine names were obtained for the charter list.

Mr. McKelvey acted as temporary chairman and explained the objects and the benefits to be derived from such an association. A nominating committee was appointed, comprising William Demarest, J. T. Green, Andrew J. Stiglitz, Joseph W. Gavett and E. Gibson Smith. These officers were chosen;

President, Andrew J. Stiglitz; vice presidents, George B. Zimmer, William A. Wilson; secretary, Charles D. Wheeler; financial secretary, J. T. Green; treasurer, Joseph W. Gavett. A. H. Windham, Jr., William Demarest and John Schenck were appointed a committee on constitution and by-laws, and it will be a part of their duties to choose a name for the association, to be adopted at another meeting to be held Wednesday night, October 2, in the old chapel. After the meeting there was a social time and refreshments were served.

MISS BAKER A BRIDE.

Married Last Night to George Doty, of Dunellen.

Before a gathering of friends and relatives, Miss Eldora Baker and George Doty, of Dunellen, were married last night at the home of the bride on East Fifth street. Rev. W. W. Casselberry, pastor of the Presbyteran church, Dunellen, performed the ceremony. The house was prettily decorated with flowers and greens.

The bride was attended by Miss Anna Doty, sister of the groom, and Harry Baker, the bride's brother, was best man. The bride was gowned in white silk, trimmed with lace, and carried a bouquet of roses. The maid-of-honor was gowned in organdie, trimmed with blue ribbon; she carried white roses.

After a reception, the bride and groom started on a honeymoon trip to Washington and Jamestown. They will be gone two weeks.

Foreign Missions.

A Plainfield branch of the National Fruit and Flower Mission will be formed at the Young Women's Christian Association, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. This mission provides fruit, flowers and jellies, in season, for the hospitals and shut-ins of New York city and Jersey City. It is carried on mostly by people in surrounding towns, who make use of the express labels furnished by the mission headquarters and send packages of fruit and flowers to the city. Quite a number of people in Plainfield have been sending flowers in, during the summer, and it is said they feel that more effective work could be done if they were working under one branch organization.

Preferred Marriage to Jail.

Threatened with a heavy fine and imprisonment in the county jail, Peter Malazki, a recreant wooer arrested on complaint of Josie Yamera, decided to keep his word and marry the girl, in Justice Smith's courtt at South Plainfield, last night. When Peter came into court he was determined not to wed Josie. The shadow of fine and jail, however, took the stiffness out of his backbone. Justice Smith performed the ceremony.

Building a House.

L. A. Clement, of Central avenue, is building a house on West Third street, for speculation. The plans were drawn by Arthur Aalholm.

HUDSPETH'S WORK DONE

State Democratic Committee Will Meet Tomorrow at Jersey City.

MR. KATZENBACH'S TRIP

Candidate for Governor Expects to Be Busy Touring the Counties Until November 2.

Democratic State headquarters have been formally opened in a suite of three rooms on the second floor of the Hudson street side of the Fuller building, immediately opposite and looking into the office of President Edward E. F. C. Young, of the First National Bank, at Jersey City.

The suite until recently was occupied by M. J. Sage & Co., a firm of brokers, which remained in operation until the police authorities objected. The fact that the rooms were formerly an alleged bucketshop had no depressing effect when it was noted that the suite adjoins that of George T. Werts, the last Democratic Governor of the State, and that the rooms were formerly occupied by the late ex-Governor Joseph M. Bedle.

Chairman Robert S. Hudspeth will be assisted at the office by William K. Devereux, secretary to the committee, and Seargeant-at-Arms Robert A. Haggerty. Mr. Hudspeth said the active work of the committee would commence tomorrow morning, when the State committee will hold the first meeting at the new headquarters. At that time it is expected that Candidate Frank S. Katzenbach and John P. Dullard, who is paying particular attention to the South Jersey end of the campaign, will prepare a complete itinerary covering every day up to and including Saturday, November 2, when the State campaign will close.

The securing of local orators and meeting places will be left in a measure to the auxiliary committee, which will be made up of representative young men from each county in the State in charge of Job H. Lippincott, who suggested the formation of the auxiliary committee. As to general speakers, including those of national reputation, arrangements have been made for a few and have others on the list. W. Bourke Cochran, Charles D. Towne and District Attorney Jerome, of New York, have already agreed to appear and will be among the first to speak. There are among the others in mind John Sharp Williams and as many more as the committee deems necessary to offset the influx of national spellbinders promised by the Republican State organization.

The auxiliary committee has held a meeting at which word was received from sixteen counties and an adojurned meeting will be held in State headquarters Wednesday. It is expected the remaining counties will submit the names of representatives.

It is also probable that Essex's representatives, Speakers Edgar E. Lethbridge, of Orange; Franklin H. Halliday, of Newark, and J. Harry Hull, of Nutley, may name additional members, as will Hudson, Passaic, Mercer and Camden.

The names received so far by Mr. Hudspeth are from those who have volunteered to work in the campaign and the men have neither been recommended nor opposed by any leader or faction in the party. Yesterday Camden and Passaic added additional members to their quotas. Atlantic submitted the name of Charles S. Moore, and this leaves only Burlington, Gloucester, Monmouth, Ocean and Warren counties to be heard from. Shortly after 1 o'clock, Hudspeth agreed to accompany Katzenbach to the Gloucester convention Wednesday, to the Mount Holly fair Thursday and to Cape May county Saturday.

FIRE CHIEF TO WED PRETTY TELEPHONE GIRL.

Fred Decker to Marry Miss Florence L. Layton.

Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Florence L. Layton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Layton, of Westfield, to Fire Chief Fred Decker, of that place. The ceremony will be performed at the home of her parents on Friday afternoon, October 5, at 5:30 o'clock. Dr. Addison W. Hayes, pastor of the First M. E. church, will officiate.

Both the fire chief and his bride-to-be are very well known in Westfield. Mr. Decker is one of the Republican leaders in the First Ward, and has been chief of the fire department for a number of years and is a hard worker and an able officer. Miss Layton has been the head operator in the central telephone office for some time, and her resignation takes effect next Friday.

Miss May Bachelor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Batchelor, of West Seventh street, has returned to Wellesley College, Mass., where she is a senior student.

SHERIFF'S WIDOW LOSES

Vice Chancellor Declines to Compel Would-be Purchaser to Take Title.

ESTATE NOT ALL HERS

Concurrent Interest With Children, One of Whom Is Under Age—Mr. Devine's Successful Defense.

Vice Chancellor Bergen has filed an opinion in the friendly suit of Jane Josephine Kyte against James F. Devine and others, involving the construction of the will of former Sheriff George Kyte, of Fanwood, who died in 1900, deciding that Mrs. Kyte had no right to sell certain property, which she claimed to be her own, to Mr. Devine, as the children are concurrently interested in the estate.

Mr. Kyte entered into an agreement last January with Mr. Devine to sell him a piece of property at Fanwood, and Devine took steps to have the title searched before the passing of the deed. The title company refused to pass upon the transaction favorably until Mr. Kyte's will had been construed by the Court of Chancery to determine just what property had been bequeathed to Mrs. Kyte.

According to the second clause of Mr. Kyte's will he devised to his wife, Jane Josephine Kyte, for herself and her children any and all real estate that he owned. From the wording, question was raised whether it was the intention of the testator to make absolute disposition of his real estate to his wife, or whether he intended that she should hold concurrently with the children, or whether she simply had a life estate, and the testator intended to vest the remainder in the children at her death.

The case was argued at Trenton on September 3, and in his decision Vice Chancellor Bergen says that a concurrent interest is vested in the wife and the children and he refused to compel the defendant, Mr. Devine, to take title as preferred by Mrs. Kyte. One of the children, Robert L. Kyte, was under age at the time the question was in dispute, and hence unable to give a deed. Consequently it became necessary to undertake the suit to determine the rights of the children and the widow.

The suit was instituted by Charles M. Dolliver, solicitor for Mrs. Kyte, in which the children and Mr. Devine were joined as defendants. Codington & Swackhamer appeared for the defendants, and W. A. Codington was associated with Mr. Dolliver in settling the question.

Y. W. C. A. COURSES FORMALLY ANNOUNCED.

Special Classes for the First Season Have Been Arranged.

Miss Frances Bosworth, a graduate in domestic science and art at Pratt Institute, has been engaged by the Young Women's Christian Association to take charge of the educational classes in dressmaking, millinery and cooking. She will be here two days a week, Tuesdays and Wednesdays. Tuesday afternoons from 3 to 4:30 she will conduct a class in cooking. The work will be practical in character also helpful and suggestive; the class will plan menus for luncheon and dinners, and then work them out. A course in chafing dish cooking to begin the middle of October and continue for eight weeks is being planned for Wednesday afternoons.

Tuesday evening is to be devoted by Miss Bosworth to teaching dressmaking. The first two weeks of the course will probably be spent in a simple system of drafting and the other lessons on the making of garments. In this class the pupils will furnish their own materials and make garments for their own use. Wednesday mornings from 9 to 10:30 will be given to millinery; a very attractive course being planned from 10:30 to 12:30 there will be a class in dressmaking. A class for mothers in the making of children's garments may be offered the class to begin the middle of October.

The regular education work of the association will commence Monday, September 30.

Other classes will be in French, German, an evening class in cooking and an English class for foreign speaking girls, and embroidery.

Sunday, October 6, the first vesper service of the fall will be held. Miss Edith H. Nichols, religious work director for New York and New Jersey, will be the speaker. Hereafter on the first Sunday of every month there will be a service and on every other Sunday of the month any girl or woman in the city will find a cordial welcome to spend a pleasant Sunday afternoon.

PASS UTILITIES MEASURE

State Senate Puts Bill Through After Some Amendments are Made.

MR. ACKERMAN'S VIEWS

Union County Senator, Who Was a Principal Factor in Passage of the Measure, Talks on Subject.

The public utilities bill was passed by the State Senate at 6:30 o'clock last evening after it had been amended in several important particulars during a session which began at 3 o'clock. There were sixteen senators present and all voted for it.

Throughout the afternoon the minority made efforts to have the measure amended so that it would conform with the bill which failed to pass the House. A score of amendments were offered and all were voted down by a party vote except a few, which all hands admitted added strength to the bill.

Messrs. Silzer and Gebhart led the minority's attack, and Messrs. Ackerman, Hillery, Avis, Robbins, Hutchinson, Frelinghuysen and Wakelee looked after the Republican end of the fight in their usual able manner.

After the amendments had been exhausted and the bill was ready for a vote, Mr. Silzer offered as a substitute the House bill, with a few changes in it. He moved for its adoption and amended the motion with one referring it and the Senate bill to a committee of the whole for examination and comparison. This move precipitated a lively debate, which resulted in the defeat of Mr. Silzer's motion.

The Senate bill was then taken up on third reading and was passed. The bill was reported by the committee on corporations with amendments, which contain the following provisions:

That the Governor may remove commissioners for inefficiency, neglect of duty or misconduct in office, after giving them copies of the charges and the opportunity of being publicly heard in person or by counsel, in their own defense, which was offered by Mr. Ackerman.

That the salaries of subordinates and their duties must be approved by the Governor.

That the clause imposing a penalty for witnesses who might commit perjury be eliminated.

That corporations must adopt such methods of bookkeeping as shall in the judgment of the commission be necessary to an intelligent understanding of the business of the corporation.

That no corporation subject to the act shall give free service, a pass, donation or emolument of any kind to any person holding office under the government of any municipality of this State, except the tsreet railways may carry free policemen and firemen in uniform while attending to duty.

That the vice president of any corporation can sign certificates of stock in the absence of the president.

These amendments were adopted after considerable debate.

The bill was introduced by Mr. Bradley at the opening of the session.

After the committee amendments had been adopted the others began to engage the attention of the senate.

Mr. Colby was the first contributor. He wanted the bill changed in regard to rate making so that the power would be given to the commission. Mr. Gebhart spoke for the amendment, and Mr. Robbins opposed it on the ground that such a provision would clothe the commission with too much power. After a lengthy debate the amendment was lost by a vote of 5 to 8.

A dozen or so amendments offered by Mr. Silzer were voted down.

The floor amendments adopted included one making the commission bi-partisan; requiring the commission to hold monthly meetings in Trenton; relieving witnesses from punishment and compelling the giving of testimony, and giving cities the right to enforce their charter provisions.

Senator E. R. Ackerman, of this city, suggested several amendments to the bill, among which was one for the removal by the Governor of any commissioner for cause, such as inefficiency or neglect of duty.

"The Senate bill," said Mr. Ackerman this morning, "is unquestionably a good measure. In legislation of this character it is our duty to the people to make haste slowly. It is better to make haste slowly than to play politics fastly. I voted for an amendment to give minority political representation on the commission. It seems to be proper to give State supervision over public utilities. It is far better to feel our way in subjects of this kind than to drive ahead without calm consideration.

"All the people," said the Senator, "are either directly or indirectly interested regarding financial results as the outcome of legislation, directly by being stockholders and indirectly

THEY SECRETLY WED A HALF YEAR AGO

HERBERT F. GLAENTZER'S BELATED ANNOUNCEMENT

Announcement was made last night of the marriage of Miss Bertha Fergerson, of New Brunswick, and Herbert Francis Glaentzer, son of Letter-carrier and Mrs. Charles Glaentzer, of New street. The couple were married in New Brunswick on April 30 last by the Rev. Dr. Knox, of that city, but the two families and friends were kept in ignorance of the fact until the announcement last night. The news was received with great surprise.

The groom has been employed in New Brunswick during the past two years, and it was there that he met his bride. Both are well known in New Brunswick and this city. Mr. Glaentzer expects to change his position so that he can work and reside in Plainfield.

COUPLE "LOST" IN SOUND THOUGHT TO HAVE ELOPED.

Miss Beatrice Penton, An Heiress, Believed to Be Much Alive.

There is reason to believe Guida De Angelis and Miss Beatrice Penton, formely of North Plainfield, the young New Rochelle couple, who went sailing on De Angelis' yacht on Saturday and who were thought to have drowned during the big storm that afternoon, have eloped.

Although the sound has been searched from New Rochelle to Bridgeport not a trace of the missing boat has been discovered. It is believed that had the boat capsized it would have come to the surface before this time or at least the small boat attached to it would have been washed ashore. The girl, who is fifteen years old, will fall heir to property worth $150,000 when she is eighteen years old.

PARKER SUCCEEDS FORT.

Governor Stokes Also Names New Fish and Game Commission.

Governor Stokes yesterday sent to the Senate for confirmation the name of Charles W. Parker, Circuit Court Judge of Hudson county, as Supreme Court judge, to take the place of John Franklin Fort, resigned. It is understood this appointment was made at the special request of Mr. Fort. Judge Parker is one of the sons of the late Cortlandt Parker, of Newark.

The Governor filed with the secretary of state the bill abolishing the Fish and Game commission. He then sent to the Senate the names of the new commissioners. They are Benjamin C. Kuser, of Mercer (four years); Percival H. Christie, of Hunterdon (three years); William H. Logue, of Cumberland (two years), and Simeon H. Rollinson, of Essex (one year).

WILL CONSIDER BRIEFS.

Lawyers To Submit Them In Revere Against Kane.

The suit of Dominic Revere against Aleck Kane, the house-wrecker, for damages, which ended abruptly several weeks ago when Lawyer J. P. Owens, for the plaintiff, discovered that there was question as to who should be sued, was called up in the District Court again this morning. The plaintiff sues for damage done by Kane in forcing him out of one of the "spite" houses on East Front street. Kane asserts he acted under orders from Isaac Srager, supposed at the time to have authority over the building. The testimony this morning showed that Srager had no right to order the work done. Judge Newcorn reserved decision for a week and instructed counsel to file briefs. F. J. Blatz appeared for Kane.

That was the only case contested this morning. The court adjourned until 2 o'clock, when the case of Bernard Butinsky against Miss Jane Philpitt, a landlord and tenant action, will be tried.

Attended Meeting of Druggists.

Thomas S. Armstrong, of this city, and J. G. Smith, of Rahway, delegates from the New Jersey Association, have returned from attending the ninth annual convention of the National Retail Druggists' Association, held in Orchestral Hall, Chicago, September 16-19. Mr. Armstrong was made chairman of the committee on commerce and fraternal relations, and the report was considered one of the best presented at the convention, treating many important phases of the trade in a concise manner.

Injured Boy Leaves the Hospital.

Arthur E. Force, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Force, of West Front street, who was injured in a collision with a trolley car last week, has been discharged from the hospital and returned home. He has practically recovered from his injuries, which were slight.

DEMOCRATS MAKE TICKET

Gibby for Surrogate and Tuttle, Girtanner and Reike for the Assembly.

KATZENBACH SPEAKS

So Does Martine—Pitched Into G. O. P. for Fair—A Martinesque Platform Built.

James E. Martine and Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., who got the nomination for governor that the former thought was coming to him, met at the Democratic County Convention, in Elizabeth, last night, for the first time since the political chill struck the Farmer Orator at Trenton. The meeting was noteworthy chiefly for what did not strike the eye. As far as anyone could see, Mr. Martine hadn't a recollection but of the pleasantest character. He greeted the gubernatorial candidate cordially, and when the ever-faithful admirers named him chairman of the convention he made the usual, fiery, Martinesque call for the uprooting of Republicanism, and referred, on every possible occasion, to "Governor Katzenbach."

Mr. Martine's week of quiesence seemed to have done him much good. He was in fine oratorical fettle, and words flowed and gushed from him in a measure to rouse envy in breasts not so well constructed for gusts of eloquence. It was whispered today that the rush of Martine words clogged the wheels of the convention and made it late, but who will believe that? To be sure, the convention did not end until 11:30 o'clock, but if the delegates so loved to hear the chairman speak that they could not bring themselves to do anything until he finished, is a hint of blame to be launched at him who gave freely out of the fulness of his vocabulary.

It was a half somnolent convention, anyway, and Martine alone saved it from dulness. Katzenbach by himself could never have done that. He is engaged in teaching conservatism how to be conservative, and has put exciting remarks from him, if Martine hadn't been there to satisfy the Democratic craving for denunciations and words to that effect, the convention would have finished its business in a short time, for the slate was all made up.

These nominees were placed under the standard, between Martine speeches: For assemblyman, William E. Tuttle, Westfield; Thomas H. Girtanner, Rahway; Fred Reike, Elizabeth; for surrogate, Le Roy Gibby, Summit; for coroner, Dr. E. R. McElhiney, Elizabeth. Gen. Dennis F. Collins, who managed the late Martine boom, was temporary chairman.

Candidate Katzenbach spoke briefly. He held the Republican party up to scorn, but he didn't say anything on the excise question. Martin P. Deverin, of Trenton, also spoke. He used a lot of energy assailing the Republican State administration; he referred to the recent investigations, and spoke of graft. Oh, it was terrible!

Mr. Martine's speeches were not marked by personal reference. He decried Republicanism and things Republican with his usual energy, and did not pause, as his hearers had wondered if he would, to drop a few sads words on the bier of that assassinated nomination.

The platform adopted hts a sound as if somebody has been listening at Republican keyholes. It favors, among other things, "real equal taxation," election of United States Senators by the people, public utilities commission, the separation of State and municipal elections, the creation of assembly districts, direct nominations, strict enforcement of penalties for bribery at the polls, home rule, and the abandonment of voting machines.

Brick Work Starts Today.

The work of laying brick on Park avenue will probably be started today. The gang of Italians has a sufficient surface of concrete foundation laid so that the brick men will not be able to catch up with them right away. Mr. Meeker has engaged expert brick layers from Paterson and they claim that four men will lay one block of bricks in two days. It is expected that the block between Second street and North avenue will be ready today or tomorrow for the concrete foundation.

Horse Show Judge.

Mrs. Harry Myrick is recovering from her illness.

Mrs. Bartley Kelly has been ill for several days.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Philip Smith gave a moonlight corn roast and watermelon party to a few of his High School associates last evening, and about 8 o'clock he drove to Plainfield in a large wagon filled with straw to meet his guests and escort them to his home. A large fire was built near the corn field and fun and merriment was the order. After the corn roast the chilliness of the night drove them to the house, where refreshments and dancing were enjoyed. Among those invited were Helen Whitney, Florence Peyton, Ethel Pryor, Antoinette Allholm, Miss King, Miss Long, Constance Pittis, Martin Stutzman, Bert Leggitt, Cecil Pittis, Claude Lucky, John Linaberry, Earl Darlington and Leonard Attlee. At a late hour he drove them to their homes in Plainfield after a pleasant moonlight frolic at Brookside farm.

At the Daytons golden wedding anniversary William Dayton was presented with a purse of gold by the trustees of the Stelton church for twenty-one years of faithful service.

The finance committee of the Good Government Club will hold a special meeting in Temperance Hall this evening.

Miss Winship, who is here for her health, is greatly improved, and expects to return to her home next week.

Miss Elizabeth Smith has returned to her home after a week's visit with Brooklyn friends.

Miss Emma Manning has been entertaining friends from Bound Brook.

Mrs. Conway has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

NO AFFINITIES IN PHILIPPINES.

Insular Commission Recognizes No Such Thing as Absolute Divorce.

Manila, Sept. 26.—You can't have affinities in the Philippines. The present insular commission recognizes no such thing as absolute divorce. Contrary to the attitude of a powerful Protestant alliance in the "States," the Manila Protestant clergymen threaten to appeal to Washington.

An insular judge started the controversy by asking the commission for instructions on a marriage annulment case before him. Considering that most Filipinos are Catholics, and as such opposed to divorces, the commission replied that it would not recognize divorces at all—only legal separations.

"The commission's ruling against justice and God's will," says the Rev. Stealy B. Rossiter, of the Manila Presbyterian church, one of the anti-divorce order's bitterest opponents. "Such a prohibition fosters the very evil it is desired to cure."

"The line is drawn too closely," agrees the Rev. A. C. Harper, of the Methodist Episcopal church of Manila. "Prohibition is better than the home land's loose divorce laws, but it will work hardship and injustice to innocent persons. Unfaithfulness must ever stand as a just cause for divorce. When the divine fact of marriage has been annulled, the legal acknowledgement of such conditions should not be denied."

Governor General Smith, himself a Catholic, approves the commission's attitude. "Absolute divorce is against the best interests of any people," he asserts. "Marriage may be a lottery, but if you draw a blank make the best of it."

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $6 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made h s futur credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

During September the evening song service at St. Stephen's church will be held at 7:45 o'clock.

The sessions of the Sunday school at the Church of the Heavenly Rest have been resumed for the fall and winter.

Rev. Charles Townsend is now the rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and Sunday evening services have been inaugurated.

Sunday school rally day, services will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, First M. E. and Park Avenue Baptist churches on Sunday.

Preparatory services will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tomorrow night, and communion with reception of members will be held Sunday morning.

The different societies connected with St. Stephen's church are planning a series of entertainments and sociables, to be held during the coming winter at the parish house.

The missionary societies of the First M. E. church have resumed their fall and winter work, and from now on the members will hold their meetings on the regularly appointed dates.

A special musical service will be given at the First Presbyterian church, under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, organist. Miss Anna Case, soprano, and Miss Jassamine Burd, contralto, will have the solo work.

The Women's Guild, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, will hold its first fall meeting on Thursday, October 3. The officers are as follows: President, Miss Emma Forester; vice president, Mrs. I. M. Peterson; secretary, Mrs. M. A. Grannatt; treasurer, Mrs. G. H. Fraleigh.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

In speaking of the passing away of Mr. Joseph Jefferson, a well known editorial writer on one of our famous daily newspapers says: "In all the years he has been before the public, Mr. Jefferson has upheld the best traditions of the stage. No breath of scandal has ever smirched his fair name, no shaft of public criticism has ever been leveled at his head, no work of destruction ever whispered against him. Throughout his entire career he clung to the high ideals he set for himself. Following the example of four generations he dedicated his energies to the drama with the high resolve to be worthy of a place with the most exalted of those who had preceded him. He demonstrated that a man may be a scholar, a gentleman and a successful business and still follow the stage as a profession." These same worthy principles have been instilled in the minds of his sons, Joseph and William W., his natural successors in the comedy roles, and who will appear supported by the late Mr. Jefferson's company at the theatre here on September 30 in Sheridan's famous comedy, "The Rivals."

"The Gingerbread Man," one of the most successful of the many musical plays that have been presented for the last few seasons, will be the attraction at the theatre on Saturday. It was written by the late rederic Rankin some time before his death, but was not produced until after the author had passed away. It tells a fanciful story to the accompaniment of music that ranges from jolly jingle to the verge of grand opera.

POINTS FOR THE BUYERS

Do you contemplate building this fall? Titus H. Laury, of East Front street, the well-known contractor, can give you attractive figures.

There is always a demand for houses, either to rent or for sale, and M. F. Gano, of North avenue, can help you to secure a home. Look over his list.

Are you dissatisfied with the shoes you are wearing? If so, remember that George Stagaard, the shoemaker, can make a pair to order that will suit you in every particular.

Jr. O. U. A. M. Council Withdraws.

Washington, N. J., Sept. 26.—M., has decided by a nearly unanimous vote to withdraw from the National Funeral Benefit Association, and hereafter will pay death claims direct from the treasury of the council. The amount paid on the death of a member is $250. Warren Council has a membership of nearly 470, of which 430 are active members. The council is worth nearly $10,000. During the twenty-five years of its existence the death claims have not averaged one a year. Two propositions for membershijp were received at the meeting Monday night.

Mrs. John R. Thayer, of Brooklyn, has been visiting friends in town for a few days.

Mrs. William Springer, of Newark, has been visiting relatives in Plainfield for several days.

Walter S. Shaw, of Philadelphia, who has been visiting friends in town for a few days, has returned.

Edward A. Laing, of East Front street, has returned from a trip to the Thousand Islands and Canada.

Miss Sarah Vail, of Paterson, who has been visiting friends in town during the past week, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Boelm and daughter, of Somerset street, have returned from a delightful pleasure trip abroad.

·IMPORTERS· NEWARK'S STORE BEAUTIFUL BROAD, NEW AND HALSEY STREETS ·RETAILERS·

It is whispered that Fate, Fashion and the Goddess of Weather conspired to fool us—to lead us to believe that equinoctial storms were going to mar our Opening Days; then, letting it pour almost up to the very moment of the opening of the store doors Tuesday, brushed the clouds away, and flooded us with sunshine—making both our friends and ourselves happy.

So here's to Fate, Fashion, and ye Goddess—may they all wear hats and gowns as beautiful as ours.

Formal Opening Days are over, but there will, from this time forward, be a continual exhibition of all that is new, novel and fashionable in the realm of millinery and apparel of every sort.

We invite attention to the magnificent display of Silks, Velvets and Dress Fabrics we are now making, proving this store worthy of the patronage of the finest dressers.

Cavaliere
Women's Boots $3.50.

The high-cut Cavaliere Boot will be very fashionable this season as it adds a finished touch to the gowns now so much in vogue.

We are showing these boots in both lace and button styles, made of gunmetal and patent colt skin; plain toes and very dressy heels; waved tops; all widths and sizes, at the single price.... 3.50

Cavaliere Boots for Misses and Children are proving very popular because of their handsome appearance. These are made of soft Vici Kid with a dull calf, high-cut top, with broad toe tipped with patent leather; very best sole leather used in the making; larger sizes have low heels; here in sizes from 7 to 8 at $1.50; 8½ to 11, at $1.65; 11½ to 2, at $2; 2½ to 5, at 2.25

IRISH POINT CURTAINS.

A GREAT ONE-DAY OFFER.

500 Pairs of Irish Point Curtains will go on sale tomorrow at a price so far below usual as to make it worth the while of any housekeeper for miles around to come for curtains.

These lace curtains are in no less than twenty beautiful designs, all new; some with plain centers; others with scrolls and detached figures; fine for parlors, libraries, sitting-rooms, and some particularly suitable for dining or bedrooms.

These curtains are all of our own importation and are taken from our regular stocks—curtains that have been marked $6 to $7, and worth it. Priced for Thursday only, at $5

You may buy these curtains on the Club Plan.

Handsome Taffeta
SILK PETTICOATS, $5.00.

Silks have gone up in cost. Expert labor is more expensive and you would naturally expect that you could not get as good a petticoat today for $5 as you once did, and as a general thing you cannot.

Here is a chance to get new Taffeta Silk Petticoats with deep circular, shirred or sectional flounces; some strictly tailored with straps or self silk; others shirred, corded and stitched; in black, brown, green, wine, tan, gray, pink, light blue and white, including all the changeable sorts; beautifully finished petticoats, made by a manufacturer of the highest repute; should sell for not a cent less than $7.95; we are offering them at the little price of..... $5

Come tomorrow and see these splendid petticoats and you will surely say you never saw such value for the money.

The Greatest Admiration

has ever been expressed by silence! People who have stood before the greatest wonders, the most beautiful scenes, the grandest panoramas, the masterpieces of masters of art, have stood in silent admiration unable to express in words what they felt.

OUR HATS ARE MASTERPIECES,

as are the waists, the cloaks and suits, and the most flattering tribute we have ever received is the eloquently admiring gaze of the hundreds of women who thoroughly examined the lines yesterday and today. FALL OPENING

We throw our doors wide open and welcome you to inspect our line of Men's and Young Men's Suits and Overcoats for the Fall of 1907.

WE WILL HOLD AND START OUR FORMAL FALL OPENING
FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27th, 9 A. M.

A Great Sale of Suits and Overcoats.

$165,000 WORTH OF MEN'S & BOYS' CLOTHING

The good news will travel fast. You will never guess the price by the appearance of these garments. It is very doubtful if there ever has been a sale like it—months and months we needed to prepare for this great Fall Opening Sale—carload after carload we received, consisting of the best clothing which can be produced. They are all hand-tailored; fresh, new, stylish garments. Years ago the merchant tailors monopolized the production of stylish garments, but the time is past, our garments are not only equal to any merchant tailor workmanship, but better in every instance, besides the saving of $5, $10 and $15 on each suit, overcoat or raincoat—and your object should be to come early Friday morning and take advtantage of this GREAT SAVING SALE. Kings are known all over the country. With every purchase you receive our own guarantee—each item mentioned below will convince you that a visit to our store will greatly benefit your pocketbook.

MEN'S SUITS.

LOT 1.

LOT 2.

$9.80 During this special or formal opening we are holding, we want you to get acquainted with the well-known H. & M. K. brand suits, strictly hand-tailored, hand felt collar, French haircloth padded shoulders, pattern in the newest shades in browns, checks, stripes; in fact this garment would easily bring $19.00. Our price for Friday and Saturday $9.80

LOT 3.

$12.65 This suit looks well, made well, fits well and wears well—made in English and Domestic Cheviots and Worsteds, black and blue unfinished Cheviots, single or double breasted, in fact in all the latest patterns of strictly all wool fabrics, and made to fit all sizes of men; worth $25.00; for Friday and Saturday $12.65

LOT 4.

$14.75 These are the best suits you ever saw, and you can put it down as a fact that better clothes, more stylish, more perfectly tailored never came from the hands of a tailor. These suits are in a number of very smart models, and the patterns are varied enough to suit every taste—grays, browns, tans; in stripes, plaids and checks, worth $34.00; for this sale $14.75

RAINCOATS FOR MEN.

$7.90 For Friday and Saturday. We can give you a raincoat in either smooth or rough cloth with a perfect fit about the shoulders and collars, in any length and any pattern you desire. The quality of the goods and waterproofing is greatly important in such garment that is intended to look well even when soaking wet. Our price for this raincoat $7.90

TOP COATS FOR MEN.

$8.25 You won't see any snappier, smarter clothes than our H. & M. K. top coats, nor any better all-wool fabrics, best tailoring, perfect style, made in plain black, oxfords or tan colors, silk or serge lined, hand-made buttonholes, hand-padded shoulders to keep shape forever; for men who take no small pride in "right style" of their apparel. To such men these top coats are certainly a "must be;" for Friday and Saturday.... $8.25

MEN'S TROUSERS.

31 to 50 waist—29 to 37 inseam.

$1.45 for cassimere trousers, worth $2.60.

BOYS' LONG PANTS SUITS.

$4.85 for black cheviot suits, worth $8.00.
6.25 for fancy cheviot suits, worth $11.50.
7.50 for elegant worsted suits, single or double breasted, worth $14.00.
8.90 for suits strictly hand tailored, worth $16.00.
9.80 for the latest pattern silk lined suits, worth $20.00.

BOYS' SHORT PANTS SUITS.

6 to 16 Years.

$1.85 for black or dark mixed suits, worth $3.00.
2.45 for Teddy Bear suit; coat, pants and vest, worth $4.50.
3.25 for all wool Knickerbocker suits, worth $6.00.
4.15 for heavy serge or Scotch cheviot suits, worth $7.50.

We have been asked many time why we are always so busy—the only reason is this—we try to please everybody, sell well made clothing to the buying public cheaper, and better grade than other merchants are buying for. As a result we have no dull days between the first of January and the thirty-first of December.

In order that out-of-town customers may participate in this sale, we will pay railroad fare—present your return ticket at cashier's desk.

through the investments of life and fire insurance companies, as well as by investments by individuals either in their own or in a fiduciary capacity. It is the duty of legislators, as far as their power lies, to see that the companies adaquately serve the public. We must not play politics with important business interests so as to weaken or destroy the confidence of the public. It is always our duty to both labor and to capital to be both sane and honest in legislation. Make haste slowly. See that the foundation stones are laid so that the superstructure of our industry and prosperity will be firm and enduring. It seems certain that those who would play politics with serious business affairs of the people of the State are not as cautious and logical as are the people whom they represent.

"The train," said the Senator, "is on the track of prosperity, and is still going at a satisfactory speed. Let us be careful not to throw the switch to the sidetrack, which might ultimately lead to depression. The people have their eyes on the towerman. Let us make haste slowly without playing politics or seeking to deceive the people by undigested measures. We have in the Senate bill framed legislation that will compell all corporations that come under its provisions to furnish adequate facilities to the public. We have provided that all discriminations shall cease and we have seen to it that no rebates are to be given to any one, as well as providing adequate safeguards to those investing in the future in such enterprises.

"We have given the minority party representation on the board as well as compelling the keeping of an open daily office with regular monthly meetings of the commission. In some respects the bill goes further than the Hughes bill, but it was not deemed wise to attempt to regulate the rates at this time."

First Frost of the Season.

The predictions of Weather prophet John Neagle were fulfilled last night, when tihs section of the State was visited by a light frost. This morning the temperature fell to 40 degrees and light overcoats were very comfortable. The frost was hardly heavy enough to affect flowers and plants, but the chances are that under present conditions it will get in its good work tonight.

Funeral of Agnes Connett.

The funeral service of Agnes Connett, the ten months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Connett, colored, of this city, was held yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock from the undertaking parlors of A. M. Runyon & Son on Park avenue. Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of Faith chapel, officiated, and the burial was in the Methodist Cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

Must Support Wife.

John Hall, of Lincoln, has been directed by order of Justice Von Minden, of New Market, to pay his wife $5 weekly. The order followed a non-support action brought by the overseer of the poor of Piscataway. The justice scored Hall severely in passing on the case. The man is said to be shiftless and careless. He has three children.

Mrs. Ernest Bland.

Mrs. Ernest Bland, colored, aged 24 years, died at her home, 429 West Fourth street, last night, after a short illness. She is survived by a husband. The funeral will be held from the late home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, and from the Calvary Baptist church at 2:30 o'clock. The burial will be in Hillside Cemetery.

Alfred W. Dunavan will take a short vacation during the next few days.

profits back of all deposits, together with the conservative management and representative directorate which are universally found in the trust companies of this State, their deposits are safe. In looking up the aggregate deposits of the State, I find that the last report of the comptroller of the currency shows that there are in operation in this State 172 national banks, having a capital of $20,000,000, surplus and profits of $25,000,000 and deposits of $150,000,000, the same amount approximately as is lodged with our seventy-one trust companies. To my mind this speaks volumes as to the confidence of the depositing public in the integrity and conservatism of our trust companies. And we know that this is deserved. A perusal of the trust company reports of this State which are issued yearly and freely distributed by the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance, will quickly convince the most skeptical that we are most conservative in making our investments. No other class of financial institutions (savings banks excepted) have their investments, earnings and expenses and affairs generally placed before the public in such detail. Understand, we welcome this publicity, being convinced that the public, whose confidence and business we ask, are entitled to such information.

"Laws—Our companies are under the jurisdiction of an alert department of banking and insurance. Its examiners make at least one thorough examination each year, while the law further requires that not less than two additional examinations shall be made by a committee of the board of directors. Sworn reports of our condition are called for by the department at irregular intervals, a copy of which must be published in a local paper. It is gratifying to report that no adverse legislation has been enacted during the year.

"Progress and Development—It has been said that all roads lead to Atlantic City, and after a strenuous year's work, we are mighty glad that they do, but we also find that all roads in this State lead to New York and Philadelphia, and much time and effort is expended in pointing out to our commuter friends the desirability of keeping their money in the home banks, away from the 'wicked' financiers. A strong argument that we use is the New York law known as the '5 per cent inheritance tax,' by virtue of which that State claims 5 per cent. of the principal upon the death of a non-resident depositor. If their State Legislature would only proceed to penalize out of town depositors during their life time, our fortunes would be made and we should all be presiding over institutions the size of that of our good friend, Brother McCarter. Our companies generally are progressive and up to date. Do the women enjoy having a quiet, private room for the transaction of their banking business? We furnish it. Do they want clean money? We supply them with new bills, and I, for one, have seen this policy pay in an ever increasing number of women's accounts. We believe in the generous use of printer's ink, and, in addition to newspaper publicity, keep the field covered with letters, booklets, statements, etc. Our own institution has found that engaging by the year a special corner of prominence in the local papers, paying a little extra therefor, and then pouring into it our most convincing and forceful arguments, setting forth the advantages of doing business with our own particular institution and changing the 'filling' each week, to be the best possible sort of an investment. Why should we not advertise? Is our business in any wise different from that of the successful merchant? Are we not buying and selling credit for a profit and will not that profit, like that of the successful merchant, be greater if we can materially increase the volume of our business? Gentlemen, trust companies, the highest type of financial institutions, are here to stay and while the trust company business of our State is, as I have shown, on a most satisfactory basis, yet we are not satisfied. If there is a gentleman here from Missouri or elsewhere that can show us how to make two new accounts grow where one grows now, we will cheerfully place with him a large reserve account and, on the strength of his information, might even be willing to sell him a few shares of our stock at a slight premium.

"If we may interchange ideas, not only at convention seasons, but at all times—if by wisely aiding and fairly counseling each other we can lift up a higher standard of soundness—if we can enjoy continued success and share that success with trust companies elsewhere, depend upon it, the trust companies of New Jersey will join hands with those of other States—will be found not wanting in the service they owe and stand ready to render for the greatest number, and for the greatest good."

are arriving daily. Each department is taking on its fall dress. A big store like this is a sort of Panorama—a constantly changing scene, something coming and going all the time. Not one item in a hundred sees itself in print. The only way to keep in touch with the many new things is to come and see us often. We want you to feel free to come in and look around. Whether you have anything to buy or not, make yourself at home. You are entirely welcome at all times.

Advance Showing of New Fall Costumes.

The prevailing styles are semi-fit and three-quarter length Coats in three-quarter and full length sleeves, in cheviot and broadcloth, stripes, checks and plain colors, at prices ranging from $15 to $65.

New Fall Millinery.

Exquisite styles, a grand exhibition of the budding flowers of Fall fashion gathered from the fascinating style gardens of London and Paris, and when you are looking for a new hat you cannot afford to pass by the collection here presented.

A Showing of American Rugs

It's increasingly the fashion nowadays to use Rugs as floor coverings—either on a polished surface or on a plain carpet foundation.

The popularity of Rugs has incited our domestic makers to great deeds. They have drawn their inspiration from the beautiful Rugs of the Orient, and so close are the copies that it is often difficult to distinguish one from the other.

In our superb stock of Domestic Rugs we show all the very latest designs and color effects that you'll find in the Oriental Rugs, as well as the most artistic patterns of all the leading American makers, and in all sizes, from a doormat 18x36 inches to a carpet rug 9x12 feet.

A BIG SALE OF COUCHES.

We've too many Couches on the floor, the space they occupy is needed for New Fall Goods that are clamoring for room. In order to move them quickly we have made deep cuts in the prices, for instance:

6.50 Couches for	4.98	8.50 Couches for	6.50
10.50 Couches for	7.98	12.50 Couches for	9.25

SOUND REQUIEM OVER SILLY VERTICAL FAD

FUTILITY OF A BYGONE SCHOOL PET EXPLAINED BY SUPERVISOR.

Without a single note of regret, save at the damage it had done to the public school system, the committee on text-books of the Newark Board of Education Tuesday night reviewed the passing of the fad of teaching vertical handwriting in the schools of Newark. Incidentally, it was remarked that New York, Chicago and most of the other important cities that, like Newark, has been enticed away from beaten paths by the allurements of the vertical fad, are following the lead of this city and are restoring the study of the slanting form of penmanship.

The discussion was brought about through a request made by Charles W. Slocum, supervisor of writing, to have the engravings for the writing slips to be used hereafter in the teaching of penmanship done by an engraver of his selection, whose work he recommended. The school department adopted the system involving the use of model writing slips some months ago. A contract to print many thousand of these was given to a local firm, which was also to prepare the engravings from models supplied by Mr. Slocum. A sample chart prepared by an engraver was displayed by Mr. Slocum to the committee. It showed the letters to be incorrectly aligned and varying in size.

Mr. Slocum explained that by altering the original plan of awarding the contract, with the preparation of the dies included, to the extent of having the dies separately made under conditions that would make them the absolute property of the board, much better results would be obtained, both in respect to the accuracy of the models and the ultimate cost to the board in materials. By comparing the cost of issuing loose model slips according to his plans, with the old cost of providing the pupils with copy books Mr. Slocum showed the committee that the saving to the board would be just $2,000 a year, or the amount of his salary.

Poor Results Shown.

The worse than negative results that came from the adoption of the round hand or vertical system in the local schools were frankly shown up by Mr. Slocum during the discussion of the present method of teaching his slant system. He told the committee that if it was desired he would produce from his office specimens of the bad results of the teaching of the vertical method in the Newark schools.

"I have fully 25,000 specimens," the supervisor said, "showing that where the children thought they were producing vertical handwriting the result was nothing more than an ugly backhand."

Another reason given by Mr. Slocum to justify the change to his plan of teaching the slant method by means of the copy slips was that he has found it true that many of the teachers are incapable of writing perfect models on the blackboards for pupils to follow, while they arefully competent to guide the children in following the copy slips.

NO "CAR AHEAD" IN BAYONNE.

Trolley Inspector Fined $25 for Transferring Passengers.

Because he ordered the passengers of one trolley car to transfer to the car ahead, which is a violation of the Bayonne city ordinance to regulate the trolley traffic, passed last winter by the Council, Daniel Thorpe, an inspector on the Bayonne line of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, was arrested by Bicycle Policeman Martin Cavanagh, of that city, yesterday. According to the policeman, the inspector ordered the passengers in one of the cars going toward Bergen Point from Jersey City to take a car ahead.

Inspector Thorpe admitted in court yesterday that he had ordered the transfer, and said he did so because the car was behind its schedule time. He admitted the car was not disabled.

"Then," said the court, "I shall have to find you guilty." Thorpe was fined $25.

DIRECTOR NOT NAMED BY STATE HOSPITAL BOARD.

Massachusetts Man Appears in Race as Successor to Dr. Ward. Eliminated to Four.

Action has again been deferred in the matter of the selection of a medical director at the State Hospital for the Insane to succeed to the vacancy caused by the dismissal of Dr. John W. Ward. The board of hospital managers met at the institution yesterday for the specific purpose of naming a new medical director, but at the suggestion of the medical committee of the board the appointment was postponed until October 8, when another special meeting will be conducted.

It was explained that the reason for this delay was to give the medical committee an opportunity to further investigate the merits of the various applicants for the place. There are more than thirty candidates, but according to what is regarded as most excellent authority the field has been eliminated to four and possibly two men. It is known that the physicians being most seriously considered for the place at the present time are Dr. William H. Hicks, senior assistant at the Essex county hospital for the insane, and Dr. C. A. Cotton, who holds a similar position in the asylum at Danvers, Mass. The other two who are regarded as likely condidates are Dr. John C. Felty, acting medical director at the Trenton institution, and Dr. C. K. Cossatt, second assistant physician at the Morris Plains asylum.

The name of Dr. Cotton has been but recently injected into the contest for the place, but it is understood that the board has received some very high recommendations in his behalf. It was also stated that physicians acquainted with Dr. Hicks' ability as an alienist have written to the medical committee commending him for the post.

Between now and the next meeting of the board, the medical committee will visit the Essex county hospital, Morris Plains and the Danvers institution, where it will interview the applicants and make a personal inspection of the work under their charge.

EXCISE ISSUE UP TO COMMITTE.

Kean Look for Fort's Election—Home Rule Decision Next Week.

The Republican State committee met yesterday in Trenton. United States Senator John Kean predicted the election of J. Franklin Fort for Governor. He said the ex-judge had a good record and was very papular, and while the election might be close he felt sure it would result in favor of Mr. Fort.

What deposition will be made of the excise plank in the platform will not be determined until it has been acted upon by an executive committee to be appointed some day next week. This committee, it is said, will probably be composed of Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset; Quartermaster General C. Edward Murray, of Mercer; Joseph McDermott, of Monmouth, and Vivian M. ewis, of Passaic county.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Sept. 29: "Liberal toward God." "They all did cast in of their superfluity, but she of her want did cast in all that she had, all her living."—Mark xii, 41-44.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Passages for reference—Ex. xxv, 2; xxxvi, 5-6; Prov. xi, 24, 25; II Cor. viii, 1-5, 12; ix, 6-12.

One of the surest tests of religion is the use made of money. It is not altogether the amount given, but rather the sentiment which lies back of and prompts the offering. The cost of a gift cannot be told by the price tag of the dealer. That represents only the cash he received, and he is not a party to the giving. The real cost is to be estimated by the thought, the effort to get and the outgoing of soul on the part of the giver.

Few things in life are of more worth than the privilege of making gifts. This is often looked at on the other side, which is a serious mistake. The receiving can never produce the happiness which giving does so long as human nature remains what it is. Real joy comes more in doing for others than in having others do for oneself. That is the way we are made. Look around you for awhile and watch things and folks and you will see it for yourself, and the glow of the new discovery will come to you as an experience you will not easily forget. But if you ever know it you must discover it for yourself. No amount of telling it by others or repetition of the words and facts by yourself will give you a grasp of the truth. Not until you see it with your inner eyes and feel it at the center of your being will you understand and believe it. Each one makes his own discoveries and builds his own world.

This is profoundly true in all that touches our relations to God. And there is such a variety of ways of giving to His cause, ranging all the way from the trivial and almost blasphemously careless to the deeply tragical and earnest. At one of the fashionable summer colonies in all our land during the past season the annual fair in aid of the local church was held on the grounds of one of the wealthy residents. Milk from his dairy sold for $1 a glass. Sofa pillows to the number of 300 sold for $20 apiece. Five thousand dollars was the net profit of this fashionable function. And some of those people actually believed perhaps that they had been liberal toward God and had contributed to His church when all the time there was no more religion in it than in a dog or horse show or a fox hunt conducted by the same company. This was not because of the wealth of these people at all. Many poor folks do the same and think it pious. The difficulty in all this style of giving is the lack of real heart principle in it and the absence of any deep devotion to the cause of God.

How does any one dare say such things? How can any one know them to be true? Let us ask another question. How did Jesus dare estimate the relative values of the gifts He saw put into the treasure chests of the temple? How did He know their comparative worth? In a very similar way at the present time we make our estimates.

But the important matter is not judging other people and their offerings. Rather should each one consider himself and see to it first that he has such deep devotion to Him who has given us all we have, including His fathomless love in the gift of His only Son, Jesus Christ; that all the life is yielded in glad submission to Him. Then, with His love filling the soul, the ever present thought will be how to use the means we have so as best to honor Him and benefit His cause. In such giving how the heart exults and grows, even when all the living has been offered!

Happiness In Working

Work is a secret of happiness. It saves the heart from being overcharged. The emotions which otherwise would lie pent up to the hurt of the life find vent and are wrought out in activities which bless others, while they produce health and wholesomeness in him who performs them. No worse mistake can be made by one in grief than to drop life's duties and tasks out of the hands and put oneself off from the common duties and ministries of life. God's comfort is not found in this way. Joy comes not back to him who nourishes his sorrow in idle brooding. It is found only in the earnest and faithful doing of every duty. Work has saved many a life from despair in time of great grief. —Forward.

Proving It.

The man who takes a half hour in the prayer meeting to tell what a poor, miserable life he has been leading will probably be found using all the rest of the time proving by his life that what he said was true.—Evangel.

Resignation.

If Thou hadst given me a cross
Of mine own design,
That I might wear the airy grace
And call it mine;
If Thou hadst given me power to choose
The hill to climb,
"Thy will be done," with careless air
I might have said some time.

If Thou hadst left me free to choose
The path wherein to walk,
With dear companions to beguile the time
With song and talk,
With stately trees and beauteous flowers
Brightening the way,
"Thy will be done," I might have thought
Indifferently to say.

But since Thou gavest me instead
A cross of Thine own choosing,
Alone to walk the dreary way
My loved ones losing,
No buds of promise blooming here for me,
No help but from above,
"Thy will be done," I have learned to say
With reverent love.

—Grace Scofield Holmes in United Presbyterian.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Sept. 23.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Home missions; religious progress in our cities.—Jonah i, 1-3; iii, 1-10; iv, 9-11.

The book of Jonah has been much discussed because of the one single physical miracle that it contains. So far as this miracle is concerned, we may pass it by with the remembrance that with God "all things are possible," and therefore that this supernatural action is as easily believed as any miracle recorded in God's word. With this attitude toward the whale swallowing Jonah we can go on to the spiritual miracles which it contains, which are far greater than the one referred to the salvation of the city of Nineveh, noted for its wickedness. The conversion of our human soul is a great miracle. It can be performed only by the power of God through the Holy Ghost, and in this case not one soul, but a great city, was saved.

Christ commissioned His disciples to go to the cities as well as to the country. "Beginning at Jerusalem" was His commission on the day of His ascension. The city was therefore the first place designated by the Master for Christianization. And, going back into the Old Testament history, we find that an ancient heathen city was the object of the earnest solicitude of God. God's command was therefore given to the prophet Jonah to go to Nineveh and pronounce the judgment of God upon it.

1. Jonah disobeyed the command of God to go to Nineveh. He tried to flee from God by going to Tarshish. But no man can flee from God nor escape the responsibilities that God places upon him. But many, like Jonah, try to flee from God. They may have no interest in missions, especially for city missions, believing that it is impossible to lead the inhabitants of great cities to repentance and to Christ. The wickedness may seem so great that it may seem an impossible task, and they prefer to go some other direction and expend their labors. But our duty is "to go where He wants us to." It is ours but to do. Results are with God. The fact that it was a foreign city may also have influenced Jonah, as it does men today. But this is no excuse. There are really no foreigners, especially to Christians. All men are brethren in Christ, whether dwelling in Peking, Tokyo or Bombay or in New York, Philadelphia or Washington. For disobedience God punished Jonah, and He will follow the same course with us. We cannot select the pleasant duties and ignore the unpleasant ones. When God says "Go" we must go.

2. Jonah obeyed the second command of God. God was most gracious to Jonah and "came unto Jonah a second time" gave him a second opportunity. This opportunity Jonah embraced. "Jonah arose and went unto Nineveh." The result was that the city turned from its sin to righteousness with true repentance, and God spared the city. Thus God saved a city by the use of one man, who obeyed him. But Jonah was displeased. He wanted his prophecy to be fulfilled and Nineveh destroyed, and excused his first disobedience upon the mercy and grace of God. But God taught him a useful lesson through a gourd, and it is to be hoped that he learned. We should at least learn that the greatest attribute of God is His mercy and grace. Without it none could be saved.

The importance of city missions cannot be too much emphasized. They are the dens of sin and of iniquity, but it must also be said that the Christian people of our cities live lives of a high standard and are aggressive in Christian work. Moreover, it has been time and again demonstrated that cities can be saved. Nineveh was saved. Samaria accepted Christ. The great revivals have been held in cities. Let us do our part in personally seeking the salvation of all about us and in giving liberally of our means to the religious organizations that labor especially amid the great difficulties in our cities. To win America for Christ we must win the American cities for Him.

Pioneer of Christian Endeavor Society.

Rev. Alexander Smellie in his book, "Men of the Covenant," relates the following:

In 1683, one of the darkest years of the killing time, a company of girls in the village of Pentland had their own little gathering for purposes of devotion. There were fifteen of them, and they each subscribed to a bond. Here is this early Christian Endeavor pledge:

"This is a covenant between the Lord and us to give up ourselves freely to Him without reserve, soul and body, hearts and affections, to be His children and Him to be our God and Father if it please the Holy Lord to send His gospel to the land again."

Each girl set down her name to the fearless document: Beatrix Umpherston—she was but ten summers old; Janet Brown, Helen Mountry, Marion Swan, Janet Swan, Isobel Craig, Martha Logan, Agnes Aitken, Margaret Galloway, Helen Stratten, Helen Clark, Margaret Brown, Marion M'Morren, Christian Laurie.

Thus even the children were imbued with the dauntlessness of their elders. If, as the Talmud says, [illegible] because the training of children had been neglected, the Scottish of the covenant was manifestly [illegible] part to escape so sore [illegible] Robertson in Christian Endeavor World.

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY A.C. McCLURG & CO.

...ey moved forward at a walk and reached a higher level, across which the night wind swept, bearing a touch of cold in its breath as though coming from the snow-capped mountains to the west. There was renewed life in this invigorating air and Murphy spurred forward, his companion pressing steadily after.

When the first signs of returning day appeared in the east, the two left their horses in a narrow canyon, and crept to the summit of a ridge. Below lay the broad valley of the Powder. Then Murphy turned his head and looked back into the other's face.

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Verge of Confession.

Murphy uttered one sputtering cry of surprise, flinging his hand instinctively to his hip, but attempted no more. Hampton's ready weapon was thrusting its muzzle into the astounded face, and the gray eyes gleaming along the polished barrel held the fellow motionless.

"Hands up! Not a move, Murphy! I have the drop!" The voice was low, but stern, and the old frontiersman obeyed mechanically, although his seamed face was fairly distorted with rage.

"You! Damn you!—I thought I knew—the voice."

"Yes, I am here all right. Rather odd place for us to meet, isn't it? But, you see, you've had the advantage all these years; you knew whom you were running away from, while I was compelled to plod along in the dark. But I've caught up just the same, if it has been a long race."

"What do ye—want me fer?" The look in the face was cunning.

"Hold your hands quiet—higher, you fool! That's it. Now, don't play with me. I honestly didn't know for certain I did want you, Murphy, when I first started out on this trip. I merely suspected that I might, from some things I had been told. When somebody took the liberty of slashing at my back in a poker-room at Glencaid, and drove the knife into Slavin by mistake, I chanced to catch a glimpse of the hand on the hilt, and there was a scar on it. About 15 years before, I was acting as officer of the guard one night at Bethune. It was a bright starlit night, you remember, and just as I turned the corner of the old powder-house there came a sudden flash, a report, a sharp cry. I sprang forward only to fall headlong over a dead body; but in that flash I had seen the hand grasping the revolver, and there was a scar on the back of it, a very peculiar scar. It chanced I had the evening previous slightly quarreled with the officer who was killed; I was the only person known to be near at the time he was shot; certain other circumstantial evidence was dug up, while Slavin and one other—no, it was not you—gave some damaging, manufactured testimony against me. As a result I was held guilty of murder in the second degree, dismissed from the army in disgrace, and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. So, you see, it was not exactly you I have been hunting, Murphy,—it was a scar."

Murphy's face was distorted into a hideous grin.

"I notice you bear exactly that kind of a scar, my man, and you spoke last night as if you had some recollection of the case."

The mocking grin expanded; into the husky voice crept a snarl of defiance, for now Murphy's courage had come back—he was fronting flesh and blood. "Oh, stop preachin'—an' shoot—an' be damned ter ye!"

"You do me a grave injustice, Murphy. Your slashing at me down in Glencaid hasn't left so much as a sting behind. It's completely blotted out, forgotten. I haven't the slightest desire to kill you, man; but I do want to clear my name of the stain of that crime. I want you to tell the whole truth about that night's work at Bethune, and when you have done so, you can go. I'll never lay a finger on you; you can go where you please."

"Bah!—ye ain't got no proof—agin me—'sides, the case is closed—it can't be opened agin—by law."

"You devil! I'd be perfectly justified in killing you," exclaimed Hampton, savagely.

Murphy stared at him stupidly, the cunning of incipient insanity in his eyes. "En' whar—do ye expect—me ter say—all this, pervidin', of course—I wus fule 'nough—ter do it?"

"Up yonder before Custer and the officers of the Seventh, when we get in."

"They'd nab me—likely."

"Now, see here, you say it is impossible for them to touch you, because the case is closed legally. But I've had to suffer for your crime, Murphy, suffer for 15 years, ten of them behind stone walls; and there are others who have suffered with me. It has cost me love, home, all that a man holds dear. The very least you can do in ordinary decency is to speak the truth now. It will not hurt you, but it will lift me out of hell."

"Well—maybe I might. Anyhow, I'll go on—with ye. Kin I sit up?

"Hands Up! Not a Move, Muhpry! I Have the Drop!"

I'm dog fired—lyin' yere."

"Unbuckle your belt, and throw that over first."

"I'm damned—if I will. Not—in no Injun—country."

"I know it's tough," retorted Hampton, with exasperating coolness, his revolver's muzzle held steady; "but, just the same, it's got to be done. I know you far too well to take chances on your gun. So unlimber."

"Oh, I—guess not," and Murphy spat contemptuously. "Do ye think—I'm afeard o' yer—shootin'? Ye don't dare—fer I'm no good ter ye—dead."

"You are perfectly right. You are quite a philosopher in your way. You would be no good to me dead, Murphy, but you might prove fully as valuable maimed. Now I'm playing this game to the limit, and that limit is just about reached. You unlimber before I count ten, you murderer, or I'll spoil both your hands!"

The mocking, sardonic grin deserted Murphy's features.

"Unlimber! It's the last call."

With a snarl the scout unclasped his army belt, dropped it to the ground and sullenly kicked it over toward Hampton. "Now—now—you, you gray-eyed—devil, kin I—sit up?"

The other nodded. He had drawn the fangs of the wolf, and now that he no longer feared, a sudden, unexplainable feeling of sympathy took possession of him. Murphy sputtered and swore, but his victorious companion neither spoke nor moved. There were several distant smokes out to the northward now, evidently the answering signals of different bands of savages, while far away, beneath the shadow of the low bluffs bordering the stream, numerous black, moving dots began to show against the light brown background. Hampton, noticing that Murphy had stopped swearing to gaze, swung forward his field-glasses for a better view.

"They are Indians, right enough," he said, at last. "Here, take a look, Murphy. I could count about 20 in that bunch and they are traveling north."

The older man adjusted the tubes to his eyes and looked long and steadily at the party.

"They seem—to be a-closin' in," he declared, finally, staring around into the other's face, all bravado gone. "There's another lot—bucks, all o' 'em—out west yonder—an' over east a smudge is—just startin'. Looks like—we wus in a pocket—an' thar' might be some—har-raisin' fore long."

"Well, Murphy, you are the older hand at this business. What do you advise doing?"

"Me? Why, push right 'long—while we kin keep under cover. Then—after dark—trust ter bull luck an' make—'nuther dash. It's mostly luck, anyhow."

"You mean we should start now?"

"Better—let the cattle rest—first. An'—if ye ever feed prisoners—I'd like ter eat a bite—mesilf."

They rested there for over two hours, the tired horses contentedly munching the succulent grass of the coulee, their two masters scarcely exchanging a word. Murphy, after satisfying his appetite, rested flat upon his back, one arm flung over his eyes to protect them from the sun.

At last they saddled up and passed down the coulee into the more precipitous depths of the narrow canyon.

Their early advance was slow and cautious, as they never felt certain what hidden enemies might lurk behind the sharp corners of the winding defile, and they kept vigilant eyes upon the serrated skyline. The savages were moving north and so were they.

It was fully three o'clock when they attained to the bank of the Powder, and crouched among the rocks to wait for the shades of night to shroud their further advance. Murphy climbed the bluff for a wider view, bearing Hampton's field-glasses slung across his shoulder, for the latter would not leave him alone with the horses. He returned finally to grunt out that there was nothing special in sight, except a shifting of those smoke signals to points farther north. Then they lay down again, Hampton smoking, Murphy either sleeping or pretending to sleep. And slowly the shadows of another black night swept down and shut them in.

It must have been two hours later when they ventured forth. Silence and loneliness brooded everywhere, not so much as a breath of air stirring the leaves. Murphy continued to lead, the light tread of his horse barely audible, Hampton pressing closely behind, revolver in hand, the two packhorses trailing in the rear.

Midnight, and they pulled up amid the deeper gloom of a great, overhanging bluff, having numerous trees near its summit. There was the glow of a distant fire upon their left, which reddened the sky, and reflected oddly on the edges of a vast cloud-mass rolling up threateningly from the west.

Their horses stood with heads hanging wearily down, their sides rising and falling, and Hampton, rolling stiffly from the saddle, hastily loosened his girth.

"They'll drop under us if we don't give them an hour or two," he said, quietly. "They're both dead beat."

Murphy muttered something, incoherent and garnished with oaths, and the moment he succeeded in releasing the buckle, sank down limp at the very feet of his horse, rolling up into a queer ball. The other stared and took a step nearer.

"What's the matter? Are you sick, Murphy?"

"No—tired—don't want ter see—thet thing agin."

"What thing?"

"Thet green, devlish,—crawlin' face—if ye must know!" And he twisted his long, ape-like arms across his eyes, lying curled up as a dog might.

For a moment Hampton stood gazing down upon him, listening to his incoherent mutterings, his own face grave and sympathetic. Then he moved back and sat down. Suddenly the full conception of what this meant came to his mind—the man had gone mad. The strained cords of that diseased brain had snapped in the presence of imagined terrors, and now all was chaos. The horror of it overwhelmed Hampton; not only did this unexpected denouement leave him utterly hopeless, but what was he to do with the fellow? They were in the very heart of the Indian country,—the country of the savage Sioux. He stared at the curled-up man, now silent and breathing heavily as if asleep. If he only might light a pipe, or boil himself a cup of black coffee! Murphy never stirred; the horses were seemingly too weary to browse. Then Hampton nodded and sank into an uneasy doze.

Do You Realize

that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.

Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.

Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?

We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.

In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.

Why not decide to get a new piano now?

Special Department Accounts

The Plainfield Trust Company begs to announce that from October 1, 1907, 4 per cent. interest will be paid on accounts of $5 or more, without limit, in the Special Department.

The Company has been receiving very good rates on its loans for some time past, and in line with its declared policy of allowing depositors to share liberally in its earnings, has decided to increase the rate of interest paid on Special Department accounts from 3½ per cent. to 4 per cent. Deposits made before October 4th will draw interest from October 1st.

There will be a business session in connection with the sewing circle meeting at the Christian church tonight, by request of the president.

PEDDIE INSTITUTE OPENS.

Entering Class Unusually Large This Year.

The fortieth year at the Peddie Institute at Hightstown has opened with a large attendance, including students from more than a dozen States and Territories. The entering class is unusually large and contains many promising athletes.

A new infirmary, with sick wards and sun parlor, was added to the equipment this summer. All the buildings and grounds are in the best of order and everything indicates a most successful and prosperous year, the managers say.

The faculty changes tend to strengthen the teaching force. Sherman A. Allen, A. M., for three years instructor in the Protestant College at Beirut, Syria, and later at the Bethlehem Preparatory School, will have the departments of French and history. Herbert D. Winters, Cook Academy, will have charge of Greek and history. Ralph E. Harmon, A. B., an honor graduate of the University of Rochester and a teacher of experience, will be assistant in English and mathematics.

Cheaper Lights.

By the terms of a three-year contract for street lighting which the East Orange City Council has authorized with the Public Service Corporation, the city will save $8,271 a year. The Public Service Corporation submitted a bid that showed a reduction of $2 each for the 1,346 Welsbach lamps in use and 25 cents for each of the 261 open flame lamps. The new rates will be effective from May 1 last. The company will continue to pay for the services of an inspector.

Postpone M. O. Lighting.

Contrary to expectations the question of submitting the plans for a municipal electric lighting plant to the voters under the Jones act in November will not be voted upon this fall at Orange. The Common Council has reached this decision because of the stringency in the money and bond market.

STATE NEWS BRIEFS.

Frightened by a younger brother, who played "ghost," the 6-year-old daughter of Charles Ramsey, of Whitings, went into convulsions and is under a doctor's care.

While painting the roof of his house, Thomas Davenport, of Hanover, rolled off and fell on his dog, which was so badly hurt that it died soon after. Mr. Davenport was uninjured.

The Hudson County Liverymen's Association has served notice that on and after October 1 the price for boarding horses will be increased from $25 to $30 a month. The increased cost of feed is the reason advanced.

Ten-year-old Philip Goldberg threw a stone through a store window in Atlantic City a few yards ahead of Mayor Stoy Monday, and then proudly strutted along with the chief executive of the city until he was handed over to a policeman.

Their names engraved on heart-shaped cards hidden among the petals of an American Beauty rose presented to each guest, was the novel manner in which Miss Margaret Seymour Haines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Haines, of Burlington, and Ambrose Gilmore Warren, of Philadelphia, announced their engagement to a party of friends.

TO CONVENE OCTOBER 25-26.

State Federation of Women's Clubs Meets at Orange.

The dates for the fall meeting of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs have been announced as Friday and Saturday, October 25 and 26, in the clubhouse of the Woman's Club, of Orange.

The federation will be entertained by that organization, and plans for the program, music and speakers will be perfected at the opening meeting of the Woman's Club Wednesday afternoon, October 2.

Black Patti Will Sing.

Mme. M. H. Demby, mezzo-soprano of new England, will appear at Reform Hall tonight, under the auspices of the Ebenezer Baptist church. She is considered the black Patti of her race. Refreshments will be served after the entertainment.

Justice Von Minden's Court.

James L. Perry has sued Middleton Watson Payne, of Samptown, on contract. The demand is for $100. The summons is returnable before Justice Von Minden, of New Market, next Tuesday.

Send Boy to Hospital.

Harry Stull, the 12-year-old runaway bound boy picked up by the police Monday night, was sent to the hospital yesterday to have cuts and bruises on his feet attended to.

Miss Ida Yerkes, daughter of Mrs. D. J. Yerges, of Grove street, has spent this week in Belmar with friends.

New York society notes report that Mr. and Mrs. Robert Olyphant and their daughter, Miss Sophie Vernon Olyphant, parents and sister of Mrs. William de la Roche Anderson, of this place, who are now in Scotland, will leave for New York next week.

A district meeting of Red Men will be held in the rooms of Wetumpkah Lodge, Improved Order Red Men, on Friday night, October 4. It will be followed by a social and refreshments.

—The Union County Board of Freeholders will hold a regular meeting at Elizabeth on Thursday, October 3.

THIS SPLENDID FALL MILLINERY SHOW.

Did you come to our millinery opening last week? Is so we can feel sure your friends will also come to see these beautiful hats—for there was nothing but praise heard on all sides—and no wonder, the praise was well merited. Miss Strohuber worked with unbounded energy—working by day—dreaming at nights of nothing but hats, and Miss Strohuber has talent recognized by leading milliners in New York. Such energy by so high class a milliner in not only bringing out the newest, but at a moderate price, was bound to result in winning your approval. We believe those who visited this millinery shop will advertise Tepper hats this fall. New hats are being turned out every day, and you will enjoy to visit here though many of the first lot are gone, there are others in work just as pretty to take their place.

BROKE CULVERTS.

Digging Machine Does Damage in in Tearing Open Trenches.

The big ditch digger used by Contractor E. Foster Callahan in the sanitary sewer extension work, smashed a culvert and went out of business temporarily at Stelle and Central avenues yesterday. It was thought at first that the digger was badly damaged, but it is built to withstand that sort of thing, and came through the affair in good order. The man running it said he didn't see the culvert.

Another culvert at South and Leland avenues was broken by the machine a day or two ago, and a flush-tank head on Central avenue was smashed. The contractor makes good all such damages.

Y. M. C. A. Used as Dance Hall.

The Young Men's Christian Association room at New Brunswick, which since the building has been built has been devoted only to religious features, has now been rented for a dancing hall, and much local criticism has been voiced against the directors for allowing the hall to be used for such a purpose. The Young Men's Christian Association, through lack of financial support, was obliged to close its doors last spring.

CHAPTER XXX.

Alone with the Insane.

Beneath the shade of uplifted arms Murphy's eyes remained unclosed. Whatever terrors may have dominated that diseased brain, the one purpose of revenge and escape never deserted it. With patient cunning he could plan and wait, scheme and execute. He was all animal now, dreaming only of how to tear and kill.

He was many minutes thoroughly satisfying himself that Hampton actually slept. His every movement was slow, crafty, cowardly, the savage in his perverted nature becoming more and more manifest. It was more beast than man that finally crept forward on all-fours, the eyes gleaming cruel as a cat's in the night. Within a yard of the peacefully slumbering man he rose up, crouching on his toes and bending stealthily forward, possibly feeling the close proximity of that horrible presence. Then the maniac took one more stealthy, slouching step nearer, and flung himself at the exposed throat, uttering a fierce snarl as his fingers clutched the soft flesh. Hampton awoke, gasping and choking, to find those mad eyes glaring into his own, those murderous hands throttling him with the strength of madness.

There Was a Sudden Glint in the Faint Starlight as He Struck the Maniac.

At first the stupefied, half-awakened man struggled as if in delirium, scarcely realizing the danger. He was aware of suffering, of horror, of suffocation. Then the brain flashed into life, and he grappled fiercely with his dread antagonist. Murphy snapped like a mad dog, his lips snarling curses; but Hampton fought silently, desperately, his brain clearing as he succeeded in wrenching those claws from his lacerated throat, and forced his way up on to one knee. He worked his way, inch by inch, to his feet, his slender figure rigid as steel and closed in upon the other, but Murphy writhed out of his grasp, as a snake might. The younger man realized now to the full his peril, and his hand slipped down to the gun upon his hip. There was a sudden glint in the faint starlight as he struck, and the stunned maniac went down quivering, and lay motionless on the hard ground. With the quick decision of one long accustomed to meet emergencies, Hampton unbuckled the lariat from one of the led animals and bound Murphy's hands and limbs securely.

As he worked he thought rapidly. He comprehended the extreme desperation of their present situation. While the revolver blow might possibly restore Murphy to a degree of sanity, it was far more probable that he would awaken violent. Yet he could not deliberately leave this man to meet a fate of horror in the wilderness. That which would have been quickly decided had he been alone became a most serious problem when considered in connection with the insane, helpless scout. Then, there were the dispatches! They must be of vital importance to have required the sending of Murphy forth on so dangerous a ride; other lives, ay, the result of the entire campaign might depend upon their early delivery. Hampton had been a soldier, the spirit of the service was still with him, and that thought brought him to final decision. Unless they were halted by Sioux bullets, they would push on toward the Big Horn and Custer should have the papers.

He knelt down beside Murphy, unbuckled the leather dispatch bag, and rebuckled it across his own shoulder. Then he set to work to revive the prostrate man. The eyes, when opened, stared up at him, wild and glaring; the ugly face bore the expression of abject fear. The man was no longer violent; he had become a child, frightened at the dark.

Securely strapping Murphy to his saddle and packing all their remaining store of provisions upon one horse, leaving the other to follow or remain behind as it pleased, he advanced directly into the hills, steering by aid of the stars, his left hand ever on Murphy's bridle rein, his low voice of consolation seeking to calm the other's wild fancies and to curb his violent speech.

At dawn they were in a narrow gorge among the hills, a dark and gloomy hole, yet a peculiarly safe spot in which to hide, having steep, rocky ledges on either side, with sufficient grass for the horses. Leaving Murphy bound, Hampton clambered up the front of the rock to where he was able to look out. All was silent and his heart sank as he surveyed the brown sterile hills stretching to the horizon, having merely narrow gulches of rock and sand between, the sheer nakedness of the picture unrelieved by green shrub or any living thing. Then, almost despairing, he slid back, stretched himself out amid the soft grass, and sank into the slumber of exhaustion, his conscious memory the incoherent babbling of his insane companion.

He awoke shortly after noon, feeling refreshed and renewed in both body and mind. Murphy was sleeping when he first turned to look at him, but he awoke in season to be fed, and accepted the proffered food with all the apparent delight of a child. While he rested, their remaining pack-animal had strayed, and Hampton was compelled to go on with only the two horses, strapping the depleted store of provisions behind his own saddle. Then he carefully hoisted Murphy into place and bound his feet beneath the animal's belly. Then he resumed the journey down one of those sand-strewn depressions pointing toward the Rosebud, pressing the refreshed ponies into a canter, confident now that their greatest measure of safety lay in audacity.

It was already becoming dusk when they swept down into a little nest of green trees and grass. It appeared so suddenly and was such an unexpected oasis amid that surrounding wilderness, that Hampton gave vent to a sudden exclamation of delight. But that was all. Instantly he perceived numerous dark forms leaping from out the shrubbery, and he wheeled his horses to the left, lashing them into a rapid run. It was all over in a moment—a sputtering of rifles, a wild medley of cries, a glimpse of savage figures, and the two were tearing down the rocks, the din of pursuit away behind them. The band were evidently all on foot, yet Hampton continued to press his mount at a swift pace, taking turn after turn about the sharp hills, confident that the hard earth would leave no trace of their passage.

Then suddenly the horse he rode sank like a log, but his tight grip upon the rein of the other landed him on his feet. A stray Sioux bullet had found its mark, but the gallant animal had struggled on until it dropped lifeless; and the brave man it had borne so long and so well bent down and stroked tenderly the unconscious head. Then he shifted the provisions to the back of the other horse, grasped the loose rein once more in his left hand, and started forward on foot.

CHAPTER XXXI.

On the Little Big Horn.

N troop, guarding much to their emphatically expressed disgust, the more slowly moving pack-train, were following Custer's advancing column of horsemen down the right bank of the Little Big Horn. The troopers, carbines at knee, sitting erect in their saddles, their faces browned by the hot winds of the plains, were riding steadily northward. Beside them, mounted upon a rangy chestnut, Brant kept his watchful eyes on those scattered flankers dotting the summit of the near-by bluff. Suddenly one of these waved his hand eagerly, and the lieutenant went dashing up the sharp ascent.

"What is it, now, Lane?"

"Somethin' movin' out yonder, sir," and the trooper pointed into the southeast. "They're down in a coulee now, I reckon; but will be up on a ridge agin in a minute. I got sight of 'em twice afore I waved."

The officer gazed earnestly in the direction indicated, and was almost immediately rewarded by the glimpse of some indistinct, dark figures dimly showing against the lighter background of sky.

"White men," he announced, shortly. "Come with me."

At a brisk trot they rode out, the trooper lagging a pace to the rear, the watchful eyes of both men sweeping suspiciously across the prairie. The two parties met suddenly upon the summit of a sharp ridge and Brant drew in his horse with an exclamation of astonishment. It was a pathetic spectacle he stared at—a horse scarcely able to stagger forward; on his back, with feet strapped securely beneath and hands bound to the high pommel, the lips grinning ferociously, perched a misshapen creature clothed as a man. Beside these, hatless, his shoes barely holding together, a man of slender figure and sunburnt face held the bridle-rein. An instant they gazed at each other, the young officer's eyes filled with sympathetic horror, the other staring apathetically at his rescuer.

"My God! Can this be you, Hampton? What does it mean? Why are you here?"

Hampton, leaning against the trembling horse to keep erect, slowly lifted his hand in a semblance of military salute. "Dispatches from Cheyenne. This is Murphy—went crazy out yonder. For God's sake—water, food!"

"Your canteen, Lane!" exclaimed Brant. "Now hold this cup," and he dashed into it a liberal supply of brandy from a pocket-flask. "Drink that all down, Hampton."

The man did mechanically as he was ordered, his hand never relaxing its grasp of the rein. Then a gleam of reawakened intelligence appeared in his eyes; he glanced up into the leering countenance of Murphy, and then back at those others. "Give me another for him."

Brant handed to him the filled cup, noting as he did so the strange steadiness of the hand which accepted it. Hampton lifted the tin to the figure in the saddle.

"Drink it," he commanded, curtly, "every drop!"

For an instant the maniac glared back at him sullenly; then he appeared to shrink in terror, and drank swiftly.

"We can make the rest of the way now," Hampton announced, quietly. "Lord, but this has been a trip!"

Lane dismounted at Brant's order and assisted Hampton to climb into the vacated saddle. Then the trooper grasped the rein of Murphy's horse, and the little party started toward where the pack-train was hidden in the valley.

"Is Custer here?" said Hampton.

"No; that is, not with my party. We are guarding the pack-train. The others are ahead, and Custer, with five troops, has moved to the right. He is somewhere among those ridges back of the bluff."

The man turned and looked where the officer pointed, shading his eyes with his hand.

"Can you give me a fresh horse, a

"That Man Could Tell, But He Has Gone Mad."

bite to eat, and a cup of coffee, down there?" he asked, anxiously. "You see I've got to go on."

"Go on? Good God! man, do you realize what you are saying? Why, you can hardly sit the saddle! You carry dispatches, you say? Well, there are plenty of good men in my troop who will volunteer to take them on. You need rest."

"Not much," said Hampton. "I'm fit enough, or shall be as soon as I get food. Good Lord, boy, I am not done up yet, by a long way! It's the cursed loneliness out yonder," he swept his hand toward the horizon, "and the having to care for him that has broken my heart. He went that way clear back on the Powder, and it's been a fight between us ever since. I'll be all right now if you lads will only look after him. This is going to reach Custer, and I'll take it!" He flung back his ragged coat, his hand on the dispatch-bag. "I've earned the right."

Brant reached forth his hand cordially. "That's true; you have. What's more, if you're able to make the trip, there is no one here who will attempt to stop you. But now tell me how this thing happened. I want to know the story before we get in."

For a moment Hampton remained silent, his thoughtful gaze on the near-by videttes, his hands leaning heavily upon the saddle pommel. Perhaps he did not remember clearly; possibly he could not instantly decide just how much of that story to tell. Brant suspected this last to be his difficulty, and he spoke impulsively.

"Hampton, there has been trouble and misunderstanding between us, but that's all past and gone now. I sincerely believe in your purpose of right, and I ask you to trust me. Either of us would give his life if need were, to be of real service to a little girl back yonder in the hills. I don't know what you are to her; I don't ask. I know she has every confidence in you, and that is enough. Now, I want to do what is right with both of you, and if you have a word to say to me regarding this matter, I'll treat it confidentially. This trip with Murphy has some bearing upon Naida Gillis, has it not?"

"Yes."

"Will you tell me the story?"

The thoughtful gray eyes looked at him long and searchingly. "Brant, do you love that girl?"

Just as unwaveringly the blue eyes returned the look. "I do. I have asked her to become my wife."

"And her answer?"

UNIQUE DOMESTIC IDEA

Berkeley Heights Man Builds Bungalow as Home for His Six Sons.

LIVE VILLAGE GOSSIP

Mrs. Creveling Buys the Old Walters Place—Mr. McCutcheon Builds.

William Jeffery has begun building a separate bungalow to suitably accommodate his six sons. The boys will occupy the new bungalow for sleeping, study and amusement quarters, and visit their parents evenings upon invitation, and the parents will likewise visit the boys. The entire family will, however, eat together in the main bungalow. This arrangement is calculated to reduce Mrs. Jeffery's arduous duties and give the boys a keen sense of independence and responsibility. They will take entire charge of their quarters. This is a new and novel plan and should recommend itself to parents all over the country. The simple life for parents as well as for the children.

The new cement block building is being built by George Wahl, and is now ready for the roof. It will be a handsome structure when completed, and will be fitted up with new desks and equipment.

The roads of the township were never in better condition, many improvements having been made this year by the township committee and next year the work will be extended.

Mrs. Albertina Creveling has bought a large portion of the old Walters place on the Union Village road from William Jeffery, and will begin remodelling the old house by building a large, costly and artistic addition at once, thereby making the place commodious and beautiful. Mr. and Mrs. Creveling have traveled in Europe with their two daughters for many years, but found health and rest at Berkeley. They will make a splendid acquisition.

It is rumored that a party of artists and literary people are going to build high-class bungalows and cottages at Berkeley Heights.

Residents of Berkeley Heights expect that the Lackawanna railroad will give them a ticket agent next spring.

William Jeffery visted the school recently to see the scholars and the new books which were installed this year. He expressed great satisfaction, and complimented the principal, William Woodruff, on his excellent showing.

Frank C. Shaffer, who bought the Scudder mansion from William Jeffery, is a public spirited young man, and is interesting himself keenly in local improvements. He is the president of the Township Improvement Society, and is the standard bearer for improvements generally. He was presented with a new son the other day, and immediately named it Kenneth Berkeley Shaffer. It is to be hoped that the youthful Shaffer will reflect some of his father's abilities as a fine banjoist and musician and all round good fellow.

Robert G. Rogers is busy making another large stock of cement blocks for an active market.

Work on the new town hall will be begun soon.

William Jeffery, Jr., is now taking a course in the Plainfield Technical Institute, under A. S. Herr.

The summer camp has concluded its second season successfully and arrangements will be made to again double its capacity. Many prominent people were camp guests this summer, including Mrs. Richard Hovey, the widow of the late Richard Hovey, a famous literary genius. Mrs. Hovey, with her son, an army officer of distinction, and the crack rifle shot of the United States Army, with the Misses Skene and Coster, of New York; Mrs. Craig, a well known New York literary artist, and Robert Walters, the famous English artist, will remain at the camp till snow flies. Berkeley Heights is indeed becoming a place for fashionable people.

The next improvement that the improvement society of the township will take will be city water supply.

The saw mill will be opened shortly by William H. Rogers.

William Jeffery is going to address the people of Midland township, Bergen county, to get improvements. He will also address the people of Berkeley Heights on live issues.

Mr. McCutcheon, of Brooklyn, has ordered a bungalow to be built, same to be ready by next summer. This will be built according to the pleasing high class restrictions placed upon the property by William Jeffery, precluding the possibility of cheap improvements.

No vacant houses at Berkeley Heights except one, and that is for sale only.

Mrs. C. E. Gulick returned the other day after an absence of six weeks with friends in Scranton, Pa.

Rudolph Shaffer, the grandfather of Kenneth Berkeley Shaffer, with Mr. Higgins, have gone to Lake Hopatcong for a short stay.

Mrs. William Jeffery will return home on September 28.

Eugene Farwell, who held disputed possession of the Browning farm, is now satisfied by having received a lease in writing from the owner of the property. Prompter delivery of the lease would have saved three law suits and much expense to Mr. Farwell and to Mr. Smith, who disputed Farwell's possession. All is well that ends well.

The Burgmiller family have sold a plot of twelve acres to a New York party, who will build a fine house.

Bolton Hall, who is associated with William Jeffery in the Berkeley Heights and Plainfield properties, is staying at Bar Harbor, Me.

THE SOLAR SYSTEM.

Whence It Comes and Whither It Goes No One Knows.

The solar system is well enough when picturesquely expounded, but when the solar system becomes a mere atom traveling some 400,000,000 of miles per annum toward some inconceivable goal, and when millions of similar systems have to be contemplated, all pursuing some similar course, the lay imagination is completely baffled.

Nor is it easy to believe that the most eager astronomer is not sometimes perplexed and dismayed by the vistas opened up before him. For everything he learns merely opens up vaster problems, and when he has extended his vision to stars from which light would take 2,000 years to reach this earth he is no nearer finality than the child who thinks the sky but a spectacle of revolving lights.

We are told that the heavens as we see them are occupied by two great streams of stars moving in opposite directions. That suggests at least two centres of revolution at some unimaginable distance and adds to our aching embarrassment. We ask, Whence? Whither? And with all our science there is no answer.—London Times.

As It Was Spoken at Home.

There is a certain old gentlman who partakes of the qualities of the diamond as it is mined, but whose lack of "polish" is a sad trial to his eldest daughter. The old gentleman, as he expresses it, "gets thar with both feet when some dude investors come pirutin' round the range." Not long ago the family were gather in the library, one of the windows of which was open.

"That air—" the father begon, but was quickly interrupted.

"Father, dear, don't say 'that aid' —say 'that there,'" the daughter admonished.

"Well, this ear—" he again attempted, but was quickly brought to a halt.

"Nor 'this 'ere,' 'this here' is correct," he was told.

The old gentleman rose with an angry snort. "Look here, Mary," he said, with asperity. "Of course, I know you have been to school and all that, but I reckon I know what I want to say, an' I'm going to say it. I believe I feel a cold in this ear from that air, and I'm going to shut the window!'"—Harper's Weekly.

GLEANINGS.

Ten million people have opened accounts with the Postoffice Savings Bank of England.

Nine or ten cups of coffee are drunk daily by the average Arab without apparently doing him any harm.

In proportion to the number of its population, Switzerland consumes more chocolate than any other country.

The Indian government is endeavoring to popularize tours to the Himalayas. The number of tourists is increasing perceptibly every year.

Hereafter all fish sold in Constantinople must be kept in shops paved with marble (which is cheap there) or with plaques of so called Malta stone.

The most conservative official estimate of the opium smoking population in China is 100,000,00—only 16,000,000 more than the entire population of the United States. Many officials place the list at 150,000,000.

BITS OF WISDOM.

Sowing the seed of hate produces the fruit of destruction.

He who weds and runs away no more should seek a wedding day.

The first scar on the pure page of charity is the last hope of happiness.

The political situation will warm up in increased ratio as the atmosphere grows cooler.

Beware of your most intimate financial friends.

Small people are great—in their own estimation.

Many who become suddenly rich become suddenly poor.

Cheating the cheater is a satisfaction even to an honest character.

When vice is elevated at the expense of virtue the community is on the down grade to destruction.—Baltimore American.

His Compliment.

A few weeks back a wedding breakfast was given by a substantial farmer blessed with five daughters, the eldest of whom was a bride. A neighbor, a young farmer, who was honored with an invitation, thinking no doubt that he ought to say something complimentary upon the event, addressed the bridegroom thus:

"Well, you have got the pick of the batch."

The faces of the four unmarried ones were a study.'—London Graphic.

SHE'S HERE, BUT—

You come, a symphony of grace
On tiptoe airy, light,
All care you scatter into space
And make the world more bright
About this grand
Old breezy strand
As swift the days take flight.

Spell-bound on rapture's golden wings
To fairyland away
We soar, although our spirit sings:
"You're here, you're here to-day,
Beside the sea
That rolls in glee,
You're here, but will you stay?"

Oh, will you sweetly linger long
And make our fancies whirl
Unto the music of your song
Whose every note's a pearl
Which matched can't be
In any sea,
Oh, summer servant girl!
—R. K. Munkittrick, in Puck.

SIGNS.

"Has she ever shown any sign as to whether she cares for you or not?"
"She's making it now, I think."

A Difference.

She promised to love and obey,
But ere a month had flown
Her husband didn't even dare
To call his soul his own.
—Chicago Daily News.

Trick of the Trade.

"How in the world did you make such a success in this town?" asked the first beauty doctor. "Why, I came here two years ago and couldn't make my salt."

"Oh, you didn't go about it the same way that I did," replied the second beauty doctor with a wink.

"How was that?"

"Why, as soon as I arrived I told all the girls in town that they were too pretty to need a beauty doctor and then started for the train. Then they held me in town by force."—Chicago Daily News.

Hopeless Case.

"This," said the asylum attendant, pointing to the patient in a padded cell who was dodging back and forth, "is what we consider a hopeless case."

"What's the trouble with him?" inquired the visitor.

"He thinks he is continually dodging automobiles and roller skates."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

It Wasn't Necessary.

"Well," said the doctor, "I'm glad to see that you're able to be up and that you look so well, but really you should have obeyed my instructions. I told you to remain in bed for three days."

"Oh, that wasn't necessary. The baby upset the medicine you left, so I only got one dose of it."—Chicago Record-Herald.

FALL OPENING

We throw our doors wide open and welcome you to inspect our line of Men's and Young Men's Suits and Overcoats for the Fall of 1907.

WE WILL HOLD AND START OUR FORMAL FALL OPENING

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 27th, 9 A. M.

A Great Sale of Suits and Overcoats.

$165,000 WORTH OF MEN'S & BOYS' CLOTHING

The good news will travel fast. You will never guess the price by the appearance of these garments. It is very doubtful if there ever has been a sale like it—months and months we needed to prepare for this great Fall Opening Sale—carload after carload we received, consisting of the best clothing which can be produced. They are all hand-tailored; fresh, new, stylish garments. Years ago the merchant tailors monopolized the production of stylish garments, but the time is past, our garments are not only equal to any merchant tailor workmanship, but better in every instance, besides the saving of $5, $10 and $15 on each suit, overcoat or raincoat—and your object should be to come early Friday morning and take advtantage of this GREAT SAVING SALE. Kings are known all over the country. With every purchase you receive our own guarantee—each item mentioned below will convince you that a visit to our store will greatly benefit your pocketbook.

MEN'S SUITS.

LOT 1.

LOT 2.

$9.80 During this special or formal opening we are holding, we want you to get acquainted with the well-known H. & M. K. brand suits, strictly hand-tailored, hand felt collar, French haircloth padded shoulders, pattern in the newest shades in browns, checks, stripes; in fact this garment would easily bring $19.00. Our price for Friday and Saturday $9.80

LOT 3.

$12.65 This suit looks well, made well, fits well and wears well—made in English and Domestic Cheviots and Worsteds, black and blue unfinished Cheviots, single or double breasted, in fact in all the latest patterns of strictly all wool fabrics, and made to fit all sizes of men; worth $25.00; for Friday and Saturday $12.65

LOT 4.

$14.75 These are the best suits you ever saw, and you can put it down as a fact that better clothes, more stylish, more perfectly tailored never came from the hands of a tailor. These suits are in a number of very smart models, and the patterns are varied enough to suit every taste—grays, browns, tans; in stripes, plaids and checks, worth $34.00; for this sale $14.75

RAINCOATS FOR MEN.

$7.90 For Friday and Saturday. We can give you a raincoat in either smooth or rough cloth with a perfect fit about the shoulders and collars, in any length and any pattern you desire. The quality of the goods and waterproofing is greatly important in such garment that is intended to look well even when soaking wet. Our price for this raincoat $7.90

TOP COATS FOR MEN.

$8.25 You won't see any snappier, smarter clothes than our H. & M. K. top coats, nor any better all-wool fabrics, best tailoring, perfect style, made in plain black, oxfords or tan colors, silk or serge lined, hand-made buttonholes, hand-padded shoulders to keep shape forever; for men who take no small pride in "right style" of their apparel. To such men these top coats are certainly a "must be;" for Friday and Saturday.... $8.25

MEN'S TROUSERS.

31 to 50 waist—29 to 37 inseam.

$1.45 for cassimere trousers, worth $2.60.
1.85 for cheviot, plain or stripe trousers, worth $3.50.
2.15 for stylish worsted trousers, worth $4.00.
2.75 for imported worsted trousers, worth $5.50.
3.50 for strictly hand tailored trousers, worth $6.50.

BOYS' LONG PANTS SUITS.

$4.85 for black cheviot suits, worth $8.00.
6.25 for fancy cheviot suits, worth $11.50.
7.50 for elegant worsted suits, single or double breasted, worth $14.00.
8.90 for suits strictly hand tailored, worth $16.00.
9.80 for the latest pattern silk lined suits, worth $20.00.

BOYS' SHORT PANTS SUITS.

6 to 16 Years.

$1.85 for black or dark mixed suits, worth $3.00.
2.45 for Tedo Bear suit; coat, pants and vest, worth $4.50.
3.25 for all wool Knickerbocker suits, worth $6.00.
4.15 for heavy serge or Scotch cheviot suits, worth $7.50.

We have been asked many time why we are always so busy—the only reason is this—we try to please everybody, sell well made clothing to the buying public cheaper, and better grade than other merchants are buying for. As a result we have no dull days between the first of January and the thirty-first of December.

In order that out-of-town customers may participate in this sale, we will pay railroad fare—present your return ticket at cashier's desk.

Greater Reductions to Close Out.

Every instrument must and will be sold, and the buyers will get the bargain of a lifetime.

Sale Positively Ends Saturday Night.

Easy Terms. Open Evenings.

Today and Saturday are the last days of this great sale.

For every buyer today and tomorrow I guarantee the bargain of a lifetime.

Every instrument will and must be sold, price consideration will be lost sight of to a still greater extent.

The man or women who desires to purchase a piano and does not take advantage of this sale, at least to investigate, is making a great mistake.

To all those who have been thinking over this matter of purchasing a piano, I would say, now is the "hurry-up" time.

Don't delay a moment. Call today. See the prices and let me tell you about the terms.

FINE MAKES AND STYLES LEFT.

We have several of the very finest uprights in the most elaborate and handsome case designs, which I will sell at prices that will astonish you.

One $600 Golden oak, handsomely carved case design, Cabinet Grand Upright, sale price $387.

Cash or payments $10 monthly.

Two $375 French Burl Walnut uprights, sale prices $197 and $247.

Three $350 Cabinet Grand uprights, sale prices $157 to $173.

Used uprights, square pianos and organs, at almost your own prices and terms. Come and make an offer on these square pianos.

OTHER BARGAINS.

It is impossible to tell you all about these beautiful pianos. Come and see them for yourself, examine critically. Bring your family, your friends, but whatever else you do,

COME TO THIS SALE BEFORE IT CLOSES.

Many homes have been made musical, many children and entire families are rejoicing over this "greatest piano event Plainfield has ever known," because it has made it possible for them to secure an instrument at these almost cut-in-half prices and on the easiest kind of terms.

STOCK COMPRISES BEST MAKES.

At no time in our long business career have we been in a position to offer such a grand array of good pianos and organs and at such remarkable price reductions. The stock consists of such well-known makes as Hallet & Davis, Kimball, Conway, Bowen, Wellman, and numerous others.

STOCK GOING RAPIDLY.

When this stock is sold, and they are going rapidly, no more can ever be furnished at these factory price figures. It will be your last chance to get a piano at wholesale cost and on easy payments.

Lest you forget we say again, this sale positively closes Saturday night at 10 o'clock.

At the age of 90 Sir Joseph Hooker, the eminent English botanist, is pursuing his researches with all the ardor of youth. He is endeavoring, he say, to overtake arrears of work extending over many years.

J. Pierpont Morgan belongs to four times as many clubs as does the King of England. His royal highness is a member of twelve, while Mr. Morgan has his name on the lists of at least fifty. Some of the clubs of which he is a member he has never visited, but once a member he never resigns.

Paderewski has long been the most expensive of pianists, but he has once more raised his prices. At his last London concert every ticket cost a guinea. Every seat was taken, and the net profit for the two hours of playing was $5,000. That is twice as much as Caruso gets for singing in a four hour opera.

Marvin Hughitt, president of the Chicago and Northwestern, learned telegraphy when a boy and started on one of the roads now part of the Illinois Central. NUGGETS.

Genius is inspiration. Talent is perspiration.

Paint stains on floors may be removed by pouring a little drop of benzine on them, letting it dry and then rubbing the stain with emery paper or powdered pumice stone on a damp cloth.

Tastes in Tobacco.

There's no accounting for tastes. Take tobacco, for instance.

The man who smokes a pipe wants to commit murder if he gets on the back platform of a car and finds a callow youth smoking a ready made cigarette. He sniffs disdainfully every time the offensive odor gets into his nostrils, and the youth's features bear a look of disgust if he gets a whiff of what he considers an evil smelling pipe.

The cigar smoker may smoke both pipe and cigarettes, but usually he abhors both.

The man who smokes Havanas will throw away a domestic after a couple of puffs, provided the friend woh gave it to him is out of sight.

The cigar smoker will scorn a stogie.

The confirmed smoker of stogies doesn't give a rap about a "good" cigar. The smoker of "good" cigars will say it is because his taste has degenerated from smoking an inferior grade of tobacco.

And then again there is the man who will smoke any old thing that will burn.—Milwaukee Free Press.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

There was a time when John Brown was supposed to be the pivotal head of the Brown family, but in these later days he has given place to the youthful scion of the house of Brown—Buster by name, Buster Brown, and who doesn't know him—comes to us in thatric form on Wednesday afternoon and night October 2, when the stage of the New Plainfield theatre will be given over to an evening of joyous mirth, accentuated by tuneful members and the latest catchy songs. Nor is this all, for the bevy of charming girls going to make up Buster's retinue will be seen in a number of dances and marches, among the latter being a most enjoyable one.

Fred Rankin and A. Baldwin Sloane have a large number of successful comic operas and musical comedies and their names are at the head of this particular class of composers, but never did their hopes achieve such a splendid realization as in the success that has so far attended their latest opera, "The Gingerbread Man," which will be given at the New Plainfield theatre September 28.

The announcement of a revival of "Peaceful Valley," the delightful idyl in which the late Sol Smith Russell, quaint and lovable actor, scored his greatest triumph, has created widespread interest and attention throughout the county and the ambitious efforts of the management have already met with popular approval wherever the play has been presented. The play is elaborately mounted and the atmosphere of the quiet and peaceful valley in which the action takes place is illusively suggested. It will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre September 27.

For a performance of rare enjoyment—one that theatre-goers will enjoy with more than ordinary pleasure—attention is called to the presentation here at the New Plainfield theatre, September 30 of the brilliant comedy, "The Rivals," with Joseph Jefferson and William W. Jefferson in their clever characterizations of Sir Lucius O'Trigger and Bob Acres. They are Masters of comedy, and the Jeffersons' name and fame are linked inseparably with "The Rivals." A great performance may be looked for. Among the supporting cast may be mentioned Theodore Hamilton, Leopold Lane, Richard Lyle, Roger Burnham, Blanche Bender, Roberta Brennan and Loretta Wells.

STATE LINES.

Nevada seems destined to forge to the rst place in the production of precious metals.

Colorado, Montana and Utah have according to recent returns, shown a decided decline in the production of precious metals.

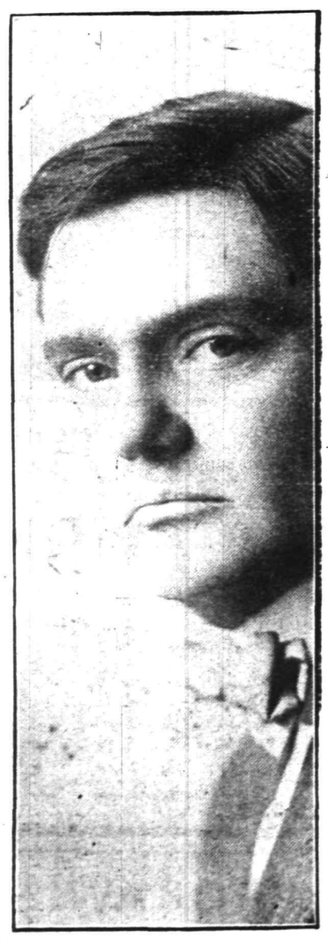
A macadamized road between St. Louis and Kansas City will be completed within two years. Construction work will be begun next spring. The Missouri legislature appropriated $500,000 for the purpose at its last session. The road will be sixty feet wide. On its completion another, extending from north to south through the State, will be undertaken.

When Life Was Cheap.

The 223 capital offenses which the old English law recognized as punishable by death did not keep down crime, and with the abolition of the of the death penalty for all crimes but murder crime in England, as well as everywhere else all over the world where the death penalty has been modified, lessened markedly. A man's life was not very valuable in those days. If he scratched his name on Westminster bridge; if he wore a wig or false mustache or other diskuise on a public road; if he stole property worth more than ve shillings; if he had been transported for crime and had returned a day ahead of the expiration of his punishment; if he wrote a threatening letter; if he stole a hide from a tanner's; far any and all of these things, and for 200 more than these, he was hanged by the neck until he was dead.—Exchange.

Lincoln and Stanton.

There was a marked contrast between Lincoln's manner, which was always pleasant and even genial, and that of Stanton. The latter's stern, spectacled visage commanded instant respect and in many cases inspired fear. In receiving visitors, and they were legion, Stanton seldom or never sat down, but stood before a high desk as the crowd passed before him and one by one presented their requests or complaints, which were rapidly disposed of. He was haughty, severe, domineering and often rude. When I think of him in the daily routine of his public audiences the characterization of Napoleon by Charles Phillips, the Irish orator, comes to mind, "Grand, gloomy and peculiar."—David Homer Bates in Century.



Jos. Jefferson, as Sir Lucius O'Trigger, in "The Rivals," at the New Plainfield Theatre September 30.

OPENING OF THE Y.W.C.A.

Reception Marks the Actual Start of the Girl's Organization.

VISITORS NUMBER 300

Classes to Start Next Week—Miss Amy Pryor Tapping Secretary, Miss Margaret Mosher, Physical Director.

The Young Women's Christian Association was formally opened yesterday, and to mark its beginning a reception was held. The doors of its spacious and comfortable home on East Second street, near Watchung avenue, were thrown open to visitors at 4 o'clock. From then until 10 o'clock in the evening girls and women interested in the association filled the rooms. The attendance was at least 300.

The members and visitors were welcomed by a reception committee, of which Mrs. E. T. Barrows was chairman. Assisting her were Mrs. Frederic T. Andrews, Mrs. Frederick G. Mead and Mrs. Percy Stewart.

Visitors were shown all through the building, the rooms of which were prettily decorated with flowers. On the first floor are the assembly room, library and dining room, with which is combined the office. Two large class rooms are on the second floor. On the third floor are rooms for transient lodgers. There are accommodations for five.

The barn on the property is being converted into a roomy gymnasium, but work on it was still in such a chaotic state that it could not be shown to the visitors. The gymnasium will be completed next week.

In the afternoon tea was served, and in the evening lemonade and cake. At the table were Mrs. E. T. Barrows and Mrs. F. H. Andrews, assisted by Miss Margaret Vandeventer and Miss Florence Stewart.

Songs by Miss Grace Carroll, accompanied by Miss Alice Carroll, were a feature of the evening.

The rooms are attractively furnished. The association already has a memberrship of 600, and the end of the enrollment has not been reached. It is hoped to make the membership 1,000, and point the way to the Y. M. C. A., which has been aiming at that figure for years. The educational classes, which will give the members opportunities to study millinery, embroidery, dressmaking, cooking, English, French, German and the Bible, will start next week. So will the gymnasium classes.

The secretary is Miss Amy Pryor Tapping, a young woman thoroughly fitted and trained for the work. She came here from Utica, N. Y., where she was engaged in the same field. She circled among the girls at the reception, enlarging the friendships she has been rapidly forming.

The physical department will be under the charge of Miss Margaret Mosher, of Oberlin, O. She has been engaged in the same work at Oberlin. The gymnasium classes have already been formed, and are ready to begin the cultivation of muscle and athletic records as soon as the barn has been changed to its new state. The members will have the use of the Y. M. C. A. swimming pool one morning a week.

PROTESTS AGAINST POSTERS.

Holy Name Society Places Ban on Indecent Lithographs.

Members of the Holy Name Society of St. Bridget's church, of Jersey City, have complained to the local police that indecent theatrical lithographs were posted on the billboards of the town. Billposters continued to decorate fences and billboards with offensive posters, and the officers of the society caused the following announcement, printed on strips of paper, to be pasted over many of the objectionable bills:

"We have protested against the exhibition of such vile pictures until our patience has almost been exhausted."

The police saw the announcement and Chief Frank Monahan got busy. He notified the theatrical billposter that henceforth he will be obliged to submit lithographs to him for his censorship before the bills can be posted in public places.

"My men will promptly suppress all indecent exhibitions and posters," said the chief.

Mayor Mark M. Fagan is a member of St. Bridget's church.

Seniors Will Hold a Picnic.

The members of the senior class of the Plainfield High School will hold a picnic on the Watchung Mountains tomorrow. The party will be chaperoned by Principal and Mrs. Ira W. Travell and Lindsey Best. The girls of the class will provide the refreshments.

—Neuman Bros. are offering a full line of fresh vegetables, the best to be found in the market. Make your selections early for the Sunday dinner.

SUPT. BAXTER DEFINES CORPORAL PUNISHMENT

INSTRUCTS TEACHERS AND AUTHORITIES IN PROPER METHODS.

Charles J. Baxter, State superintendent of public instruction, formerly a resident of Plainfield, in response to requests from county Boards of Education, is sending out statements to the boards and principals and county superintedents in regard to the law on corporal punishment.

Several boards in North Jersey counties have experienced considerable trouble with teachers because of attempting to rule children by corporal punishment method. One board dismissed a teacher who whipped several of the pupils and another board dismissed a principal for the same reason.

Superintendent Baxter calls the attention of the boards and teachers in general to section 112 of the school law: "Were a teacher to be dismissed for its violation, he or she would be without redress and also subject to the additional penalties of suspension or revocation of certificate and prosecution for assault and battery." The law provides that the child is under the care of the teacher after leaving the home of the parent. Notwithstanding that parents instruct teachers to administer punishment to children, the instructor has no right to inflict the same and if they do must suffer the consequences of dismissal and revocation of certificate.

Corporal punishment as defined in the school laws is as follsw: "Corporal punishment is any form of punishment by means of which physical pain is inflicted. It includes the physical discomfort or weariness caused by any unusual and sustained posture, as well as the infliction of pain by the hand or by the use of a whip, rule or rattan."

W. C. T. U. PAY TRIBUTE TO A MEMBER'S WORTH

PRAISE FOR LATE MRS. EDMUND V. SHOTWELL.

In commemorating the birthday anniversary of Frances E. Willard yesterday, the members of the local Women's Christian Temperance Union took occasion to speak of the exemplary life and Christian character of Mrs. Edmund V. Shotwell, aged 90 years, who died this week. She and Mrs. Mehala Sims, who is now in her 91st year, were the two oldest members of the union and performed valuable services for many years. Reference was also made to the birthday anniversary of Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, which occurred on Wednesday. She was then 73 years old, and like the other members has been active in the work.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson was in charge of the meeting, and after the opening exercises she paid deserving tribute to Frances E. Willard, telling of the great work accomplished by her during her lifetime. Words of praise were also spoke about Mrs. Shotwell, and then congratulatory remarks were made to Mrs. Sims and Mrs. Dobbins. Mrs. J. A. Chambliss referred to the long and faithful service of Mrs. Sims as a member of the First Baptist church and Sunday school, and of her devotion to the cause of temperance. Other officers and members also spoke pleasant words appropriate to the occasion. A social hour was then enjoyed, during which refreshments were served.

Miss Penton's Body Found.

The dead body of Miss Beatrice Penton, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Penton, Jr., formerly of North Plainfield, was found yesterday in Long Island Sound at a point nearly opposite Stamford, Conn., proving the theory of the police that both she and her companion, Angelis, had been drowned. The body was identified by the girl's father and later removed to the home at New Rochelle. The couple went out in a small boat on Sunday and were caught in a heavy blow. The boat capsized. Miss Penton was an heir to $150,000, which she would have received when she became eighteen years of age. She was sixteen years old.

Co. K Invited.

An invitation has been received by Company K, of this city, to take part in the Old Home Week parade at Elizabeth on Monday afternoon, October 7. The company will act upon the matter at the next regular meeting, on September 9.

Plainfielders at Rutgers.

Frederick Martin Smith, DeLancey Ferguson and George Stanley Fisher, of this city, are among the students who entered Rutgers College yesterday as freshmen. The class is the largest to enter the college.

HOSPITAL SUPT. RESIGNS

Miss H. E. Wildey to be Succeeded by Miss Josephine Hughes.

ON NEXT TUESDAY

New Superintendent of Muhlenberg Is a Graduate of the New York Post Graduate Hospital.

Miss Harriette E. Wildey has resigned as superintendent of Muhlenberg hospital. Her resignation as tendered to the board of governors will take effect on Tuesday, October 1. Her action met with the sincere regret of the board. During her service at the hospital she made many friends, and her ability as superintendent has been recognized by the board of governors and the physicians of the city who have been associated with her in hospital work. Miss Wildey has not announced her plans for the future.

Miss Josephine Hughes, a graduate of the Post Graduate hospital, New York, and a woman of wide experience, has been engaged by the board of governors to succeed Miss Wildey. She is about 35 years of age, and she has been highly recommended for the position. She will enter upon her duties on Tuesday.

Miss Wildey's resignation was entirely unexpected, and came as a great surprise to her many friends. Every inducement was made to retain her in the position.

INVENTIONS OF SAUNDERS

His Machinery Now Used in Every Mine in South America.

A FAMED ENGINEER

As Head of Ingersoll-Rand Company His Patents Have Reached World-wide Use.

It is not generally known, except by mining and other engineers in New Jersey, that there is not a mine in the several hundred thousand square miles of South America in which mining is an important interest which is not equipped with high grade machinery made in this State. In Peru there is always under way mining works that call for New Jersey machinery. It was William R. and Michael Grace who first built up this business.

At the present time, the surviving brother, Michael, owns the controlling number of shares in the great Ingersoll-Rand plant at Phillipsburg, which is carried on by that great engineer of world-wide fame, William L. Saunders, former Mayor of North Plainfied, a large stockholder, whose inventions are in use in mines and on railways and river and harbor work the world over.

Michael Grace owns the famous Battle Abbey, England, which was built by William the Conqueror and his wife Matilda as a sanctuary in which masses were to be offered throughout earthly time for the repose of the souls of those who fell in the Norman and Saxon armies at the Battle of Hastings. It is remarkable that what was once part of the personal domain of the founder of the long line of Norman Kings of England and France should become the residence of an American maker of machinery.

MISS LOUISE TAYLOR TO BE MARRIED OCT. 15.

Invitations Issued for Wedding of Plainfield High School Graduate.

Plainfield school friends have received invitations to the wedding of Miss Louise Montfort Taylor and Leicester Davis, both of Langhorne, Pa., which will take place in St. James' Episcopal church, that place, on Tuesday afternoon, October 15, at 4 o'clock.

Miss Taylor formerly resided at Roselle, and attended the Plainfield School. She was graduated in the class of '03 and was the valedictorian on that occasion. After her graduation she moved to Langhorne, where she has resided ever since. The wedding will be a society affair, a large number of invitations having been issued.

Look for Lethal Car.

The Newark police called up the local authorities at 12:30 o'clock this morning to ask that a watch be kept for automabile number 18,528, which had just killed a man. The chauffeur put on speed and escaped from Newark, going in this direction. Three white men and a colored man were in the car. Nothing of it was seen here.

SOMERSET REPUBLICANS

Their Convention Called for Saturday, October 5, at 10 O'clock a. m.

GOSSIP OF CANDIDATES

Bernards Township Said to Have Clear Track to Shrievalty Nomination—North Plainfield's Slim Chances.

The Somerset County Republican convention will be held at Somerville, in Somerset Hall, on Saturday, October 5. The official call was issued by Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, chairman of the County Committee, this morning. The convention will open at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The delegates will have an assembly, surrogateship, and a shrievalty, candidate to name. It is fairly certain who the first named will be, but there is considerable doubt as to the others. It is pretty generally understood that Assemblyman W. W. Smalley will be renominated. No other name has been mentioned, and he is said to be willing to serve another term.

Three names have been mentioned for the shrievalty, Charles P. Sebring, of Sebring's Mills, near this city; David Buist and Robert Kay, of Bernards township. Mr. Sebring stands a chance to secure the nomination, but a county leader said this morning that it was rather conceded that Bernards should have the nomination if she wanted it.

Former Senator Charles A. Reed was asked as to Sebring's chances after the county leader had been queried. "I don't know," he said. "It is hard to estimate anyone's chances at this stage." He said Sebring would make a good sheriff, if nominated and elected.

Frank Rowley, of North Plainfield, Edward Garretson and Frank Remsen, of Hillsborough, and J. A. Mets, of Somerville, Senator Frelinghuysen's right-hand man, have been mentioned for the surrogateship. Mr. Rowley's chances are not any too bright. The writers of the political forecasts say the revival of annexation talk has operated to make it an unpropitious time for anybody from North Plainfield to go seeking nominations at the hands of a Somerset county delegation.

FORT AN EASY WINNER SAYS COUNTY CHAIRMAN

SMITH SAYS HE WILL GET 2,500 MAJORITY IN COUNTY.

County Chairman Frank H. Smith today prophesied that J. Franklin Fort, the Republican candidate for Governor, would receive a majority of 2,500 in Union county at the coming elecction. In giving these figures, Mr. Smith spoke confidently and said that he did not doubt but that the Republican ticket would be successful. The normal Republican majority in Union county is 1,800, although Senator Ackerman is among a few who have received nearly 2,200 majority.

Last year the Republican ticket received about 10,000 votes in the county. Assemblyman Peter Tillman was high man with 10,928 votes, while Desmond, the Democratic candidate for the Assembly, was given 9,675 votes. Assemblyman Perkins received a vote of 10,855 and Assemblyman Moxon 10,798. On the Democratic ticket, J. J. Hague received 9,654 and R. C. Coulter 9,508.

Stole His Watch.

While at work on the grounds of the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, William Murtagh, a laborer, lost a silver watch through theft. Murtagh was engaged in digging a trench in the yard, and his coat, in a pocket of which the watch lay, hung on a nail in the fence, near a loosely caught door. He went inside for a few minutes and when he returned the watch was gone. The police were notified of the theft.

Hervey K. Doane Promoted.

Hervey K. Doane, son of Chief and Mrs. T. O. Doane, of West Fifth street, who was graduated from Rutgers College a year ago, and who has since that time been employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad tunnel work in New York, has been promoted to an inspector of work. He has also been granted a vacation and will leave on Saturday for a trip to Jamestown, Pittsburg and Chicago.

After a pleasant three months' vacation at her home in London, Ont., Miss Charlotte A. Griffin left this week for Plainfield. Miss Griffin is a graduate of the Training School for Nurses at Muhlenberg Hospital, class '07.

YOUTH RAISED A CHECK

Placed Under Arrest When He Proffered It to Clothier in Paying Bill.

ON DUNELLEN BANK

Clumsy Work Betrayed the Lad Remanded For Hearing Before Judge Runyon Tomorrow Morning.

Charged with raising a $4 check to $40, Roy Wilson, 18 years old, a farm hand, was arrested at Harry Werner's clothing store on West Front street early last night. He asknowledged the crime after his arrest, according to Chief of Police Kieley. He will not be arraigned for a preliminary hearing until tomorrow morning. He was remanded this morning by Judge Runyon to await the return of Mr. Werner, who was compelled to go out of town.

The check was drawn on the Dunellen National Bank by William F. Biggs, a Piscataway farmer, for whom Wilson worked. It was given to the youth yesterday morning. The raising was done clumsily, and Mr. Werner detected it as soon as Wilson provered it in payment of a small bill. Holding the boy in conversation, the clothier sent an assistant to police headquarters and turned him over to Sergeant Overbaugh, who hurried to the store in response to the call.

The police have not secured a full statement from Wilson. They know nothing of him.

It is said he tried to pass the check in several places before going to Werner's store.

WINNERS OF BLUE RIBBONS

Plainfielders Capture Lot of Prizes at the Morristown Horse Show.

MISS HOOLEY LUCKY

Charles W. McCutcheon, W. J. Buttereld and James Gethin Also Carry Off Honors at the Big Event.

Plainfield prize winners were very much in evidence at the opening of the Morristown horse show yesterday, and in nearly all of the fourteen classes a local horse carried off a ribbon. Judging from the opening day the show will be a great success. the number of entries exceeding that of last year, and the quality being above the average. Mrs. William Orr Bardlay, of New York, captured the blue in the class pairs of harness horses with her well known London prize winners, Sandow and Sultan. The feature of the afternoon was the class for hunt clubs. This was won by the No. 1 section of the Union County Hounds.

In class 3, single roadsters and best appointed rig, W. J. Buttfield's May Belle and Miss Banahan received second and third prizes, respectively, and in class 22, saddle horses, not exceeding 15.2 hands, Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Delight was second and James Gethin's Plainfield Beauty third.

Charles W. McCutchen's Bimbashi was third in class 7, harness horses, over 15.3. In class 11, horse and runabout, Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Free Quaker took fourth prize, and in class 13, tandems, her Quaker Maid and Free Quaker captured second prize. Miss Hooley's Quaker Maid was again in evidence in class 9, for horses not under 1 hands and not exceeding 15.2 hands, taking the blue in a large field of entries. In class 31, for ponies under saddle, James Gethin's Sligo Lad took the blue ribbon in the first division. In class 34, for harness horses, Miss Hooley's Dorothea was third and Charles W. McCutchen's Piccadilly Sweetheart was fourth.

There was a large sprinkling of Plainfielders in the crowd at the opening day, and all took much interest in the awards. Lewis E. Waring, of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club, is one of the judges in the saddle class.

Praise for Brokaw.

The Emporia (Kan.) Gazette of September 6 contains the following item concerning a former Plainfielder: "Under the management of H. R. Brokaw, the Emporia Electric & Gas Light Company has made a noticeable growth, which incidentally means a better Emporia as well as a stronger and better gas company. The gas service in this town is today one of the best in the State, and Mr. Brokaw, who came to Emporia from Plaineld, N. J., and has had charge of the company since April 1, deserves credit for the work he is carrying on."

CIVIL WAR VETERANS HOLD THEIR REUNION

SENATOR FRELINGHUYSEN IS AN HONORARY MEMBER.

The twenty-eighth annual reunion of the Fifteenth Regiment, N. J. V., at Somerville, yesterday, was held in the rooms of Gen. Wadsworth Post, No. 75, G. A. R. These officers for the ensuing year were elected: President, Alonzo Hedden, of Rockaway; first vice president, E. Alonzo Doty, of Morristown; second vice president, Abram Tranger, of Lambertville; secretary, Stephen W. Gordon, of Newark; treasurer, W. H. Cawley, of Somerville; assistant secretary, Henry H. Hoffman, of Newark; assistant treasurer, A. W. Whitehead, of Newark.

Joseph S. Frelinghuysen was chosen an honorary members. A committee was appointed for the purpose of arranging for a pilgrimage next summer to Richmond and Petersburg, Va. The committee appointed to secure an appropriation of $6,500 for the erection of a monument to the Fifteenth at Salem Church, Va., and a tablet at Spottsylvania Court House was continued. After a bill had passed the House last winter it was vetoed by Governor Stokes.

The Fifteenth Regiment was recruited in Sussex, Warren, Hunterdon, Morris and Somerset counties and was mustered in in August, 1862, participating in numerous battles. It has a world reputation of having suffered in one battle a greater per cent. of loss by death than any regiment but one in a single engagement during the Civil War.

Dinner was served in the First M. E. church. The speakers were ex-Sheriff W. H. H. Wyckoff, Senator Frelinghuysen, A. W. Whitehead, of Newark; Senator Johnston Cornish, of Washington, N. J., Assemblyman W. W. Smalley and others.

N. DOUGLASS DRAKE IS QUIETLY MARRIED

LOCAL LAWYES BECOMES A BENEDICT AT SARANAC, N. Y.

Announcement has been received in this city of the marriage of N. Douglass Drake, formerly of Duer street, and Miss Katherine Venn, of Yonkers, N. Y., which took place at Saranac, N. Y., on Tuesday, September 23. The couple will make their home at Saranac, where Mr. Drake is interested in sanitariu mwork.

Mr. Drake is well known here, where for a time he was a practising lawyer. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Newton Drake, of Somerset street. While a resident of this city he was especially active in the First Baptist church, being an officer of the Sunday school. Mrs. Drake was formerly of Wilmington, Del., but during the past few years has resided at Yonkers, N. Y.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS WILL RESUME SESSIONS.

First Fall Meeting to Be Held at Y. M. C. A. Monday Night.

The Plaineld Sunday School Teachers' Union will resume its meetings for the study of the lesson and discussion of various topics of interest to the Sunday school superintendent and teacher on Monday night at 8 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. building. Vice President F. E. Smith will lead the devotional service. Horace J. Martin, of the Trinity Reformed Sunday school, will teach the lesson for October 6, and Walter M. Irving, chairman of the State executive committee, will present the subject of "Teachers' Training."

This union has been organized for the purpose of improving methods of work both in the presentation of the lesson and general exercises of the school. The few from each school coming together each week, getting acquainted with their fellow-workers, hearing and giving ideas of what has been helpful in their class and school work, it is said, will naturally give new enthusiasm and inspiration to all interested workers. It is earnestly desired by the officers that all superintendents and teachers support this union with their presence.

To Restore Inscription.

A committee has been appointed by the Masonic Grand Lodge to have the name of Aaron Dickson Woodward reinscribed on the slab on his grave in the First Presbyterian church yard at Trenton. The rain has made the letters indistinct. Mr. Woodward was attorney general of New Jersey from 1805 to 1817 and was grand master of the New Jersey Lodge of Masons. He was one of the leading residents of Trenton as well as a foremost Jerseyman.

GARBAGE PLANT PROTEST

Mr. McCardell Says 4th Ward Should Not Be Made a Dumping Ground.

IT HAS ENOUGH NOW

Believes Sewage Disposal Plant, Poor Farm and Isolation Hospital Enough For His Ward.

The opposition in the Fourth ward to the scheme to shoulder another burden on that district by locating the proposed garbage disposal plant in that section have found a champion in Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell. Not only does Mr. McCardell object to the idea of further burdening his own ward with such plants but he expresses a willingness to do all in his power to prevent it being accomplished.

Andrew McCardell.

"I won't talk politics but there is no politics in it when I say that the garbage plant should not be located in our ward," declared the Factory Inspector this morning. "It's not right and our people won't stand for it. They have their share of such undesirable things now and they kick against any more. I think they're right and I tell you I am going to help them all I can to prevent another such plant being placed there.

"You see," continued Mr. McCardell, "we already have everything of the sort that the city owns. There's the poor farm for instance and then there's the isolation hospital. Worst of all is the sewage disposal beds. Aren't they enough? Now suppose you owned property in my ward, would you like it made a dumping ground for the city's waste? Not by a long shot! It's no wonder that the people put up a holler. You would, too, if you lived there and were interested in realty.

"The garbage disposal plant is a good thing but the city should not think it has a 'good thing' in the Fourth ward. It's time that some other section be used as a dumping ground. Just quote me as saying that I am one taxpayer who will register a good solid kick against the plan."

HOLD-UP SCARES SERVANTS.

'Plains Domestics Leaving to Escape Dangers of Unprotected Streets.

The recent hold-up of a woman on Park avenue, Scotch Plains, has added to the difficulty of keeping servants in that place. It is said a number of the girls have left their positions, and others have given notice, because they object to working in neighborhoods where it is not safe for a woman to be out at 9 o'clock at night.

This development of the situation, bad enough from the nature of the hold-up and disorder preceding it, adds to the earnestness of the residents that more adequate police protection be afforded the village by the Township Committee. It is felt by the householders that two efficient policemen, on duty every night, should be provided.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The New York Sun, which has been writing up land sale speculations of alleged doubtful character had a story on Wednesday of the sale of land in Lincoln by one William Ostrander who is booming the place as an industrial centre. The circular sent out refers to a big statue of Abraham Lincoln facing the town's center and of many improvements on the boulevard when in reality none is said to exist. The postoffice department is investigating the scheme, it is said.

The twenty-six pupils sent by the borough to the Plainfield High School have gone through their first month with honor. The monthly report shows that not one of them has fallen below grade.

The football team is practising steadily. Manager Charles Lake is confident his men will take the majority of their games without trouble. The schedule will be a good one.

J. V. D. Field is active in Somerset county politics. It is whispered that he is to get "something good" next year.

The lake is back at its old level. The rains gave it the last touch, and no trace of the recent draining is to be seen.

Miss Adelia Kroohs has recovered from an injury to her collar-bone, the result of a fall from a hammock.

Councilman William H. Kuhns expects to move to Anthony, to conduct a general store, early next spring.

The local W. C. T. U. will hold a business meeting next Thursday. No meeting was held yesterday.

The choir of Holy Innocents' church will rehearse tomorrow night in the Guild room.

John and Ray Dutcher have become members of the Plainfield High School glee club.

The Borough Board of Education will meet next Tuesday night.

The Township Committee will meet next Tuesday.

WESTFIELD.

The Central Railroad has lengthened the fence between the tracks at Westfield to prevent passengers walking across the tracks near the depot. Robert Edson, not knowing that the fence had been lengthened, was nearly caught by an express train Wednesday night before he could get around the new part of the fence.

Approaches to the new bridge over the railroad at Osborn avenue, Westfield, will be completed before cold weather sets in.

Westfield's Republican executive committee will meet tonight to decide on the date of the town convention.

E. P. Burritt and family, of Westfield, returned Wednesday to town for the winter.

RAHWAY.

Charles A. May, the newly elected State councilor of the Senior Order United American Mechanics, of Hackensack, has appointed as deputy State councilor for the eleventh district, which includes the councils of Milltown, New Brunswick, Elizabeth and Newark, Joseph C. Moore, of old Old Glory Council No. 16, of Rahway.

Mrs. J. B. Thompson and family, who removed to Stamford, Conn., several months ago, have returned to Rahway, and will reside on Harrison street.

HOUSE PROBE ON TUESDAY.

State Institution Will Be Put on the Grill.

After waiting all day in vain for the appearance of Mr. Sullivan, of Hudson, the Assembly investigating committee met around the Speaker's desk at Trenton Wednesday afternoon and adjourned to 10:30 o'clock next Tuesday morning. The other members of the committee, Assemblyman Hahn, of Essex; Van Blarcom, of Passaic; Jess, of Camden, and Perkins, of Union, with John H. Backes, the counsel, were present at the meeting.

The committee intends to proceed with the investigation next Tuesday, and it is said that on that day it will take up a State institution which has not been touched yet.

Among these are the State prison, the State hospital at Morris Plains, the State Home for Boys at Jamesburg, the State Home for Girls at Trenton, the schools of the Feeble Minded and the Soldiers' homes. Which of these will be taken up on Tuesday has not been fixed upon yet, but the matter will be decided in a few days, when the committee has considered the matter with its counsel.

—The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the public library Wednesday morning, October 2, at 11 o'clock.

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.,—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

A special meeting of the Eastern Professional Golfers Association will be held on Monday morning at the Astor House, to make final arrangements for the championship at the Country Club, Brookline, October 29 and 30.

Practise for the golf team will begin this week at Princeton in preparation for the intercollegiate championship next month at the Nassau Country Club. There are four of last year's team still at college, Ralph Peters, '08, captain; W. T. West, '08; H. J. Van Dyke, 3d, '08, and D. Roberts, '09. The players who have had experience who are also eligible include W. S. Heyniger, '09, and C. W. Hunt, '09. Four of last year's freshman class who are now eligible for the team are F. H. McAdoo, runner up to Travers in the Princeton invitation tournament; T. Atkinson, C. G. Ballin and A. C. Van Dyke. The college championship will begin on Saturday.

Tournaments and team matches of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association will come in quick succession this fall, the one break in the dates being during the national championship and team matches at Midlothian, October 5 to 12. There will be a one day tournament on Friday at the Siwanoy Country Club, Mount Vernon, open to all women whose clubs are members of the association. The entries should be sent by Wednesday to the Siwanoy Country Club.

An open tournament for women will be held at the Essex County Country Club, October 15, 16, 17 and 18. The program has not been issued, but it is known that the players will qualify in sets of eight in a medal play round of eighteen holes. But one round for the cups will be decided each day, which will give time for extra contests at driving, approaching and putting and for a mixed foursome. This will be the first tournament for women at the Essex County Country Club in some seasons. Mrs. E. A. Manice won the Women's M. G. A. championship there in 1902, and during that tournament Mrs. Charles T. Stout made a remarkable round in 77. The course has been lengthened since to 5,880 yards.

The intercity team matches for the Lesley cup will be played at the Country Club, Brookline, October 25 and 26. The majority of the Metropolitan Golf Association players have not as yet accepted with equanimity the change from four ball foursome matches for the afternoon round. Jerome D. Travers makes the point that unless the pairs are made up of players who use the same make of ball one or the other will be at a disadvantage. There are so many sorts now in use, the varieties including rubber core, liquid core, jellied core, pneumatics and the non-core ball, that Travers believes the matter should be taken up seriously by the New York committee so that there may be no disagreements at the last moment. There are differences in the flying and putting qualities of each ball, or at all events each player pins his faith on a certain ball and will hate to change it for the foursome.

The simple solution will be to get together pairs that use the same sort of ball, while in the other instances the committee will doubtless find a way to reconcile the jarring partners. With the gutta percha ball such a complication would have been impossible, for aside from an opinion as to the markings the players had no choice between the different makes.

DIAMOND DUST.

Rahway will come to Plainfield tomorrow loaded for bear when they meet Clinton Avenue on Crescent Oval, but Manager Dorflinger feels confident that the visitors will have no runaway match with his colts as they are in fine condition to carry off a victory. This should be one of the best contests of the season.

It turns out that the rain in Pittsburg on Monday had nothing to do with any refusal of Umpire Klem to allow Bresnahan to play. Klem did not refuse to allow Bresnahan to play. Roger was not slated to go behind the rubber.

Charles Buffington, one of the star twirlers in the '80s, died on Monday in a hospital at Fall River, Mass. He and Jim Whitney were fellow members of the Bostons and formed a crack pitching pair.

Rudderham, the Southern League umpire, after a talk with President Pulliam, this week, will have a National League tryout in Pittsburg this week.

An interesting baseball fact is that Tommy Leach, who is recognized as a strictly first-class third baseman, is playing an outfield position for Pittsburg. Third basemen of his calibre are very scarce, yet Pittsburg appears to be getting along all right with him in that position.

The Y. M. C. A. nine has had a group picture taken. The group will be shown on the menu cards at the coming dinner.

The National League list of reserved, drafted and purchased players contains the names of 275 men.

the largest, it is said, since the baseball war.

It is said that Frank Rudderham, who umpired in the Southern League this season, may officiate in the National League next year.

Baseball fame is fleeting. Bill Donoven is considered the best pitcher in the game today. Last year it was Walsh and before that Brown and Mathewson.

Clinton Avenue and Rahway at Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon. There'll be something doing. The Rahwegians are out for blood and they say that they will win. The locals will be right there, however, and have something to say about it.

The Philadelphia Athletics are making an awful hard fight for that pennant. The team has many admirers here.

The Summit team has won the pennant in the Lackawanna League and the emblem has been awarded to the players. On Saturday, October 5, the champions and Chatham will meet in a game at Summit, and the pennant will be presented at that time.

The officials of the Lackawanna League at a meeting held Tuesday night decided to begin legal proceedings against the former treasurer of the league, W. H. Cawley, Jr., who managed the Dover team, and who, when he withdrew his aggregation from the league, refused to turn over either Dover's forfeit money, amounting to $125, or that of Westfield, which team was also obliged to pull out. The courts will be asked for a writ of mandamus against Cawley.

The Eastern League season closed on Tuesday and there were changes in the standing. In the three double-headers the teams all split even, making a friendly farewell. Jersey City's inability to get only an even division with Rochester prevented the former from passing Newark and as a result the Sailors and Skeeters are tied for fourth place. With the championship going to Toronto, Buffalo finishes second, Providence third, Baltimore sixth, Rochester seventh and Montreal last.

Preparations are being made for a large crowd at Crescent Oval tomorrow afternoon, when the Clinton Avenues will cross bats with Rahway, both claimants for the county championship. Both teams are in the best condition and will extend themselves to win the contest.

The Giants gave a great exhibition of "laying down", in Pittsburg on Wednesday, when they were defeated by a score of 14 to 1. Lynch and Ferguson were the two twirlers used, but from the accounts of the game it was not altogether their fault that they lost. McGraw's bunch is showing themselves to be mighty poor losers. The people who support the game are entitled to better treatment.

The Inter-City Amateur League championship pennant will be presented to Clinton Avenue on Saturday night, October 5, at an informal dinner to be held at the Y. M. C. A. At that time the results of the season will be announced officially.

FOOTBALL.

Plans for the organization of a football team among the Y. M. C. A. men are taking shape. There is material available for a fast, if somewhat light, eleven.

The features of the football practice at Percy Field Wednesday were the appearance of Walder and Brinton, two veterans of last year, and a change in the lineup of the varsity team. Walder, the big fullback, came back from the iron foundry in Tonawanda, where he has been working all summer, in good condition and worked for about an hour. Brinton, the right tackle, arrived from Montana weighting nearly 200 pounds.

Disquieting news to the effect that Babcock, last year's fighting end, could not play this year reached the coaches yesterday. Babcock has just undergone an operation and will be unable to get out. Watson or Pielett will be drilled for the position. C. G. Oderkirk, substitute guard and tackle for two years, was at centre yesterday and Gardiner took Caldwell's place at quarterback. Hurlbut, a big last year's freshman, went in at fullback and Dulanoey, '08, went in at Thompson's place at guard. Thompson had to take some examinations. Earle played left halfback and Shearer, a fast man from Gettysburg, who was ineligible last year, held down the right halfback position. Coaches Lueder, Halliday, Schoellkopf and Gibson had charge of the men. Late in the afternoon a slow scrimmage was held in which the men walked through the plays. The forward pass was used with great effect.

The Yale players of association football have gained an important concession for this fall, the athletic council having permitted the men who make the team to wear on their caps and jerseys Y. A. F., signifying Yale Association Football. This move has given soccer a standing in the university it did not possess heretofore and has encouraged the men who are behind the soccer game. Wicks, the captain of the team, has been a student in the Yale summer school and he has been corresponding with the old players in order to lay plans for the season.

Nine of last year's players will be in college again and Yale will enter the intercollegiate association to play games against Harvard, Haverford, Cornell, Columbia and Pennsylvania. The men who are back are Wicks, Timm, Sholle, Conrado, Bean, Turnbull, Hull, O'Sullivan and McNulty. Bierbaum, who coached the players last year, again will be in charge of their work.

At Yale Field yesterday the first football scrimmage of the season took place when the varsity lined up against a team of substitutes for ten minutes of play. Carroll Cooney and Ray Paige were not in the varsity lineup, as they are still unequal to hard practice. The foryard pass and kicking game were both attempted in the scrimmage, but in both cases there was much trouble in recovering the ball after it was advanced by a throw or kick. The team did not work as smoothly as should be the case, but for a first lineup the coaches regarded the work, which was snappy, with satisfaction. Coy and Wheaton punted 65 yards.

The first thrill of football was felt in Princeton yesterday afternoon, when a couple of lively scrimmages were had on University Field. The varsity took the ball first. As a rule, the tackling was inaccurate. In the back field were Capt. McCormick, Harlan, Tibbott, Coxe and Reed. Eddie Dillon alternated with Dawson at quarterback. Wister and Brown paired off at the ends with Vaughn and Dowd, who came in later. On the front tier were Phillips, Waller, Siegling, Bauman, Ware and Buckingham, all heavy and mostly pretty slow. Not in years has University Field had so many candidates working on its gridiron. Four full elevens, and these from the three upper classes, engaged in scrimmages yesterday, while a lot more filled in at various times.

Lafayette football players yesterday had the first seasonable weather for their work. For an hour the varsity and the scrubs in two teams were put through signal practise and then they lined up for fifty minutes of hard scrimmage. Captain Ellicott and Snyder were at tackle for the varsity, with Rogers and Logan guards, McCaa and Kelly ends, Whitesell centre, Flad at quarter, Blaecher at fullback and Conover and Rumbough halves. They made a good showing. It was McCaa's first appearance since year before last, and the students gave him a warm welcome. Flad was successful in quarterback kicks and forward passes. The varsity needs considerable coaching before it will be in shape.

The Harvard football squad has been increased by twelve new men. Several of them look t obe very promising material. Lockwood, a prominent member of last year's squad, showed up today for the rst time. He is a 10 second man on the track team. Another addition was Hoar, a sub-guard last year. Hoar tips the beam at 190 pounds. He is looked on as a very promising candidate for the line. The practise consisted of signal work entirely and there will be no scrimmage until Friday. A good of time was spent yesterday in punting, at which Lockwood displayed the most promise. Hall has been appointed freshman coach. Hall played end on the '07 freshman eleven and since that time has been a member of the varsity squad.

Emmett Olcott, of East Orange, N. J., has been chosen captain of the Lehigh football team. Olcott has played right tackle on the eleven for several years. He is 22 years old, six feet tall and weighs 180 pounds. Today's game with Lebanon Valley College was cancelled because the local team has been unable to get sufficient practise. Quarterback Anderson had his nose broken in a scrimmage yesterday.

By a score of 28 to 0 the Syracuse University football team yesterday defeated Hobart. The game was the first in the new Stadium, and was free from spectacular plays, all the men on the Syracuse squad having a tryout. Simson, the star halfback of last season, is in the game again, and in today's exhibition gave evidence of being in his old time form.

Will Open Bids Monday Night.

A large number of contractors have been estimating on the work of erecting the new Darrow avenue primary school, and it is expected that the bidding will be lively. There will be a special meeting of the Board of Education Monday night, when the bids will be opened. The amount appropriated for the building is $90,000, exclusive of furnishings.

Horse Show Opens Today.

The tenth horse show given by the Morristown Field Club opens at that place today. Among the first exhibits to arrive were those of Edwin S. Hooley, of Plainfield. Another exhibitor early on the ground is Sidney Holloway, of Westchester, with a string of fine looking jumpers. C. W. McCutchen will also have a strong entry list.

"General" in Service Again.

Chief T. O. Doane has made a temporary arrangement for sending the chemical engine at fire headquarters to fires. "General," the horse formerly used for the chief's wagon, has been put into service again, and is being driven in place of the one which had to be shot a few days ago, while on his way to a fire.

Style and Tailoring Distinguishes

Watson-Made Suits

The man desirous of securing a suit distinguished from the ordinary run of clothes by style and superior workmanship will find no better source from which to purchase than our assortment of Watson-Made Suit.

Watson Made Suits $10-$12 $15-$18 $20-$22 and $25

Every Watson-Made Suit was treated individually. The material for each suit was cut separately and then given into the hands of the tailors, three classes—coat makers, vest makers and trouser makers. These men are experts because they know their particular branch of tailoring the best. In this way, and only this way, can superior clothing be made.

The convincing part—you can come in any day and see these men at work. Could we give better evidence that a Watson-Made Suit is custom made but ready-to wear?

BANKING PUBLICITY.

In an able address on "The Progress and Development of Trust Companies in New Jersey," delivered before the American Bankers' Association at Atlantic City, this week, J. Herbert Case, vice president of the association for New Jersey, made an honest admission concerning the marked success of the Plainfield Trust Company, of which he is secretary-treasurer and director, when he said:

"We believe in the generous use of printer's ink. Our own institution has found that by engaging by the year a special corner of prominence in the local papers, paying a little extra therefor, and then pouring into it our most convincing and forceful arguments, setting forth the advantages of doing business with our own particular institution and changing the 'filling' each week, to be the best possible sort of an investment. Why should we not advertise? Is our business in any wise different from that of the successful merchant? Are we not buying and selling credit for a profit and will not that profit, like that of the successful merchant, be greater if we can materially increase the volume of business?"

Mr. Case has found that publicity pays when rightly directed, and that the best medium by which to reach the people is the local daily newspaper. Of course, a good deal depends on the style of advertising, but a man who is sensible enough to appreciate the value of newspaper advertising, is wise enough to write a good "ad." The use of liberal space and sound, convincing argument in The Daily Press has been of meritorious service to the trust company, but that concern is not alone in this respect, for the City National Bank, the First National Bank and the Plainfield Savings Bank have also shared in the benefits thus derived. Constant and effectual reasoning through these columns has built up the business of each, and their directors are wise enough to admit it.

It isn't the great general who parades his entire force before the enemy's guns just to show how brave he and his followers are. Neither is it the wise political leader who arrays all his personal views on every subject under the sun, to give his opponents something to shoot at.—Trenton True American.

Are we to infer that Mr. Katzenbach's advisers are opposed to "home rule" on the excise question?

When County Chairman Smith predicts that Union county will give Fort 2,500 majority he makes no rash prophecy. But, Mr. Smith, what would have been the result if James E. Martine had gotten his just deserts at the hands of the party which had been so ungrateful to him?

It's very nice to organize a fruit and flower mission at the Y. W. C. A. for the benefit of New York and New Jersey city hospitals, but wouldn't it be better to direct such efforts in behalf of our own local institutions, including the hospital, children's home and others?

HOLY NAME SOCIETY ENTERTAINS ROYALLY

ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH ORGANIZATION HOST OF ST. MARY'S BROTHERS.

The Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church held a social at Saengerbund hall last night, and entertained the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's church. Bowling and euchre were "features," and with a great array of refreshments to add to the pleasure, the members of both societies had a most enjoyable time from the start of the affair to its last minute.

Teams from the two organizations bowled against each other. The match was well contested, and St. Joseph's rejoiced in a gamely won victory. James Gallagher, however, won some glory for St. Mary's by capturing the high score prize, a box of fragrant cigars. The same attractive prize was offered in euchre, and Richard McCullough and John McDonough won it.

Committees from both societies conducted the affair. Robert McCormack was chairman for St. Joseph's and James Gallagher for St. Mary's.

CERTAIN LEGISLATORS IN DOWN AND OUT CLUB.

Perkins Is Made President and Groel Secretary—Thompson Warned Away.

During the long weary wait for the House to do something Wednesday afternoon Assemblyman Perkins, of Union; Groel, of Essex, and Drake, of Middlesex, who tried hard but failed to be renominated; Mr. Taylor, of Ocean, whom Shinn defeated for the Senate nomination in his county, and Assemblyman Alexander, of Hudson, who has announced that he will not seek a renomination because, as was said about the State House Wednesday, the bosses had given him a pretty broad intimation that he had better not, happened to get together on one side of the Assembly chamber.

They were lolling about in easy chairs talking over things in general when some one tacked up over their heads a piece of paper bearing the legend:

"Down and Out Club."

Those in the vicinity entered into the humor of the thing and advised the rejected men to organize, which they did by electing Mr. Perkins president and Mr. Groel secretary. While the fun was at its height Prof. Thompson, of Princeton, who the Kuser people had decreed should be refused a renomination because of his inclination during the United States Senatorship fight last winter to desert John F. Dryden, but who succeeded in circumventing the decrees of the bosses, joined the group.

"Here, don't you come in here; you don't belong here," shouted several, pointing to the sign. The professor glanced up and saw what the sign said.

"That's right," he said, laughing. "I don't belong there this time," and he moved away from the group.

MR. ISAACSON SCOLDED OVER MRS. ABRAMS' HEAD

SHE COULDN'T QUITE UNDERSTAND HIS INDIGNANT REMARKS IN HEBREW.

The complaint against Samuel Isaacson, made by Mrs. Morris Abrams, who charged him with using profane and indecent language, and with destroying property on the place on West Third street, where he conducted a paint shop as a tenant of her husband, was dismissed by Judge Runyon in the city court this morning.

The testimony showed that all the remarks addressed by Isaacson to Mrs. Abrams were either in Yiddish or Hebrew. Mrs. Abrams said they were terrible, but neither she nor any of her witnesses could translate them into anything stronger than slander. The pure Hebrew curses, according to Mrs. Abrams, were the worst, but she acknowledged that the classical tongue was beyond her and only a general idea of what Isaacson, who is said to be learned in Hebrew, meant could be gathered by her.

The defendant has a venerable beard and a student's eyes, and looks like the typical father in Israel, versed in the law and the prophets. Counsellor W. L. Heted, Jr., who appeared for him, said he was the victim of a petty plot to put him out of business, and painted him as a gentle, holy man, who had fled from Russia to escape persecution only to meet as bitter injustice among his own people here.

Mrs. Abrams and her husband opposed the dismissal obstinately. They were sure there was something profane and indecent in what Isaacson had said, and they wanted to bring other witnesses to do some translating from another angle. Judge Runyon refused to entertain their application for a second adjournment. He said they had had plenty of opportunity and witnesses enough.

After the hearing Mr. Hetfield announced that his client would institute a suit for damages against Abrams. The action will be brought in the District Court.

WILL FIGHT PUBLIC SERVICE.

Morris and Somerset Electric Company to Go Ahead.

At a special meeting of the directors of the Morris and Somerset Electric Company, held Wedfiesday at Morristown, it was decided to proceed with the work of building and equipping the plant, notwithstanding the certiorari proceedings instituted by the Public Service Corporation, a decision upon which is still pending. The Morris and Somerset company officials moreover determined to fight the case through the courts, no matter how long it may take. This action having been decided upon, the contracts for the erection of the power house were taken up, the mason work being awarded to Eney Grupelli.

The contracts for laying conduits, erecting poles and wires, and for the material ordered, will be pushed. Several car loads of conduits, loaded in Chicago, and upon which the company has been paying demurrage for three weeks, have been ordered forward to this city. A consignment of iron poles will arrive here in a few days, and other material heretofore ordered has also been shipped for this place.

He Wasn't a Grmand.

That wary ld fellow, Ballie Macduff, was enticed into a friend's house the other night, and his host managed to win 50 shillings from him at "nap." What is more remarkable, when the ballie had parted with his last shilling he rose, full of wrath.

"Won't you stay to supper?" pressed his host. "We have a fine bit of ham waiting."

"No, not I. Dae ye think I eat 50 shillings' worth of ham?"—London Answers.

MANUAL TRAINING IN PLAINS SCHOOL

PRINCIPAL OFFERED EQUIPMENT OF INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

The Industrial school, of Scotch Plains, one of the oldest institutions in the village, having been organized many years ago, has been abandoned, it having been decided to discontinue the weekly sessions. Those who have been in charge of the school have offered the tools and materials to the public school, and the matter is now held under advisement by Principal D. T. Hendrickson and the members of the school board.

Principal Hendrickson favors the idea, believing that it would be an attractive feature to devote a portion of an afternoon session each week to that department of manual training, and would be of benefit to the pupils.

For years after the school was organized there was considerable interest and the work was carried on successfully. But of late families have moved away from the village and there has been a lack of enthusiasm. It was finally decided that owing to the small patronage it did not pay to maintain the school any longer.

BISHOP DOANE ON DIVORCE.

Will Urge Episcopal Convention to Establish Rule.

Rev. C. Doane, bishop of Albany, one of the most eminent ministers of the Episcopal church in the United States, has announced that he will propose a more stringent and absolute canon on the subject of the marriage of divorced persons at the general convention of the American church, which will begin at Richmon, Va., next week.

The Boston convention passed a canon requiring a minister to secure the sanction of his bishop, and implying that the bishop shall consent only to the remarriage of the innocent party.

Bishop Doane, backed by a considerable following of the church, will ask the convention for a ruling absolutely prohibiting ministers of the Episcopal church from solemnizing marriages of divorced persons.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

James E. Martine.

While the friends of James E. Martine regret that the leaders of the Democratic party did not see it advisable to make him the standard bearer in the coming campaign, yet they have every reason to be proud of him and the showing he made. There are still some newspapers, and some individuals, who continue to refer to his candidacy in a disparaging manner, though these same sources will want and expect Mr. Martine and his friends to work their hardest for the election of the successful candidate, the choice of the State convention on Tuesday of last week. In this desire they will be gratified and in their expectation they will not be disappointed. Mr. Martine has never led a party of bolters or sulkers. If the whole Democracy of New Jersey will follow the example of those who desired the nomination of Mr. Martine then Frank S. Katzenbach may rest assured of his victory in November. He need have no hesitancy in measuring the executive chamber for his carpets.

But one cry was made against James E. Martine in an extra long campaign, and that was that he had suffered defeat at the polls. The cry was not a fair one and had no effect on those who knew him and understood the circumstances, but it was effective in defeating him, and it is not good policy for those who are interested in the Democratic victory, we so earnestly hope for, to rub in this unfair and unreasonable campaign acid until they make a sore which no candidate in this election can carry and be successful in his race. Every man who is the least acquainted with the history of New Jersey politics knows that James E. Martine never sought to be a candidate for any office of his own volition, and that in every defeat he ever suffered at the polls he in reality achieved a victory over any other candidate of his party in the district where he was a candidate. Who is there who could come so near being elected in the strongly Republican Fifth Congressional district as was James E. Martine one year ago? Who is there in the Democratic party who can swing Republican Union county to the Democratic wharf with such certainty as he? James E. Martine has been defeated in the Democratic State convention, but he has not been humiliated and he must not be humiliated. No man has ever heard his successful rival for the nomination say one word but that of high regard and respect for him, and the advocates of that gentleman will do well to take an example from him—Hunterdon County Democrat.

JAPANESE HARAKIRI.

Practise of Suicide Confined Now to the Old Nobility.

The custom of harakiri is a thing rather confined to the samurai class, and the heimin, the commoners, are quite strangers to it, writes Mr. Hashiguchi in the Atlantic, a Japanese magazine. It thrived in the days of feudalism, when the lives of the samurai were were at the disposal of their masters, lords and rulers.

The samurai youths were taught to commit harakiri rather than submit to the disgrace of decapitation.

Thus harakiri became an inveterate hereditary propensity of the samurai class, from which it was not an easy affair to free them after the advent of the Western civilization awakened the benighted land of the Rising Sun.

In this enlightened age of Meiji, however, this practise has been going out of fashion. Yet it is amazing to learn that it has again come into use in the war with Russia.

Last year Professor Ukida, of Waseda University, of Tokio, who is a graduate of Yale, delivered an address in an educational gathering held in Tokio, in which he referred to the practise of harakiri. He said in part:

"A soldier may die in the battlefield for the sake of duty, not for the sake of personal honor. He shall not commit harakiri just because he has no means of defense against his enemy. Should he be taken prisoner by the enemy he will do well to console himself with the idea that he is sent to the enemy's country as a student, to be of further service in future to his own country."

His reasons were right, if his utterances were not judiciously made. Yet he has been denounced as a traitor by Major General Sato, who based his arguments upon the sentiment that the Japanese soldiers die in the battle-field not for the sake of duty, but for the sake of honor; that it is for the Russians, not for the Japanese, to die for duty; that by committing harakiri rather than surrendering to the Russians have the Japanese been enabled to win the victory; and that Professor Ukida's address would have a tendency to detract from the patriotic fervor of the Japanese soldiers.

All the press of Japan made comments upon the controversy, saying that what Professor Ukida termed duty was exactly the same as what Major General Sato termed honor in the essential points.

The Mrs.—Bridget, you did not dust the parlor this morning.

Bridget—Sure, and Oi did, mum.

The Mrs.—But you couldn't have! I can write my name in that dust on the piano.

Bridget—Well, loik at that now! Don't it show what an idication will do for ye? —Harvard Lampoon.

MISSES' AND JUNIOR SUITS.

IMPORTANT SELLING OF THREE BIG GROUPS.

We are making greater efforts than ever to gratify and satisfy growing girls and young women, and have assembled, we think, a collection of suits in this season's most distinctive models that will prove a source of delight to all who come here for Fall and Winter apparel. Two groups of suits for Saturday's selling are indicative of the big values that are obtainable here right along.

Group 1. Misses' and Junior Suits in fashionable Double Breasted, Mannish styles of plaids and fashionable colors, including cheviots in brown, navy, and black; skirts full plaited with fold on bottom; sizes 12 to 18; bust 30 to 36; skirt lengths 33 to 39; regular $15.00 Suits, priced for Saturday at 10.00

Group 2. Misses' and Junior Suits in most distinctive models; made of fine broadcloth and Lymanville cheviots in wine, green, brown, navy and black; also a large variety of worsteds in checks and stripes. These suits are cut in the most fashionable styles, splendidly tailored and beautifully finished. They are intended to sell at $30, but we secured this lot so we could make the price for Saturday's buyers 11.95

Women's 2.50 Shoes - - $1.79

WOMEN'S PATENT COLT SKIN SHOES with dull kid tops in button, lace and blucher styles; goodyear welted soles that insure comfort and long wear; several styles of toe shapes, all tipped; heels of medium height; shoes that readily sell at $2.50 a pair; special priced as a big feature for Saturday's selling at 1.79

GIRLS' SCHOOL SHOES of Soft Black Dongola, tipped with patent leather; good fitting and comfortable, substantial soles; button style only; large sizes with low heels; Saturday's special as follows:

Sizes 5 to 8; regularly $1.25, at ..... .95c
Sizes 8½ to 11; regularly $1.50, at 1.10
Sizes 11½ to 2; regularly $2; at 1.35
Sizes 2½ to 5½; regularly $2.50, at ... 1.98

YOUTHS' CALF SKIN SHOES; bright finish; good weight; durable soles; comfortable toe shapes with tips; sizes 13 to 2; offered on Saturday at only 1.00

Men's 3.50 Shoes - - $2.55

One of the best special lots of Men's shoes we have ever offered you is this lot of Douglas, Packard & Field, and other recognized makes of men's shoes which have been freshened up by the addition of new lots for Saturday's selling. These shoes as we have told you before are slightly imperfect but the hurts are so slight as to do no harm to the wearing qualities and detract nothing from the appearance of the shoes. Most of these are in patent leather, but there is a liberal assortment of gunmetal and box calf shoes in the lot; button, lace and blucher styles and a wide variety of shapes to choose from. No pair in the lot was made to sell at less than $3.00. Many are $4.00 shoes, and you can take your choice at only.... 2.55

BROWN TINTS IN MEN'S SUITS.

Nature has given the dyers and weavers their cue, and they have brought out Fall suitings in tints most appropriate to the season—beautiful autumnal browns, and these are among the most popular of this season's colorings in men's clothing.

There are many combinations in these wood and leaf browns—checks, stripes and plaids; some with tiny chalk-line effects; others with color tones.

You will find these beautiful browns sprinkled all thru our various lines at different prices. Choose from any of these lines at prices ranging from $6 to $35.

Overcoats in quiet, dressy effects with full backs, straight hanging or loose-shaped, in black, blue, brown or gray, in solid colors and various combinations of subdued stripes, plaids and checks; the variety is wide and most pleasing.

Raincoats up from $10.
Trousers up from $1.50.

SIRES AND SONS.

James Hazen Hyde told a friend in Paris that he was never coming back to this country.

In ten years John D. Rockefeller has derived $104,530,600 in dividends from Standard Oil—equal, roughly, to the total gold produced by the Transvaal last year.

Hon. Joseph B. Walker, of Concord, N. H., recently resigned the trusteesship of the State Hospital, a position he had zealously filled for more than sixty years.

F. Augustus Heinze, the copper millionaire, is said to be the only bank president in the United States who serves without a salary. He is head of the Mercantile National bank of New York.

After shaking hands during twelve hours with over 100,000 people in Lisbon Dr. Machado, the Portuguese Republican leader, had his right hand so swollen that medical aid had to be summoned.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Osler was severely cricised for his pronunciamento on old age he still retains the high respect of his confreres, and anything he has to say on the science of medicine is listened to with respect.

Every Christmas Lord Rothschild gives a brace of pheasants to every omnibus driver and conductor in London, and the drivers display the Rothschild colors on their whips. Last Christmas he gave away 17,000 brace of pheasants.

Ralph Peters, president of the Long Island railroad, is looked upon by men who work on the trains and tracks as one of themselves. Once a year he holds a reception in the depot at Long Island City, and in the course of the day all the men manage to drop in and shake hands.

Dr. George W. Hill, the eminent American mathematician and astronomer, for many years assistant in the office of the American Ephemeris at the United State naval observatory, has been made the American correspondent of the London Mathematical Society. Dr. Hill is often called the "American Archimedes," so profound is his knowledge of mathematical astronomy.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

It is said that Mrs. Grover Cleveland has a memory for races and names that is about the most remarkable on record.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor has been traveling extensively through Switzerland and other parts of the continent and England.

Of the eleven new stars found by astronomers the world over during the last twenty years eight were discovered by Mrs. Williamina Paton Fleming, of the Harvard observatory.

Mrs. Roosevelt has a broad gold bracelet set alternately with rubies, diamonds and sapphires, red, white and blue. She wears this ornament rarely except on national holidays.

Miss Mildred E. Phelps Stokes' wedding to Dr. Ransom S. Hooker will take place on Oct. 30 at the country home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, in Noroton, Conn., and not at Lenox, Mass., as at first planned.

Miss Isabel Skinner, of Holyoke, Mass., has one of the finest private collections of musical instruments in the country. Many of them she secured in the old world, and she has had them all repaired and put in good playing condition.

Mrs. Johanna Flagg Harper, of Worcester, Mass., the oldest woman in New England, recently celebrated her one hundred and fifth birthday. Mrs. Harper rises early in the morning, reads the newspapers and spends much of her time sewing, using glasses only a part of each day.

NEW NECKWEAR.

Among some of the new ties are small bows, very flat and finished at the front with a very small gold buckle. The buckles are frequently only clever imitations, though very neat. Oval and round designs only are seen.

Another neat bow for a collare is a soft ribbon which is tied in a small four-in-hand close to the collar, while beneath is a small bow about one inch below the tie. Both are diminutive in size, though extremely neat. This style is shown in white, black and dark blue, also cardinal red.

Another boow is made with double loops of very wide ribbon. The bow on top has the ends shirred and pushed into a small rosette in the centre of the larger bow. This bow is pinned to a lace collar or beneath the embroidery collar.

The white linen collar has a rival in the linen collars of tints which are almost white, and edged with white. Pale lavender, green, mauve and other delicate shades are worn with colored shirtwaists.

A Cure for Seasickness.

A chat with a hardy Breton fisherman brought forth this novel cure for seasickness. While the old man told of the storms that he had been through, the narrow escapes he had had, and the long journeys he had taken, he was interrupted by the question, "And seasickness? Were you ever sick?" "Never," replied the old man, "and I'll tell you the reason if you like to hear—I never went on any ship without taking a little mirror in my pocket. As soon as I felt the sickness coming on I looked steadily in the glass, and all symptoms passed away. I got the cure from my father, and I never knew it to fail." The receipt is easily trid, and if it does not convince the skeptical there is the consolation that no loss need be entailed in giving it a chance.—P. T. O.

OPENING

Home of Tru-Treds--Shoes that Fit All Over

Not Sold Elsewhere

We take unusual pride in announcing the Opening of our newly enlarged Shoe Store and cordially invite all to view the largest shoe store in the State and enjoy its air of hospitality.

The New Home of M. & B. Tru-Treds has double the space of the old, making 4140 square feet in all, enabling us to now carry a line of Tru-Tred Shoes for every member of the family so that all may have comfort, elegance and shapeliness combined in footwear, and providing the greatest conveniences for our patrons.

The Women's and Children's Department, which is secluded, is Colonial in architecture with white and mahogany decorations, handsomely furnished, brilliantly lighted and contains a well-appointed retiring room.

To add interest to the event, we have made new price marks on Tru-Tred Shoes for Children and Misses. But these reductions prevail only during our opening week.

CHILREN'S TRUE-TREDS with "Gripphast" hand-turned soles; button and lace, in kid, and patent colt with mat kid and white kid tops, and russets with both white and russet tops; sizes 2 to 5, all widths; regularly $1.25, reduced to ..... .98

CHILDREN'S TRU-TREDS in kid, patent colt and russet; sizes 5 to 11, all widths; regularly $2, reduced to 1.69

MISSES' TRU-TREDS—Safety heels; button, lace and blucher; patent colt, vici kid and box calf; sizes 11 to 2, all widths; regularly $2.50, reduced to 2.19

Our Glove and Hosiery Department.

With added room in our Women's Shoe Store we've trebled the space for Women's Gloves and Hosiery. And to further our Silk Hose Department we offer the following Special during our opening

"Onyx" Black Hose, pure silk lisle feet, regularly $1.50, reduced to $1.19.

NUGGETS.

Whatever you are, out with it.

The way to gain freedom is to give it.

A great thing can only be done by a great man, and he does it without effort.

Leisure is sweet to those who have earned it, but burdensome to those who get it for nothing.

It is natural for us to step aside for a determined man, a man with an iron will and bold self confidence.

Any kind of an excuse goes with mother, but when a boy can fix up an excuse that will go with father he shows rare genius.

Pick up a few bits of information every day, take care of your health and live a long time, and you will know a whole lot before you die.

The greatest enemy the body has is fear. It is fatal to every function and to every secretion and physical process. It demoralizes everything it touches.

Multitudes of people do not half respect their work. No one can make a real success of his life when he is all the time grumbling or apologizing for what he is doing.—Success.

GOWN GOSSIP.

Surplice effects continue and will be varied, like the other styles of the past season, by their trimmings.

The round waist is perhaps the most popular cut for a foundation, as it permits of so much variety in the method of decoration.

The ornate appearance of the new waists, whether they are parts of the suit or separate blouses, is in direct ratio to the simplicity of the skirt. They are fairly loaded with decoration.

Mousquetaire sleeves are one of the season's chief offerings. They are beautifully shaped, tapering toward the elbow very gradually from the shoulder and then from the elbow down more abruptly.

Most of the skirts, whether of princess cut or otherwise, are plain and full, so that they hang in irregular folds, and they are gathered or laid in inch deep plaits at the waist, but seldom stitched for more than two or three inches.—New York Post.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

An orator ought to be a man of his word.

Sound advice doesn't always have a pleasant sound.

Money talks—and it's usually in a hurry to say good-by.

Hens go about without shoes, no matter how often you shoo them.

How a man does hate to exchange good money for a receipted bill.

Milk of human kindness has nothing in common with the cream of society.

While the world may owe every man a living, it requires a strenuous effort on his part to make the collection.—Chicago Daily News.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

When ironing, try polishing the iron with the inside wrapper of a bar of soap.

Wash zinc bath tubs occasionally with a hot solution of vinegar and salt; then rinse them at once in clear hot water.

Mud stains on the bottom of a white linen skirt can be removed by brushing with a stiff brush dipped in weak javelle water.

A very satisfactory way to clean rugs after they have been hung on the line and beaten is to brush them carefully with a whisk broom dipped in gasoline.

Glass bottles may be cleaned by using fine coal ashes, or wood ashes are better, with a little washing powder and warm water, shaking the bottles thoroughly. Alcohol is also good, but rather expensive as a cleaning fluid.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell will begin her American tour about the middle of November.

Mary Mannering is to open with "Glorious Betsy" in a few weeks in New Jersey.

S. Miller Kent has started his season in the title role of "Raffles," formerly played by Kyrle Bellew.

Messrs. Cohan and Harris are going to build a theatre in Providence, R. I., which will be devoted to vaudeville.

Fannie Ward has been engaged for the leading part in "A Fool and a Girl," by David Wark Griffith, which James K. Hackett will produce in Washington. Miss Ward made a most pronounced success in the leading role of "In the Bishop's Carriage" in London.

His Answer.

"I wouldn't marry you if you were the last man on earth," she declared.

"You bet you wouldn't," the mean man replied. "I would be in a position then to take my pick."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Second Mosquito—Altogether so! Some effort ought to be made to exterminate them.—Life.

Special Department Accounts

The Plainfield Trust Company begs to announce that from October 1, 1907, 4 per cent. interest will be paid on accounts of $5 or more, without limit, in the Special Department.

The Company has been receiving very good rates on its loans for some time past, and in line with its declared policy of allowing depositors to share liberally in its earnings, has decided to increase the rate of interest paid on Special Department accounts from 3½ per cent. to 4 per cent. Deposits made before October 4th will draw interest from October 1st.

"CENTRAL PARK"

Was — Is — Will Be

IT WAS, only about a year ago, just a pretty farm.

IT IS to day the finest building site in Plainfield, with broad avenues macadamized their entire width, concrete curb, sidewalks, trees, gas, electric light, in fact all improvements. Nearly $100,000 expended in new and handsome dwellings, now ready for the market.

WHAT IT WILL BE we hardly dare predict, with contracts out for even more extensive improvements and twelve more handsome residences.

Central Park is that beautifully situated tract bounded by Park, Prospect, Hillside and Thornton Avenues.

Lots selling rapidly—Prices very low—Great investment or speculative opportunities.

P. O. S. OF A. OFFICERS.

Fred A. Pope, of Somerville, Is Chosen at the Richmond Convention.

The Patriotic Order Sons of America, in session at Richmond, Va., on Wednesday elected the following officers: National president, William E. Valliant, Camp 34, Maryland; national vice president, Fred W. Alexander, Comp 4, Virginia; national master of forms, Fred a Pope, Camp 43, Somerville, N. J.; national secretary, Charles H. Stees, Camp 688, Pennsylvania; national assistant secretary, Louis F. Stees, Camp 688, Pennsylvania; national treasurer, O. B. Wetherhold, Rev. D. E. Rupley, Camp 285, Pennsylvania; national conductor, A. L. Thompson, Camp 9, Conecticut; national inspector, James W. Allison, Camp 6, District of Columbia; national guard, Newton L. Grubb, Camp 22, Delaware; national medical examiner in chief, Dr. P. N. K. Schwenk.

Chattanooga was chosen as the next place of meeting. By a unanimous vote it was decided to purchase "Stratford," the estate of the Lees, in Westmoreland county, Vo., and to request the President of the United States to allow visitors within the grounds of Mt. Vernon without paying a fee. A committee was appointed to erect a monument to Past National President G. E. Stees, of Pennsylvania.

CENTRAL BAPTISTS ELECT.

Sunday-school Association Also Chooses Officers.

The Central New Jersey Baptist Association closed its seventy-ninth anniversary in the Baptistown Baptist church yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Samuel B. Williams, of Washington, was moderator, and the Rev. John Hulshart, of Cherryville, clerk. Following are the new officers:

Moderator, the Rev. Johnson L. Miner, of Flemington; clerk, the Rev. John Hulshart, of Cherryville; treasurer, J. B. Losey, of Somerville.

The following officers were elected by the Sunday-school Association: President, E. L. Stevenson, of New Brunswick; vice president, J. W. Britton, of Flemington; secretary and treasurer, Philip Tunison, of Somerville. The eightieth annual convention will be held in the Livingston Avenue Baptist church, New Brunswick, next year.

J. S. Lunger Resigns Janitorship.

J. S. Lunger, who has been janitor of the Watchung public school in the borough since its erection several years ago, has tendered his resignation, to take effect October 1. The resignation is in the hands of the building and grounds committee of the borough Board of Education and will be accepted at the next meeting of that body. Erick Sohl, of this city, who is about to become a resident of the borough, has been appointed in Mr. Lunger's place, and following a confirmation by the board will enter upon his duties. Mr. Lunger has given no intimation of his plans for the future, and so far as can be learned his resignation is a personal matter, as he desires to make a change.

—The work of remodelling the West Second street fire house is well under way. The entire front of the structure has been taken down to make room for a more modern one. In the meantime the apparatus is kept in the rear of the house and exit and entrance is made through the alley.

FOWLER ADDRESSES AMERICAN BANKERS

CONGRESSMAN EXPLAINS CURRENCY CREDIT SYSTEM.

A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the credit currency commission appointed by the association, presented his report at the annual meeting of the American Bankers' Association at Atlantic City yesterday. The meeting was thrown open to debate, and argument pro and con followed. Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of New York, chairman of the committee on banking and currency, who has been fighting for a credit currency system for years, reviewed the commission's report.

When all objections had bee made Mr. owler replied in rebuttal, saying that virtually every country in the world save ours had a credit currency system providing for expansion and contraction when needed.

There is nothing new about the plan of the commission itself, it having been published long ago. It provides for a credit currency to be issued by the national banks under proper restrictions. Mr. Frame, a delegate from Wisconsin, and others have approved the measure and there has been talk that the measure would chiefly benefit Wall street. This was hotly denied by the commission's champions.

JERSEY RUBBER OUTPUUT AGGREGATES $22,824,737.

Thirty-eight Mills in State—Value of Boots and Shoes Placed at $2,628,318.

Nearly 3,000,000 pairs of rubber boots and shoes, with a value of $2,628,318, were turned out by the rubber mills of New Jersey during 1906, according to a bulletin just issued by the State bureau of statistics. More than 11,000,000 pounds of rubber hose was also turned out, with a value of $2,883,338.

There are thirty-eight rubber mills in the State. The total value of their products for the year 1906 was $22,824,737.

THE COOKBOOK.

A teaspoonful of strong coffee added to chocolate at the last minute will give it a delicious flavor.

To scale fish quickly cover with boiling water. Let it remain in the water just half a minute, then scrape with a knife and the scales will come off readily.

Pick out all the bones and mince a can of sardines. Add one-half as much chopped cucumber pickles. Season with salt and cayenne, and mix with mayonnaise dressing. Sserve on lettuce leaves.

Try serving cream cheese balls with the toasted bread or English muffins. Chop fine a Spanish red pepper and half a dozen olives, mix them with half a cream cheese, season with salt and a little paprika and form into balls.

TRAIN AND TRACK.

Trains on the Scottish highlands have been occasionally stopped by the force of the wind.

The storage capacity of the yards of the Pennsylvania railroad has increased 200 per cent. in ten years.

Steel box cars have been built recently when will weigh about 3,000 pounds less than wooden cars of the same size and capacity.

In every mile of railway there are seven feet not covered by rails. This consists of the small spaces left between the rails to allow for expansion.

Trinity People Thankful.

The presence of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at the Wednesday night prayer meeting, this week, delighted the hearts of every one there. The pastor not only made a few earnest remarks to his people, but offered a fervent proyer and closed the meeting with the benediction. Mr. Schenck appears to be stronger and expressed the opinion that he is now feeling more like his former self. This is very encouraging to his people, who have been greatly concerned about him during his long illness.

A Money Raiser.

Having completed his special work for the Y. M. C. A. at Gloucester, Mass., Charles B. Brown, formerly of this city, is now at Attleboro, Moss., where he will endeavor to raise $25,000 to complete the Y. M. C. A. building fund. Last spring Mr. Brown raised $25,000 for this association, and will now try to secure the remaining half needed. During July and August he raised about $14,000 at Gloucester.

Hospital Visitors Appointed.

Routine matters only were considered at a meeting of the women's auxiliary to the board of governors of Muhlenberg hospital this morning. Mrs. A. E. Lincoln, Mrs. David Moore and Mrs. H. M. Stockton were appointed visitors to the hospital for the month of October. No purchaser was appointed, as this work is now done by the treasurer, Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney.

WARREN CHAPEL'S RELIC

Bell Used as Train Announcer at R. R. Station to Call People to Church.

ONCE WAS FIRE ALARM

For Quarter of a Century It Was Property of Borough Department, Being Gift of President Johnson.

The new Warren chapel now nearing completion on Watchung avenue, in the borough, will contain one relic of more than ordinary interest. The bell to be suspended in the cupola, which has just been presented to the chapel, is the one used a great many years ago at the North Avenue station to announce the arrival and departure of trains. After its usefulness ceased in that capacity, the town outgrowing such primitive methods. President John Taylor Johnson presented the bell to North Plainfield for fire purposes.

It was used by the fire department across the brook for nearly a quarter of a century, and was abandoned about three years ago when a more modern method of giving alarms was adopted. The old bell was found to be too small to be used in connection with the Gamewell system, and a larger one purchased. At that time William Debele took possession of the old bell and during the past three years it has been stored away in his barn. When the members of Warren chapel planned to erect a new place of worship, Mr. Debele thought it would be an excellent idea to hang it in the cupola of the edifice. Securing the consents of others interested it was finally presented to the congregation.

The bell has been removed from Mr. Debele's place and within a few days will be put in position at Warren chapel. In connection with the history of the bell, some have believed it was the one that was suspended in the old West Second street fire tower, but others dispute this, and the weight of opinion seems to show that the bell was never used in the city. It is about twenty inches at the base and weighs nearly 200 pounds and will answer the new purpose for which it is intended.

FRESH AIR MEETING.

Officers of Netherwood Home Association for 1908 Named.

The Netherwood Fresh Air Association held its annual meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist church Thursday night. President Rev. E. M. Rodman was in the chair.

Reports on the past season's work were made by the treasurer, and the chairmen of the house, entertainment, building and grounds and devotional comittees. The officers and chairmen of the committees for 1908 are as follows:

President, Rev. E. M. Rodman; first vice president, George E. Hall; second vice presidents, J. D. Loizeaux and J. F. Parker; secretary, Benjamin Hadley; treasurer, D. M. Runyon; chairmen of committees: House, Mrs. Herbert Henry; entertainment, Herbert Henry; finance, George A. Chapman; buildings and grounds, J. D. Loizeaux; devotional, Mrs. F. G. Hawkins.

Y. M. C. A. ALLEYS GO.

Swallowed Up by Enlarged Locker Room and Nobody Is Sorry.

The bowling alleys at the Y. M. C. A. have ceased to be. The enlargement of the locker room has swallowed them up.

There is no regret among the association bowlers. The alleys were the worst in the State; there was no runway, no room for the pin boys and the alleys themselves were in a thoroughly dilapidated state. One strip of board was found to be so rotten that it was unfit even for flooring. So there is no regret over the passing among the athletes; they are just pleased to get ample locker room.

Sent to Reform School.

William Kelley, Jr., of Westfield, alias "Young Doc," who not long ago stole $45 from Frutchey's drug store in broad daylight, and who later confessed his guilt to Chief of Police O'Neill, was ordered sent to the Jamesburg Reform school for a long term by the court at Elizabeth yesterday. "Doc" has been identified with the light fingered brigade for some time, but the consequences of his last performance will keep him quiet for a while anyhow.

Business Men's Class.

The business men's gymnasium class will start at the Y. M. C. A. on October 7. The business men are to have a special and attractive locker room, with steel lockers, for their exclusive use.

Miss Tupper, of Kansas, is spending some weeks at the home of her sister, Mrs. William A. Conner, of Hillside avenue.

MORE BLUE RIBBONERS

Miss Hooley and Messrs. McCutchen and Buttfield Win Honors at Horse Show.

THE CZAR TRIUMPHS

Piccadily Sweetheart, Willie Direct, Miss Banahan, Dorothea and Quaker Maid Are Winners.

Yesterday was another record breaker in attendance at the Morristown horse show, and like the first day, Plainfield horses were prominent in the prize awards. While showing one of his horses over the jumps Charles Pfizer was thrown. There was considerable excitement among the spectators, though the rider was unhurt.

The first class of the afternoon was for novice horses, and was won by Charles W. McCutchen's Piccadilly Sweetheart, a ribbon winner of the previous day. W. J. Buttfield's Miss Banahan won the blue over E. C. Rich's Amanda Baron in the class for single roadsters. Class 23, for saddle horses, saw the first appearance here of Miss Mabel B. Hooley's The Czar, a championship winner at the Philadelphia and Newport shows. The thoroughbred won easily over E. T. H. Tallmadge's Scott Montrose.

The honors taken by Plainfield horses were as follows:

Class 17, novice harness horses over 15.1 hands high, won by Charles W. McCutchen's Piccadilly Sweetheart; class 1, single roadsters, won by W. J. Buttfield's Miss Banahan; W. J. Buttfield's May Belle, third; C. W. McCutchen's Willie Direct, fourth; class 6, harness horses over 15 hands and not exceeding 15.3, Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Dorothea, fourth; class 23, saddle horses over 15.2 hands, won by Miss Mabel B. Hooley's The Czar; class 8, pairs of harness horses over 15.1 hands, Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Dorothea and Quaker Maid, second; Charles W. McCutchen's Piccadilly Sweetheart and Piccaninny Sweetheart, fourth; class 10, pairs of horses before appropriate vehicle, won by Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Quaker Maid and Dorothea; class 43, combination horses, Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Free Quaker, third.

ATHLETIC FIELD DAY FOR OLD HOME WEEK

WORLD'S CHAMPION HIGH JUMPER TO PARTICIPATE.

The construction of a fifth of a mile running track will be started Monday at Atlantic League Park, where the Elizabeth Old Home Week games are to be run off. Herbert E. Manvel, chairman of the athletic committee, announced yesterday that the entries are coming in at a great rate, and that the success of the games is already assured.

Among the entries which have already been received is that of Ray Ewry, the world's champion standing high and broad jumper. He has entered the three standing jumps, and in a personal letter to Mr. Manvel, states that he will do his best to beat his own world's record of 35 feet 8¾ inches for the event.

Upon the request of ConLeahy, of Ireland, world's champion at the running high jump, a special invitation jump has been arranged. Leahy's record for the event is 6 feet 4½ inches. The best jumpers of the country will be invited to compete against him.

A special invitation half-mile race will also will be run off. Melvin Sheppard, champion half-miler of America; Paul Pilgrim, Olympic middle distance champion; A. T. Bailey, N. Y. A. C., and Brownlow, Metropolitan champion, have actually sent in their entries, and that of J. B. Taylor, the colored crack from the University of Pennsylvania, is expected daily.

The folowing events have been decided upon: 100-yard dash, 300-dash, 880-yard run, two mile run, two mile relay (team of four), throwing discus (15-foot limit), three standing jumps.

Events open only to registered athletes of Union county: 100-yard dash, championship; one-mile relay, open to all athletic clubs; one-mile relay, open to departments of the Singer Manufacturing Company; one-mile relay, open to any factory in Union county.

Special invitation events: Half-mile scratch and running high jump, handicap. James E. Sullivan, president of the A. A. U., will referee the games.

TWENTY SIX INDICTMENTS

Somerset's Grand Jury Discharged by Judge Schenck After Filing Report.

INDICTED FOR MURDER

Richard Stryker to Be Tried For Killing His Father—Batch of Other Cases.

The Somerset County's Grand Jury, which began its labors on Tuesday at the opening of the fall term of courts, finished its work late yesterday afternoon and was dismissed by Judge Schenck, having found twenty-six true bills.

Joseph Eniglio was indicted on a charge of shooting James Ryan last June at Raritan with intent to kill and was arraigned and pleaded not guilty. His trial was set down for Tuesday, Oct. 15.

Salvatore Sferra, charged with stabbing Pietro Romano at Bound Brook with intent to kill, was indicted. He was arraigned and pleaded not guilty. His trial was also set for Oct. 15.

It is understood that Richard Stryker, charged with shooting and killing his father, John C. Stryker, at North Branch Depot, and Servasio Di Giovanni, charged with shooting and killing Joseph Sansone at Raritan, were indicted.

Angelo Cardolan, formerly a resident of Peapack and who was indicted two years ago on a charge of selling beer on Sunday at his place at Peapack, has pleaded not guilty to the charge and his trial has been set down for Oct. 14. He disappeared after he was indicted and was arrested last week in Peapack, where he had gone in the interests of a Brooklyn jewelry firm by whom he was employed. He has been released from custody in $300 bail.

"PEACEFUUL VALLEY IS AS DELIGHTUL AS EVER.

Revival of Sol Smith Russell's Great Success Wins Audience at New Plainfield.

Closest to nature and most delightfully refreshing of all the rural plays is "Peaceful Valley," Sol Smith Russell's greatest success, delighted the audience at the New Plainfield theatre last night. It is out of the beaten track of plays of this description. Its characters are not the stock puppet which have been paraded before patient audiences for so long under various guises. They are real flesh and blood persons, who do simple things in a simple way and who charm because of their simplicity.

The play has been mounted with lavishness and great care for detail. The setting of the third act reveals the interior of the "best parlor" in Hosea's house, and is a marvel of photographic perfection. There are a thousand and one little details in the arrangement of this scene which last night delighted the hearts of everyone who had ever been in one of those stiffly formal best rooms in a farm house.

Edward Saxon, the quaint character comedian who is playing the part of Hosea Howe, is a delightful player, whose speciality is eccentric parts and whose performance in this charmingly natural play has been favorably compared with the late Sol Smith Russell's. There is a melowness to his humor that is delightful, and he nvests the role with a quiet dignity and a subtle charm that assist in making this production one of the most delightful of the present season. Among the supporting company is Carson Bradford, a young southerner, who plays the leading juvenile role with bouyancy and distinction.

Special Musical Service.

Under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, organist, a special musical service will be held at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow night. The program will include an instrumental duet, organ and piano. Mr. Braider and Miss Alice C. Miller, and the following anthems, by Macfarlane: "Are Thou Weary," "Prayer" and "Ho! Every One." There will also be a duet, "Love Divine," Macfarlane, by Miss Anna Case, soprano, and Miss Jassamine Burd, contralto, and a contralto solo, "Come Unto Me," Hawley, by Miss Burd. This will be the first of a series of musical services to be given the last Sunday night of each month by the quartet choir. The anthems to be used are all by William Macfarlane, organist of St. Thomas' church, New York.

Miss Martin's Wedding Day.

The wedding of Miss Helen Sprague Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sprague Maartin, of Hillside avenue, to Henry David Bushnell, of Pittsburg, Pa., will be celebrated in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Saturday, Oct. 19. Mr. Bushnell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bushnell, of Central avenue.

JUDGE WARNS PARENTS

Will Enforce Law Against Those Who Allow Children to Run Wild.

NAUGHTY LADS THESE

Stole Candy, Chewing Gum and a Bicycle—Father Comes In For Individual Rebuke After Court Makes Statement.

Small boys with lax morals took up most of the city court session this morning. Judge Runyon used the two cases in which they figured as a text for a sharp warning to parents of mischievous children.

The prisoners were Frank Green, George Blount and Walter Halliwell, who figured in raids on a chewing gum machine and a candy wagon, and Dominick Marra and Thomas Callahan, who stole a bicycle from a house on West Front street. They were all turned over to Capt. Irwin, of the probation office.

After rebuking the boys, Judge Runyon said:

"Parents of such boys as these may not know it, but there is a law for them as well as for the boys. Under the New Jersey statutes it is now possible to bring parents who allow their children to run loose without proper control before the law. Parents of precocious young ones, whose prococity runs in the direction of thieving and disorder, will find themselves in serious trouble if they do not set themselves earnestly to the task of curbing the children's instincts in immorality. The law no longer holds the child alone responsible for perverted nature, and I purpose holding the parents to strict accounting in every case of this sort that is brought before me.

"Lax regard for the responsibility of parenthood is at the bottom of many of these cases, and hereafter I will use all the power conferred by the low to hold parents to their full duty toward their children, or see to it that they suffer for failure. I deside this statement of the law, which may not be any too well known, to be as widely published as possible."

The judge had scarcely stopped speaking when Lawrence Greer, father of one of the boys, spoke up and offered to bring witnesses to prove that his boy was something or other—presumedly an angel. He didn't get a chance to finish the sentence because the magistrate interrupted curtly.

"Mr. Green, do you doubt for a moment that your boy was mixed up in this thing?" he asked sharply. Mr. Green remembered that the boy had acknowledged being in the affair, and said he didn't. "Well, what sort of a father do you call yourself to stand here at this time, and attempt to uphold the boy?" demanded the magistrate.

Green hastily retired to the crowd outside the rail.

VICAR DROPS DEAD ON ANNOUNCING TEXT

"MY SOUL IS ATHIRST FOR GOD" HIS DYING WORDS.

The London papers of Monday, September 9, contained an account of the sudden death of Rev. Alfred Love, a vicar often preaching from the text, "My soul is athirst for God, yea, even for the living God. When shall I come to appear before the presence of God." He sat in the vestry during evening prayer, too ill to take part, yet insisted on preaching what proved to be his last sermon. Rev. Mr. Love was a brother of Rev. Edward Love, of this city. His first curacy was in the parish church of Wakefield, made memorable by Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield." When he left to go to London the Wakefield papers stated that the parish church was more crowded to hear the farewell sermon of Mr. Love than at any other time in the memory of the oldest inhabitants of the place. The last thirty years Mr. Love had ministered as vicar of St. Paul's Greenwich.

A great concourse of people listened to the bishop of the diocese as he spoke the last words of the service in St. Paul's church. The roads from the church to the cemetery were so filled with people that police were stationed at points along the route. The text of Sabbath evening, September 8, was a prayer. How speedy was its answer!

MISS HONEYMAN A BRIDE

Charming Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman Wedded to Kent Bender.

HER UNCLE OFFICIATES

Miss Helen La D. Jeffries Maid of Honor and Edward Maxwell Honeyman Best Man.

At noon today the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Van Doren Honeyman, at 54 Grove street, North Plainfield, was the scene of beautiful wedding festivities. Under a canopy of flowers their only daughter, Maud Louise, was wedded to Mr. Kent Bender, of Waterbury, Conn. The bride was given away by her father, and the ceremony, which was a double ring service, was performed by his cousin, Rev. William E. Honeymon, of Lincoln place.

The bride wore a lace robe and the customary veil caught up by lilies of the valley and myrtle, and carried bride roses. The maid of honor, Miss Helen La D. Jefferies, of Wayne, Pa., a classmate of the bride at Wellesley College, wore a white India mull robe trimmed with old Limerick point lace and a white hat with white plumes.

Miss Marguerite Lee, of the borough, and Miss Mary Zandt, of Jamesburg, gowned in white and wearing white lingerie hats, preceded the bridal party, forming an aisle with ribbons. The best man was Edward Maxwell Honeyman, brother of the bride.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served. Only relatives and a few friends of the family were present. Numerous gifts were sent to the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Bender will reside in Waterbury.

PARK COMMISSION BUYS FINE COLONIAL ESTATE.

The Old Clark Property to Be Westfield's Public Ground After Tuesday.

Clark's Lake, one of the old landmarks of colonial Westfield, which was at one time a part of the old Clark estate and dates back to 1734, has been purchased by the Westfield Park Commission, and will on Tuesday, October 1, be turned over to the town for park purposes. The lake is on North Broad street, adjoining the old Clark homestead on the right, and the Presbyterian church property on the left. The lake and the old Clark estate were last spring purchased by former Councilman Patrick Traynor. He intended to convert the lake into building lots, but the citizens of the town prevailed upon him to sell it. The money for its purchase was raised by popular subscription. The price paid was $2,000.

Rally Day in the West End.

Rally-day exercises will be observed at the West End tabernacle tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, when this program will be followed: Violin solo, Martin A. Korff; recitation, Miss Helen Taylor; rally song, Junior Christian Endeavor Society; recitation, William Penoyer; selection, choir; recitation, Miss Florence Taylor; vocal solo, William Hartley; recitation, Miss Carrie Penoyer; song, chorus of girls; recitation, Miss Grace Taylor; trio, "Under His Wings;" address, Rev. George A. Francis; song, "My Country 'tis of Thee;" benediction, Rev. George A. Francis. Souvenirs will be given all who attend.

Five Prizes Out of Six Entries.

A. C. Bechstein, of Park avenue, was a prominent exhibtor at the Essex County Fair, held at Newark, this week, where he entered his Orpingtons and Japanese Silkies. Out of six entries Mr. Bechstein was awarded five prizes in all, two firsts, three seconds and one fourth. The show was one of the best ever held in this section of the State, and the fact that the awards were made purely on the merits of the exhibits speaks well for the stock entered by Mr. Bechstein.

Lunch Room Not Beneficial.

The P. H. S. Debating Society held its first meeting Thursday, when the question, "Resolved, That the lunch room is beneficial to the Plainfield High School," was warmly debated. Miss Sara Sanderson and Miss Eleanor VanTuyl, representing the negative side, won. Miss Louise Nichol was elected secretary of the society to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Eleanor VanTuyl. Several new members were elected.

Emma Mack Arrested.

Emma Mack, who claims Brooklyn as her home, and a local hotel as her place of employment, was arrested in the borough last night on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. Failing to pay a fine of $2 imposed by Recorder Dolliver this morning, the woman was given two days in the borough lockup.

BOROUGH RATE IS $2.58

24 Points Increase Over Last Year in North Plainfield's Tax Rate.

VALUATION $3 112,950

Township Rate Is $2.40 As Against $2.30 Last Year—Valuation There $368,700.

The Somerset County Board of Taxation at Somerville today announced the tax rates for the various cities, borough,s towns and townships in the county. North Plainfield borougr's rate for the coming year will be $2.58 per $100 valuation, as against $2.34 last year. This increase of 24 cents is almost entirely due to the increased amount of money needed for State school purposes.

The rate in North Plainfield township is $2.40 as against $2.30 last year.

North Plainfield borough has $2,762,000 valuation in real estate, $361,750 in personal, which with deductions amounting to $10,800, leaves a net valuation taxable of $3,112,950. The number of polls assessed is 1,233. The school tax is $631,376 and the county tax $20,364.03.

The valuation of real estate in North Plainfield township is $313,300 and of personal property $55,400, making a total valuation of $368,700. The number of polls is 155. The State school tax is $747.77 and the county tax $2,411.97.

In Bridgewater township the value of real estate is $4,838,702 and of personal $1,100,498, deductions $70,400, making the net valuation taxable $5,868,801. The polls are 2,580, the school tax $11,902.71 and the county tax $38,393.01. The rate is $1.52 per $100 valuation.

The county rate is .66, which is four points lower than last year. The number of acres is 179,178. The real estate amounts to $19,303,436, the total personal is $3,836,267, which, with deductions of $201,306, makes a net valuation taxable of $22,929,381. The number of polls is 5,488. The school tax is $46,503.38 and the county tax $150,000.

SOME EXPLANATIONS AS TO PAVING WORK

WHYS AND WHEREFORES OF WORK THAT PUZZLE "SIDEWALK" EXPERTS.

To leave a way open for traffic, the concrete work on Park avenue, which is to be the foundation for the brick pavement, was "jumped" over a wide strip on the north side of Second street, yesterday. The half of the street concreted was dressed with a richer cement mixture to insure rapid setting, and will be thrown open to traffic on Monday. Then the other half will be concreted.

Contractor Meeker is still considering the advisability of using a concrete machine mixer on the job. The story, advanced as an explanation of the seemingly slow and cumbersome hand-mixing, that Street Commissioner Gavett objected to a machine mixer is not true in any degree. Mr. Meeker has not brought a machine mixer into the work simply because he hasn't felt sure that it would facilitate the work in any way. He has not given up the idea, however, and may decide to use a machine.

Some of the "sidewalk specialists," who are to street work what rocking-chair navigators are to yachting, have been wondering why half of Park avenue has not been torn at a time, leaving a strip open to traffic all the way. The idea is all right theoretically, but it wouldn't work out to the betterment of the brick-laying. The scheme would leave a fault in the pavement. On Front street, where the car tracks divide the roadway, it will be done, as it was on Watchung avenue.

George Egel Resigns.

George Egel, who has been in charge of the soda water fountain at L. W. Randolph's drug store on West Front street for a number of years, has resigned, the same to take effect today. Mr. Egel will associate himself with his father in the butcher business. He will be succeeded at the drug store by Frank Stewart, who has been connected with the soda department.

Women's Club Work.

Mrs. Edward S. Robinson, of Westfield, a former president of the Woman's Club, and one of the most active workers in that organization, has been appointed to the important position of chairman of the program committee at the State Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held in Orange, October 25 and 26.

OUTINGS FOR OVER 2,000

Surprising Reports Made at Annual Meeting of Netherwood Fresh Air Ass'n.

65,090 MEALS SERVED

Dean Rodman Re-elected President—Treasurer Runyon Shows Balance of $200 in the Treasury.

Officers were elected for the coming year and reports presented at the annual meeting of the Netherwood Fresh Air Association, held at the Park Avenue Baptist church. All the reports showed that the past year has been one of the most succesful in the history of the asociation, and much encouragement is given for the future.

One of the most interesting reports was that of the house committee. This showed that during the season just closed 1,860 children were entertained at the home and 549 mothers, making a total of 2,408. An idea of the amount of provisions needed to feed such an army can be gained from the statement that 65,000 meals were served, 2,856 quarts of milk and 8,173 loves of bread were consumed. There was one case of illness, and although the child was so critical that it was believed she would die, she recovered. During the summer a friend of the association donated a piano, which proved of great benefit.

The report of the treasurer, David M. Runyon, showed that all bills had been paid and thae there is now a balance of about $200 on hand. Miss Sara Curry, the matron of the home, presented an excellent informal report, showing the good work acomplished during the summer.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Rev. Erskine M. Rodman; vice presidents, George E. Hall, J. D. Loizeaux, James M. Parker; secretary, Benjamin Hadley; treasurer, David M. Runyon; chairman house committee, Mrs. Alfred Henry; chairman finance comittee, George A. Chapman; chairman builds and grounds committee, J. D. Loizeaux; chairman devotional committee, Miss Florence G. Hawkins.

MRS. JOSEPHINE L. POUND DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS.

Her Mind Gave Way Following Husband's Tragic Death.

Mrs. Josephine L. Pound, widow of George R. Pound, who was for many years one of Plainfield's leading citizens, died on Tuesday in the State Hospital, Trenton, where she had been an inmate for about thirteen years. She was one of the older residents of Plainfield and was well-known here. Following her husband's tragic death in 1894, her mind became affected and it was found necessary to remove her to the State Hospital.

Mrs. Pound was a native of Plainfield and always lived here prior to going to Trenton. Her maiden name was Josephine LaFetra, and she was an active member of the Society of Friends. She is survived by a sister, Mrs. James Merritt, formerly of this city, but now of New York, and a brother, who also resides in New York. Her former place of residence was on East Third street. The funeral service will be held from the Friends meeting-house on Watchung avenue tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Somerset Freeholders.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met yesterday at the stone arch bridge near the residence of former United States Senator John F. Dryden at Bernardsville and after viewing the bridge organized at the Somerset Inn. An appropriation of $350 was made toward erecting a stone arch bridge. The entire cost of the structure will be nearly $1,500, but the adjoining owners have agreed to build the bridge, and accept the appropriation of $350.

Can't rest at night with a bad back,

A lame, a weak or an aching one.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for bad backs.

They cure every form of kidney ills,

From common backache to diabetes.

They are endorsed by Plainfield people.

John W. Snedeker, of 244 East Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "While suffering with kidney troubles, I used to feel in the morning that my sleep had not done me a bit of good, and all during the day I would suffer with a dull backache. Matters ran along in this way for some time, and I began to be bothered more and more with that tired, languid feeling of weakness and depression. My mother advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and I did so with very encouraging results, as I am now well and entirely free from backache and that feeling of weakness. I sleep well at night and feel that my rest is beneficial."

One of our clients owed $48 between four people. His salary is $14 weekly; rent $12 monthly. To have paid $2 weekly to each creditor, combined with rent, would have left only $3 per week to meet expenses, buy clothing, etc.—an impossibility you will agree. He borrowed $50, paid all his creditors, made his future credit good, if ever needed; pays his rent, the loan payments, and has $9 each week to use as his judgment dictates.

A movement is under way to establish a permanent memorial for Thomas Bailey Aldrich at Portsmouth, N. H., where his boyhood days were spent. A committee has formed the Thomas Bailey Aldrich Memorial Association, which purposes to acquire the old house in that city which belonged to Mr. Aldrich's grandfather and to preserve it as a memorial museum.

The 101st anniversary of the old Meeting House at Weymouth, Atlantic county, will be celebrated Sunday.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

FOOTBALL.

The Orange Field Club will have a strong eleven on the gridiron this fall. Practice is being held regularly and the selection of the players will be made soon. The schedule committee is now at work arranging a strong list of games.

The prospects for a strong eleven at the Plainfield High School has never been better. The boys have been doing a lot of hard work since they were first called out for work, and everyone has shown up well.

Athletics at Yale University for the year ended September 1, 1906, according to a report given out today by the finance comittee of the Yale Financial Union, netted an increase of $4,000 in the four major branches, as compared with the receipts for the previous year. While the financial year ends in September the annual report of the financial union is not completed until about one year later, which accounts for the fact that today's report is for 1906. Football showed a gain of $13,000.

Francis Burr, Harvard's left guard and great punter, reported for football practice yesterday on Soldiers' field. He is in fine shape, having spent the summer climbing in Switzerland. Waldo Pierce is expected to come out tomorrow, and then all Harvard's veterans will be on hand. Other promising candidates to report for practise this afternoon were Barney, who played centre on the team two years ago, but who has since been ineligible; Mason and Gary, who are candidates for fullback, and Fish, guard on this year's freshman team. The practise this afternoon consisted only of signal work and punting, at which Burr showed his old-time form.

Although the Michigan team has been at work but a week Yost's pupils put up a better exhibition of football in their first scrimmage of the year yesterday than did the team that went down to defeat before Pennsylvania last November. In about fifteen minutes of play the varsity, minus several stars, riddled the scrubs' defense for touchdowns, a beautiful forward pass and resultant run of forty-five yards for a touchdown by Wasmund being the feature of the clash. Wasmund, the former Lafayette halfback, was used at quarter throughout the practise and made a brilliant showing. His work in returning punts and in tearing off quarterback runs was a revelation.

Funeral of Mrs. H. S. Edwards.

The funeral service of Mrs. Harriette S. Edwards, widow of Captain George Edwards and daughter of the late Rev. Jesse Pound, was held from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry R. Phillips, on Rockview avenue. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, of which Mrs. Edwards was a member, conducted the service. A quartet, comprising Mrs. Theodore Mantz, Miss Etta Yeager, William J. Tallamey and Joseph C. Martin, sang a portion of the service. The body was taken to Rossville, S. I., for burial in the family plot.

GOLF.

C. B. Macdonald, of New York, the amateur champion of the United States in 1895, has been invited to become a member of the rules of golf committee of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club. The committee met yesterday and reconsidered its previous decision of September 24, only to ask the United States Golf Association to forward suggestions for the consideration of the committee in revising the rules of golf, and adopted a resolution in favor of inviting American representation on the committee.

In selecting Mr. Macdonald the St. Andrews Club has done so of its own accord, as his name had not been suggested by the United States Golf Association in the latter's communication sent abroad during the summer.

Daniel Chauncey, president of the United States Golf Association, said that, while the appointment was a surprise to him, as the association had not asked for a personal representative, the selection of Mr. Macdonold would undoubtedly be satisfactory. The latter has been a member of the Royal and Ancient Club ever since he was at St. Andrews University. It is also worthy of mention that Mr. Macdonald has twice been chairman of the United States Golf Association rules committee. As the matter stands at present Mr. Macdonald, who is not an official of the association, has no power to act, unless invested with authority by the governing body.

In all probability some official word will shortly be received from the other side concerning the selection of Mr. Macdonald, and then it will be time for action. There is to be an executive committee meeting in October, when that body will have an opportunity to go over the many suggestions that have been received relative to changes in the code.

Mr. Macdonald said last night that unless requested to do so by the United States Golf Association he would not accept the election to the St. Andrews rules committee. He added, however, that it would give him great pleasure to be an official representative of this country. He stated that he would have to go abroad in the spring and could time his trip so as to attend the May meeting of the foreign committee at which the rules are to be amended.

The executive committee of the United States Golf Association may decide not to take any official action at present, preferring to wait for the annual meeting of the association, which will be held in January. At that time the question of rules will undoubtedly be thrashed out, and it would then be time enough to give Mr. Macdonald instructions, or at least empower him to show the foreign golfers just where, in the opinion of Americans, changes are most needed.

A well known authority on the game states that among those who play golf in the proper spirit there is little call for alterations in the code. He also adds that those making the most commotion are hair-splitting lawyers and wranglers.

Forty-two cards were returned in the thirty-six hole handicap for players fifty-five years old or over Thursday at the Apawamis Club. Dr. C. A. Morrow won the cup for the best net score of the morning with 99—20—79, and J. D. Foot the similar prize in the afternoon with 94. The winners of the gross score prizes were Dr. Carl Martin, 177, and W. H. Brown, of Philadelphia, 187. Two cups for the best net scores went to E. C. Converse and Dr. William Jarvie. H. P. Dixon, of the Wallingford Golf Club, holed a full iron shot for 2 on the home green.

THIS SPLENDID FALL MILLINERY SHOW.

Did you come to our millinery opening last week? Is so we can feel sure your friends will also come to see these beautiful hats—for there was nothing but praise heard on all sides—and no wonder, the praise was well merited. Miss Strohuber worked with unbounded energy—working by day—dreaming at nights of nothing but hats, and Miss Strohuber has talent recognized by leading milliners in New York. Such energy by so high class a milliner in not only bringing out the newest, but at a moderate price, was bound to result in winning your approval. We believe those who visited this millinery shop will advertise Tepper hats this fall. New hats are being turned out every day, and you will enjoy to visit here though many of the first lot are gone, there are others in work just as pretty to take their place.

AMUSEMENTS.

At Proctor's theatre, Elizabeth, next week, another all star bill will be presented; among the performers will be Nita Allen and Company in her funny and novel sketch entitled Car Two—Stateroom, one, Carlisles Ponies, Monroe, Mack and Lawrence in their hilarious offering, "How to Get Rid of Your Mother-in-Law." LeRoy and Woodford in rapid fire conversations, Rigolett Brothers, Dora Ronca and others and splendid animated pictures.

At Proctor's theatre, Newark, next week, will be found Jole and Johnson and a bevy of clever girls in dance, music and songs; Valerie Bergere, the chic Broadway favorite, in a sketch entitled "A Bowery Camille." Thomas Q. Seabrooke will sing a few songs in his characteristic style, Bakers troupe of Arabs, nine in number, in athletic sports; Watson, Hutchings and Edwards in their laughable comedy sketch; Leon Rogee, an old world musical mimic and whistler, will make his debut in this country; Frances Knight, a singing comedienne; Albert Kartelli, in his novel and daring balancing act on the high wire, and animated pictures.

GIFTS FOR UNION COUNTY.

Mrs. Emily Williamson Will Make Formal Presentation of Portraits Wednesday Next.

A presentation will take place next Wednesday at the courthouse at Elizabeth before the Court of Special Sessions convenes.

Mrs. Emily E. Williamson will give to the county of Union the splendid oil portrait of her father-in-law, the late Chancellor Benjamin Williamson, and also the portrait of his father, Isaac H. Williamson, who was the last Federalist Governor of New Jersey and held the office twelve years, from 1817 to 1829. There will be addresses by Mrs. Williamson, donor of the pictures, and by County Judge Edward S. Atwater, Prosecutor Nicholas C. J. English and former Governor Foster M. Voorhees.

Invitations to attend the ceremony were sent out yesterday by Mrs. Williamson to the members of the Union County Bar Association, county officials, the Mayor and City Council of Elizabeth and to several prominent men in Elizabeth and Newark. The Board of Freeholders have already been invited.

Warren G. O. P. Platform.

Belvidere, Sept. 28.—The Warren county Republican convention, which Thursday nominated George A. Angle, mayor of this place, for the Assembly, approved the party's State platform; declared in favor of the preservation of one day in the week as a day of rest for all classes of workers; advocated a law creating a commission to regulate rates and fines on railroads and trolleys; urged an act forbidding the issuing of railroad passes to any one except railroad employes and their families; asked for an act forbidding railroad companies from owning or operating traction lines; an act prohibiting the watering of stock, or the raising of funds by any corporation in excess of actual cost of construction of plant; an act taxing franchises of traction companies for the benefit of municipalities, and pledged undivided support to both the candidate for Governor and member of the Assembly.

Members of the board of directors stated Thursday that the site for the Young Men's Christian Association's new home in Camden will touch on Broadway, Federal and Carmen streets, the association having purchased the Sharpless property.

POLITICAL NOTES

The Union County Republicans will get their campaign under way in a few days. County Chairman Frank H. Smith is at work arranging with the Republican State Committee for several meetings in the county, at which J. Franklin Fort will be present. It is probable also that several meetings will be held at which Republicans of national prominence will be present, as Union is recognized as one of the counties where the fight will be closest. Judge Fort will be heard in this county probably three times if not more, twice in Elizabeth and once in Plainfield.

Daniel A. Dugan, a lawyer and former city clerk of orange, has been appointed manager of the press bureau of the Democratic State committee. Mr. Dugan has been private secretary to Speaker Lethbridge of the Assembly.

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS WAR OVER WATER ACT.

Leader Klenert Says Speaker Lethbridge is Dummy and Draws Pictures.

It has just leaked out that, after the House session of last Wednesday, Speaker Lethbridge had a wordy encounter, in which each called the other names.

Klenert sought to get the House committed toa request that the Senate send back the potable water bill, which Paterson did not want and which was shoved through the House at thel ast session by orders from Essex county. When the motion was put, Mr. Klenert supposed it had been carried. There was an uproar in the House, and no one heard the speaker announce the decision.

Later, Klenert learned that the speaker had directed the journal clerk to mark the motion lost. He approached the speaker and asked him about it. Speaker Lethbridge is alleged to have replied: "You are a dummy. You do nothing but sit in your seat and draw pictures."

Mr. Klenert is reported to have replied: "Well, I do not take my orders from the boss of Essex county. Thank the Lord, I am not owned as you are." Friends of both kept the participants from going further, and tried to suppress the story.

WIFE BEATER SPANKED.

Bayonne Recorder Gives Husband Taste of Own Medicine.

A novel sentence was imposed upon a wife beater in the Bayonne police court yesterday, when Recorder Lazarus ordered the prisoner to be publicly spanked in the court room. At the order of the recorder Detective Hassmeyer grabbed the prisoner and in a jiffy had him across his knee. His shoes which had been removed, were used to paddle him until he howled for mercy.

The recorder, calling a halt in the proceedings, asked the man's wife if she wouldfo rgive him, but she refused. The prisoner fell upon his knees and begged her to take him back, but the wife was obdurate and refused to listen to hisp leadings, so the recorder remanded himt o jail.

The prisoner was John Morton. His wife, Mary, had him arrested for beating her. Both her eyes were blackened andh her face was swollen, and she exhibited twenty bruises and marks on her body, which, she said, had ben inflicted by her husband on Thursday night when he came home drunk.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

From the present condition of affairs, the $800 police appropriation, which will appear on the Republican ticket at the election held in November, should be carried by a large majority. This amount will provide an officer on duty every night and give the residents some protection. Putting a special officer on duty spasmodically has no lasting benefit. Everyone knows when he goes on and when he is taken off.

The summer season is fast waning and the summer boarders are beginning to return to their homes in New York and other places. The Homestead, however, is one of the few places which does not feel the affect of the exodus. The Misses Bouches' popular house is a favorite with those who enjoy the fall season.

Services will be held at the usual hours at the Baptist church tomorrow: Sunday-school, 9:30 a. m.; morning preaching, 10:45; B. Y. P. U. meeting, 7:15.

Mrs. Elias Hyams and family, who have been spending August and September here, returned to their home in New York yesterday.

"The Gingerbread Man" is the attraction offered by Manager Counihan at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Rev. Mr. Diederick will lead the weekly prayer and praise meeting at the Methodist church tonight.

The local ball team is playing at Bound Brook this afternoon.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The masquerade ball held in Monroe Pyatt's barn was the success of the season, the floor being so crowded one could not dance with any degree of comfort. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, the Misses Florence and Mildred Johnson, Miss Fannie Mundy, Miss Pyatt, the Misses Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elliott, Philip Smith, Wilbur Dorland, Andrew Conway, Arthur Randolph and Monroe Pyatt. Some of the costumes were unique and comical and caused great amusement. Two year men dressed up as rag dolls kept the party in a constant roar of laughter. At midnight refreshments were served, after which the dance was resumed until 2 o'clock.

Rev. A. C. T. Attlee will preach as usual in the Baptist church, both morning and evening tomorrow. Subject for morning consideration, "The Bible the Word of God;" evening subject, "Blind Bartemeous;" Christian Endeavor at 7:30, will be led by the pastor, topic, "City Missions."

A special meeting of the finance committee of the Good Government Club will be held in Temperance Hall this evening.

Mrs. W. E. Smith has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Wilbur Dorland, of Larchmont, Manor, New York.

Mrs. Andrews, who has been visiting relatives here, has returned to her home in Pennsylvania.

Catholic services as usual in Washington Hall at 8:30 tomorrow evening.

HOMAGE TO DEAD MAYOR.

Business Stops in Paterson While Funeral Is Held.

The funeral of Mayor John Johnson, of Paterson, took place yesterday, and was the most largely attended in Paterson since the obsequies of Vice President Hobart. The City Hall and church bells were tolled, and both public and private business was suspended during a part of the day.

After a brief private service, which was held at the late home of the Mayor, in Ward street, the body was escorted to St. John's Roman Catholic church. A solemn requiem mass was celebrated by the Very Rev. Dean McNulty, who was assisted by two priests. Dean McNulty delivered a brief eulogy on the life of Mayor Johnson. After the coffin to the Holy Sepulchre cemetery, where the burial took place.

HEY-DIDDLE-DIDDLE ACTIVITY OF MILK

DEALERS SEND THE PRICE TOWARD THE MOON—TO ORGANIZE.

Milk and cream will be advanced in price on October 1. At a meeting last night the dealers decided to raise the price of the former from 4 and 8 cents a pint and quart, respectively, to 5 and 9 cents. Cream will be 14 cents a half pint, instead of 12 cents.

Slips explaining the reasons for the advance will be pasted by milkmen on their bottles. Higher prices of feed and labor are advanced as the reasons for the raise.

The dealers have decided to organize permanently. The organization wil be effected at a meeting to be held shortly. A committee is preparing a constitution and by-laws.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"Buster Brown," one of the master successes of the year in the somewhat over-crowded field of musical comedy, will come here Octo. 2. Buster Brown needs no introducing incomiums, we all know his face —all the children have worn clothes fashioned after his. It needs only be said therefore that this is a third and all new edition of the musical comedy in every feature. The scenery, costumes, music and songs are spic and span with newness, while the cast headed by Jimmie Rosen, the little chap who fairly exudes mirth, is away and ahead of any yet seen we are promised. Buster should be largely welcomed.

Any child calling at the theatre between 2:30 and 4 p. m., Monday, Sept. 30, will receive a mask of Buster Brown free.

"The Gingerbread Man" will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight by a strong company, including Jeanne Palmer, Misses Lillian Mattice, Rose Murray, Charls Gallagher, Charles Morgan, Gus Pixler, Charles J. Quinn, Eugene Kelly, Robert Parkins. The chorus numbers over fifty voices and is said to be the strongest from a vocal standpoint, now associated with any road attraction. Nixon & Zimmerman, with their usual liberality, have equipped this company most lavishly both as to costuming and scenic environments.

The Jeffersons will appear in "The Rivals," at the New Plainfield theatre Monday night.

NEW SCHOOL FOR RAHWAY.

Present Facilities Inadequate and Population Increasing.

The Rahway Board of Education Thursday night voted unanimously to build a new school and appointed a committee to secure a desirable site and plans for suitable modern building in which the High School will be located, as well as the meeting rooms of the board. Every school building in the city is overcrowded, regardless of the fact that two annex buildings have lately been pressed into service, the enrollment this year being 1,405, against 1,361 last year. That the increase will continue is evident, as thirty-seven new houses are in course of construction.

Amboy Banker Pleads Not Guilty.

Joseph Deutsch, the absconding banker, caught in Holland and extradited to New Brunswick, pleaded not guilty in court yesterday to seven indictments charging him with embezzling amounts ranging from $25 to $80 from foreigners who deposited money in his bank at Perth Amboy. His case will be tried on Oct. 8.

THE PENALTY OF FAME

By GEORGE T. PARDY.

(Copyright, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"But I came on purpose to interview you, and my editor will be so cross if you refuse to talk, and I can't make a story up" she said, plaintively.

She was good looking, and no doubt aware of the fact. But had she been Venus herself I should have pursued the same course.

"I am overwhelmed with regret," I observed stiffly.

"It's awfully unkind of you," said she.

"It's the merest self-defense," I responded.

"Now, that tiger skin?" she suggested, insinuatingly. "I'm sure a tale hangs to that!"

"Of course a tail hangs to it," I replied irritably. "Most tigers have tails. What are you writing there, may I ask?"

Only that you conversation abounds in flashes of brilliant wit, Mr. Horsford—that is all."

"All!" I groaned.

"I should have thought you'd have liked it, you know. Most people do. Now those lovely oriental vases? I suppose one of your ancestors brought them home from—"

"Bought 'em from a Jew!"

"Ah! you poke about in old shops. How interesting! You may often be seen, I expect, peering in the—"

"Never, madam."

"Oh, what a love of a cat! He's your great companion and friend, I'm sure!"

"It's the landlady's, and I kick the beast out whenever I see it."

"Ah, perhaps you suffer from nerves? Most poets do, of course. You must have perfect rest and quiet to—"

"I'm as strong as a horse, thank you."

"And you live quite at home in these lovely rooms?"

"When I can command solitude, madam, I enjoy it."

"Oh, thank you so much! I'll just put that down. It's so characteristic of genius, isn't it? You love to be alone with your thoughts, don't you? I know the feeling so well."

"You do not appear, however, to appreciate it in others."

"Not quite so fast, please; I can't get it all down."

Controlling myself with an effort, I said in firm tones:

"I distinctly forbid you to put in a word about me!"

"Oh, there'll be nothing you can possibly object to, Mr. Horsford—there won't indeed. Do any of your family write poetry besides you?"

"Do any of your family besides you do interviewing?" I retorted. "If so, I should think you are an orphan."

She laughed gleefully and wrote hard for a minute or two.

"There, I've got that," she observed cheerfully. "Now is there anything else that you'd like to tell the public through me?"

I opened the door and stood with my hand on the knob.

"About your books, for instance. "How much do you get for—"

"No, thank you," said I with emphasis.

"Or your favorite pursuits?"

"Good morning," said I, opening the door wider.

"Oh, Good morning, Mr. Horsford! Oh, who's that over the mantelpiece? What a sweet face! I'm sure it must be—ah, a secret, is it? Then I mustn't ask, must I? How very interesting, though; I must just refer to it."

"If you do—"

"Well, good morning. Thank you ever so much. I'll be sure and send you a paper."

Now the above is a full and true record of what passed. The following is an extract from what was published:

Mr. Horseford, when he is at home dwells in the daintiest of apartments. At a glance you can tell that you are in the sanctum of a skilled collector of objects d'arts, and your host's deep blue eyes light up with a radiant gleam as he lovingly fondles his priceless oriental pottery. The wall is decked with the skin of a magnificent tiger—the Horsfords have always been mighty hunters, and Mr. Horsford himself can handle a rifle as deftly as he can turn a sonnet. On the cushions of a luxurious sofa there reposes a splendid Persian cat, evidently the companion, friend and pampered pet of its gifted master. Over the mantelpiece hangs the portrait of a beautiful girl, and it is easy to see that this exquisite, artistic gem is not the least of Mr. Horsford's treasures. Space forbids us to catalogue the thousand and one delightful objects which adorn this choice retreat. The tout ensemble is fragrant of lettered ease and wide culture. Nor is the genius loci one whit out of harmony with the surroundings which his matchless taste and untiring diligence in the search for curios have gathered together from the four corners of the earth. Mr. Horsford's slight figure tells, indeed, of a delicate physique and of the sensitive, ever-nervous temperament always associated with supreme poetic gifts. But the brain of the man imparts boundless energy to its frail tenement; the soul looks out alert, passionate, indomitable, through the large eyes, now strangely keen, now so ineffably sympathetic. Sayings full of penetration, hints of overflowing sympathy with all the sorrows and troubles which afflict the world, mingle and alternate with the most brilliant flashes of wit or the rapier-thrusts of the most refined and courteous badinage. Mr. Horsford's, indeed, is a personality which must be encountered to be appreciated; for although he may be studied to some degree in his own priceless poems, yet the man himself seems something above and beyond even the finest of his work, a presence, an influence—in a word—a soul, such as it is refreshing and inspiring to meet amid the grays and drabs of this prosaic age. Never shall we forget the precious hours which Mr Horsford so kindly spared to us, and we trust that we have not altogether failed to communicate to our readers something of what we were privileged to enjoy when Mr. Horsford made us welcome to his home.

This appeared one morning. In the afternoon I strolled, according to my custom, down to the club. A circle of men sat around the fire. No sooner had I entered, which I tried to do in an unostentatious manner, than I was greeted in this way:

"Excuse my courteous badinage, Horsford, but how's the frail tenement?"

"Blue eyes off color, a bit, eh, old man?"

"Here, come over and be ineffably sympathetic, I've come an awful howler over the Derby."

"I say, Horsford, old man, you must have made yourself infernally pleasant to the girl. What did you really say, now?"

"Out with it, Hors? None of your sly rapier thrusts, y' know."

"Take care, Fred, he's passionate and indomitable."

"Who's the party over the mantelpiece? Oh, you old thief!"

"Waiter—bring a cat for Mr. Horsford. He needs a companion and friend."

And then from all of them, a loud chorus, a subdued chant:

"A presence, an influence—in a word—a soul!"

And so the matter stands. I suppose nothing can be done.

KEEPING SHOP BY MACHINE.

Ingenious Scheme of Dutchman Did Not Always Work.

Near Amsterdam a tourist who does not know a word of Dutch recently saw in a shop window the announcement "English spoken." He entered the shop. "English, sir?" asked a youth behind the counter. Then he picked up a cylinder, placed it in a gramophone and the instrument duly sung out—but in German: "Sir (or madam), the proprietor, who speaks German, will be telephoned for and will return to the establishment in less than five minutes. Will you please be seated?"

Being familiar with German, the tourist seated himself. In came the proprietor, who it turned out, spoke excellent English. The stranger asked why the gramophone did not talk English. The explanation was: "It's my stupid assistant; I have a cylinder on which is recorded the message in English; he used the wrong one.

"There is no excuse for him," continued the annoyed proprietor. "My English cylinder is tinted red at the ends and the German one blue. Lucky for me, sir, that you knew German, else I might have lost an esteemed patron."

Banker's Remarkable Will.

One of the most remarkable wills on record was that left by Herr Hugo Hecht, a wealthy Berlin banker and dog fancier, who, although the possessor of a large fortune, had been cursed by nature with the stature of a dwarf. His lack of inches so preyed upon Herr Hecht's mind that he became very eccentric in the last years of his life, and was ever haunted by the fear that his little girl might inherit his deformity. By his will he left instructions that his prize collie dog Bruno should be the constant playmate and companion of little Alice and that at the death of his widow his only child should receive his entire fortune, "provided that she had grown as tall, or taller, than the dog when extended, standing on its hind legs." If the child's height failed to exceed that of the dog, or, if Bruno died before little Alice grew up, all the money save $1,000 a year was to be divided among certain charitable institutions. Herr Hecht died when Alice was three years old. The little girl is now four and, much to the delight of her friends, is growing rapidly. She and the dog are measured side by side once a month.

Sparrow Rides in Car.

A sparrow that makes its home up on North avenue, near Charles street, has attracted much attention recently by riding downtown on a St. Paul street car each morning as far as the Hotel Belvedere.

The bird takes the same car each morning about ten o'clock. Just as it turns the corner at North avenue the little bird flies in the window and perches himself on a brace above the motorman's head. It stays there until Chase street is reached, and then flies out of the vestibule toward the Belvedere.

It is not known positively what his object is in getting off at the same place every morning, but several of those who have noticed the bird's actions have come to the conclusion that there is a lady bird in the case, and that there is a love affair going on in one of the trees in that neighborhood. However, she has not been seen yet, but the conductor is on the lookout, and expects every morning to see the same little sparrow fly in the car not alone, but with the one he has been wooing for so many days.—Pittsburg Leader.

Moroccan Slave Market.

In Marrakesh, Morocco, the slave market is held three times a week in the two hours that precede the setting of the sun and the closing of the city gates. The market place is an open space of bare, dry ground hemmed in with walls and with a ruinous arcade stretching along the center. The wealthy patrons seat themselves on the ground and the auctioneer, after a prayer to Allah, marches his wares round and round the inclosure, receiving bids as he goes.

STORIES OF THE SECRET SERVICE

BY CAPTAIN PATRICK D. TYRRELL.

STORY No. 4

The Biebush Band

Being an Account of the Capture and Conviction of That Notorious Band of Counterfeiters of Which Fred Biebush Was the Leader.

By CAPTAIN PATRICK D. TYRRELL

The "shadow" carried on his investigation in the stores in which Mrs. Thomas traded, and several instances of the passage of bogus silver pieces were found. I therefore decided some one should be selected to gain the minister's confidence, and almost as quickly decided that the one should be Woods. Before long the two were doing business together, Sullivan having been the intermediary. Woods and Sullivan planned to go to his house on one occasion for counterfeit money, but the preacher objected to the place of transfer. He also objected to the plan of meeting Woods in Bosse's saloon, because the church of which he was pastor was so close to the saloon that members of his congregation might see him entering or leaving the drinking place. It was arranged, therefore, that Woods should attend night services at the Morgan street church whenever he wished to make an engagement with the minister, and they could select a meeting place while the preacher ostensibly was exhorting the sinner Woods to repent of his evil ways and become a Christian. It was one of these occasions I described in beginning this narrative.

Woods reported to me that he was on such terms with Thomas that he could secure "coney" from him without delay at any place appointed. It was still necessary for us to place ourselves in position to corroborate the statements of Woods, and in order to do this there must be a witness to one of these transactions. Woods was instructed to make an engagement with the preacher to deliver to him a package of counterfeit money at the customary meeting place near the "Rock" church, and a few nights after the meeting I have described in Grand avenue between the preacher and "Harry" I became a witness to one of these deliveries, being stationed so that their every move might be observed.

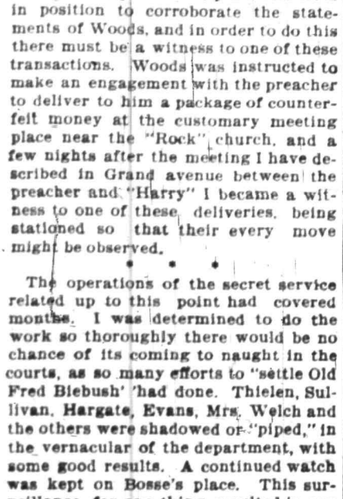
The operations of the secret service related up to this point had covered months. I was determined to do the work so thoroughly there would be no chance of its coming to naught in the courts, as so many efforts to "settle Old Fred Biebush" had done. Thielen, Sullivan, Hargate, Evans, Mrs. Welch and the others were shadowed or "piped," in the vernacular of the department, with some good results. A continued watch was kept on Bosse's place. This surveillance, for one thing, resulted in our catching Evans and the Welch woman passing counterfeit money in small amounts. I was thoroughly satisfied this money came from dies made by Hargate, and, for the purpose of proving it, caused the arrest of Evans and Mrs. Welch and tried hard to get them to tell where they got their supply of money. Although they were the smallest ducks in the Biebush puddle, they stubbornly refused to give any information whatever as to where their supplies came from. The system of "piping" also revealed the fact that Hargate was handling 25 and 50-cent pieces only.

So far as the minor members of the ring were concerned, the net was being drawn around them in a satisfactory way, but Biebush was still well outside of it. The solution of this great difficulty at last came through Whalen, who, after being enlisted on our side, one day met in Bosse's saloon a stranger from southeast Missouri. The two became well acquainted, the stranger confiding his criminal history and desire to handle "coney." It is unnecessary here to relate the details of the deal which was consummated between Whalen and the stranger, whereby the latter was to "rope" Biebush. Suffice it to say that this deal was carried to a successful close, the wary Biebush at last being drawn into the net he had seduously avoided for so long.



AUSTIN J. THOMAS.

The facts as here related, with many circumstantial and corroborative details I believed justified the making of arrests. Fred Biebush had moved from his Stoddard street residence to a place acquired by him through foreclosure of a $2,500 mortgage 5½ miles west on the Olive street road. It was a well-known tavern called the Seven-Mile house. Deputy United States Marshals Wheeler and Soest and I left the Lindell hotel in a carriage about five o'clock one afternoon in October, 1879, and gave the driver directions to go to the Seven-Mile house, where we arrived at dusk. There was a water trough in front of the house, and as I stepped out of the carriage to uncheck the horses so they could drink, Biebush stepped out of the house, bare-headed.

In the dim light he did not recognize me, and I am doubtful if he would have known me had the light been good, as he had never seen me, except in the disguise of a river man at the Bosse saloon. Wheeler and Soest remained in the carriage. Biebush made a pleasant casual remark about the weather, and as he did so I stepped up to him and laid a hand on his shoulder.

"You are my prisoner," I said, "and you will please make no noise."

I pushed him firmly toward the carriage and into it, where the deputies immediately handcuffed him. His wife, a woman nearly as old as he, had come out of the house, and, seeing her husband being taken away, began to cry piteously. Her mother's sobs attracted a grown daughter, who came running to the porch and did what she could to comfort her mother.

While there was no possible doubt that the members of Biebush's family had full knowledge of the nefarious business in which he had been engaged all his life, they seemed to take his arrest as hard as though it was not to be expected. The prisoner's daughter went for her father's hat and coat. He had wanted time to get these himself, but I had refused to allow it, knowing that he undoubtedly would make his escape into the woods in the rear of his house and be lost to us—perhaps for good. The venerable malefactor took his arrest calmly, as he had done when previously arrested, and chatted with the officers on his way to the four courts, where he was locked up.

The leader of the band in custody, the work of the night was only begun. I had determined to make all the arrests that night—or as many of them as possible—before the news of the arrest of the ringleader reached the others. Twenty-six years ago the telephone was not in general use, and other means of communication were much more limited than at present, so I felt that if we worked fast the chances for any of the gang escaping us were small.

In my detective career of 40 years I do not recall another night as lively as that one. Our next move was against the Thomases. To make these arrests we took Officer Weigman, as he was familiar with the minister and his wife, and with the premises, besides being an intelligent and trustworthy policeman. Arriving at the house in Finney avenue, I sent Weigman ahead to knock at the door. Mrs. Thomas responded. Weigman asked for her husband, and the minister's wife said he was out—she believed attending a lecture at Dr. Brooke's church, but she expected him home soon.

While Weigman was holding Mrs. Thomas in conversation Wheeler and I entered the house, telling Mrs. Thomas we intended to make a search of the premises. She was properly indignant, but cool. I ordered her under arrest, and placed her in Wheeler's custody. I then sent Weigman out to wait for Thomas, as it was evident his wife had told the truth about his absence. We intended, of course, to take Mrs. Thomas to jail, and as she was not properly attired for such a trip, I directed Wheeler to have her select such additional clothing as she wished to wear.

The preacher's wife was an Amason in physique, and strongly masculine in disposition and action. She claimed to have been Mrs. Richard Pollard, a widow, when she married Thomas, two years before, having formed the acquaintance of the minister, through taking music lessons from him during her widowhood. There had been some sinister suggestions concerning the disappearance of Pollard, but I believe no evidence ever was presented going to show that there was anything irregular in the affair. We had learned a good deal concerning her physical bravery and determination while "shadowing" her during the previous weeks, and, while wishing to show her every possible courtesy due a woman, I dared not let her out of our sight. After she had selected the clothes she wanted I had Wheeler search them for a concealed weapon, but none was found.

While she was dressing for the street and I was making a hurried search of the house, I was startled by a pistol shot outside. Telling Wheeler to watch the woman, I ran from the house, to find Weigman grappling with Rev. Mr. Thomas. It seems when Thomas arrived Weigman promptly covered him with his revolver and told him he was under arrest. The minister, a powerful man physically, did not see fit meekly to submit to arrest, and he fiercely attacked the policeman, striking him a terrific blow on the jaw. Weigman fired a shot to bring help. I ran up to Thomas, and, before he had a chance to offer further resistance, clapped the handcuffs on him.

"One seems to have done it," said "No three men in St. Louis can take me," angrily declared Thomas. Weigman.

"Not by a d—d sight," retorted the minister, significantly.

Just what he intended to do I cannot say, for at that instant there came loud shrieks from the woman in the house. Leaving the preacher handcuffed and under cover of Weigman's revolver, I rushed into the house to find Wheeler desperately trying to wrest a revolver from the determined grip of the minister's wife. The deputy marshal was a man of great physical power, but he had all he could do to secure the loaded weapon and subdue its owner. Although Wheeler had searched the clothes she put on, the woman had made a sudden movement toward a bureau drawer, from which she grabbed the revolver. After this masculine outburst of physical force, Mrs. Thomas sought refuge in the feminine relief of loud and continued screaming. I tried to quiet her, but she refused to stop. Then I threatened to handcuff her unless she calmed herself

"For God's sake don't do that," she begged.

"Madam, I never did such a thing in my life," I said, "but I certainly shall be obliged to in this case if you don't stop that outlandish shrieking."

The threat had the desired effect. We bundled the minister and his now calm spouse away to the police station. In my hasty search of the house I had found plaster of paris molds used for making counterfeit dies, but I did not make a thorough search at that time, as there was other more important work to do. The next day, provided with a spade, I went to the Finney avenue house and made a careful search. In the back yard under the kitchen window I found buried 23 counterfeit silver dollars, while in a jar in the pantry I found a quantity of counterfeit 50-cent pieces, such as had been passed by the preacher's wife.

It was now 11 o'clock. The stable of Dr. Barnes, in which Sullivan lived, was the next objective point. The colored man had been shadowed to the Barnes residence that night, and we knew he was somewhere around the premises. I stationed myself at the alley entrance to the stable and sent Wheeler around to the front door of the house. He rang the bell, which was answered by Dr. Barnes. Wheeler asked for Sullivan.

"He is not here," said Dr. Barnes, curtly.

Wheeler told the doctor his mission. "Sullivan isn't here," he repeated, "and you've no business around here looking for him."

Wheeler did not know how to act in the face of this extraordinary reception from a man who, we supposed, would gladly assist officers of the United States, and came around the house for further instructions from me. I had taken my stand in the alley, believing Sullivan to be in the house, and that, at the first sign of danger, he would seek to escape by way of the alley. I told Wheeler to go to the back door of the house, seek admission in the regular way, and if it were refused him, to smash the door in. He started to carry out these instructions when Sullivan dashed past him at break-neck speed in the direction of the alley, running plump into my arms. No man was ever more surprised than he. We lost no time in getting him behind the bars, for the night's work was not finished.

Do You Realize

that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.

Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.

Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?

We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.

In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.

Why not decide to get a new piano now?

AIDS TO BEAUTY.

Small white spots which often appear on the nails are caused from bruising.

Thin arms should be washed twice a day with a fine lather of soap, rinsed well, dried thoroughly and then rubbed vigorously. This treatment will bring the pores into action and induce a healthy condition of the skin.

It is nonsense to think that soap and water and a complexion brush will cause a growth of hair on the face. Superfluous hair is more likely to grow on a dust-laden, oily skin. Soap hot water and a complexion brush used every night are necessary to get the face clean. A good cream will counteract the drying effects of the soap.

Madagascar Women.

Woment in Madagascar drape thei shawls as the old Roman senators did their togas. The Roman custom was to wear the toga wrapped around the body and across one shoulder, leaving the other one uncovered.

The Wakamba.

The Wakamba, a native tribe of Uganda, had a decimel system of their own when first discovered by white men. Scientists say they are the most highly civilized of all black races.

on

Special Department Accounts

The Plainfield Trust Company begs to announce that from October 1, 1907, 4 per cent. interest will be paid on accounts of $5 or more, without limit, in the Special Department.

The Company has been receiving very good rates on its loans for some time past, and in line with its declared policy of allowing depositors to share liberally in its earnings, has decided to increase the rate of interest paid on Special Department accounts from 3½ per cent. to 4 per cent. Deposits made before October 4th will draw interest from October 1st.

"CENTRAL PARK"

Was—Is—Will Be

IT WAS, only about a year ago, just a pretty farm.

IT IS to day the finest building site in Plainfield, with broad avenues macadamized their entire width, concrete curb, sidewalks, trees, gas, electric light, in fact all improvements. Nearly $100,000 expended in new and handsome dwellings, now ready for the market.

WHAT IT WILL BE we hardly dare predict, with contracts out for even more extensive improvements and twelve more handsome residences.

Central Park is that beautifully situated tract bounded by Park, Prospect, Hillside and Thornton Avenues.

Lots selling rapidly—Prices very low—Great investment or speculative opportunities.

DIG UP OLD PAVE.

Wooden Blocks Laid In the Sixties Come to Light.

In tearing up Park avenue, to prepare for the new pavement, the working men brought to light some of the wooden blocks laid years ago—the original "permanent pavement" of Plainfield. The blocks, cut from green hemlock and spruce, were laid in the sixties, from North avenue to Somerset street, on a bed of tar laid on planks.

The blocks are in good condition yet, for the most part. Old residents who noticed them come again to light smiled at the memories of bygone days. Plainfield thought she was moving swiftly toward metropolitan frills when the old blocks were laid.

Death Led to Surrender.

Michael Motley, against whom a warant for disorderly conduct was sworn out by Joseph Manhattan several weeks ago, surrendered himself at the station house this morning. His mother had just died, and he wanted to feel free from pursuit at such a time. Chief Kiely told Judge Runyon that Motley had been a faithful son, in spite of a tendency to drink, and the magistrate promptly quashed the charge.

NOTHING BUT AMMONIA COULD STOP THIS FIGHT

PRETTY MUCH THE WHOLE WEST END SAW IT.

Not since Tommy Muir's South American donkey collided with a circus wagon on the corner of Grant avenue and West Fourth street three years ago have the residents of that section seen so much excitement as was witnessed this morning, when a bull pup belonging to Foster Johnson, of Grant avenue, and George O. Stevens' white mongrel engaged in an agonizing combat that lasted twenty minutes. According to old residents who watched the conflict, it was the greatest dog fight in local history. At any rate the cries of the combatants brought to the scene the members of Hose Company No. 3, many housewives who hadn't yet gone down town to do Saturday morning shopping and all of the domestics in the vicinity, who slipped out of the kitchens while their mistresses were absent.

The battle came about like this. Coal Magnate Stevens was on his way to his West Front street office and Foster Johnson was trimming his grass with a lawn mower in his front yard.

"Are you going to the Elks' ball game in Somerville this afternoon?" asked Stevens of Johnson.

"I guess not. I'm thinking about going over to Philadelphia and see Detroit," replied Johnson.

The conversation had gotten thus far when the Stevens canine butted in on the Johnson lawn. Just then the Johnson bull, which was snoozing on the porch with one eye open, assumed hostilities by letting out a series of challenging bow wows that invited war. The Stevens dog was not to be nonplussed and made a savage lunge at the Johnson bull. Both dogs grappled. The car attack was started by both dogs, and for ten minutes they rolled about the lawn tied in a bundle, so as to speak. The blood flowed and the yelping aroused the neighborhood.

Stevens and Johnson shouted themselves hoarse in attempts to get the infuriated brutes to desist, but their efforts were in vain.

"Christy" Manning, who lives across the way from Johnson, and who is considered a "doggist" and somewhat of an authority on canines, was aroused from his slumbers. The racket gave him an impression that the fire department was called out to extinguish a blaze. So not to be caught napping, he arrived on the scene in his rubber boots and attired in his brand new fire hat. Manning displayed great bravery by jumping into the midst of the fight, but he was unable to separate the struggling brutes.

"The only way out of it," said "Christy" to the owners of the dogs, "is to call out the fire department and squirt the hose on 'em. They will fight until sunset and then they will lay down and die."

Running over to his home for his fire trumpet, which saw service in the 60's in New York, "Christy" shouted to Jimmy Kelly, of Hose Company No. 3, who was viewing the excitement from the fire house.

"Jimmy, bring up three lengths of hose here double quick. There's a big dog fight."

But before the order could be obeyed Johnson collected his senses and ran into the house and grabbed an unopened bottle of ammonia, which he had purchased in the spring with the intention of killing off the potato bugs in his garden. With the neck broken off in a jiffy the contents were dashed into the faces of the dogs. With a few sullen growls, the dogs loosened their hold and backed off, and the fight was over. "Christy" Manning, after looking carefully over the mangled brutes, officially declared the battle a draw. The Johnson dog slunk away to his coop in the back yard, while the Stevens' pup folowed his master to the coal yard.

The crowd yawned big sighs of relief. The housewives returned to their kitchens to complete the unfinished puddings and pies for Sunday dinner and Mr. Johnson went about his grass cutting.

A plan has been suggested for the moving of St. Stephen's College from Annandale, N. Y., to a new site to be assigned it on the grounds of the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, at or near Amsterdam avenue and 110th street, New York city. A special committee of the trustees of the college, with Bishop Greer as chairman, is now considering the proposal. St. Stephen's College is a church institution, founded nearly fifty years ago for the especial purpose of preparing young men to enter Episcopal seminaries.

OBITUARY.

Joseph C. Duryee.

Joseph C. Duryee, aged sixty years, a resident of Plainfield about six years, died last night at the home of his son, Joseph A. Duryee, 315 Lee place, after a long illness. He was a native of Newark, where he resided prior to moving to this city. He is survived by four sons, one of whom, Joseph A. Duryee, is employed on the local trolley lines. The funeral will be held from the residence, 315 Lee place, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

HOBOKEN MAN MURDERED IN QUARREL OVER WEIGHT.

William Harms' Windpipe Cut by Companion Whom He Attacked.

Henry Harms, 22 years old, of 509 First street, Hoboken, was murdered yesterday during a quarrel with a friend over his weight. Harms and four companions went out last night, and while drinking this morning started a discussion as to the weight of Ernest Preusch, of 113 Charlton street, New York, who was one of the party.

Preusch bet Harms $5 that he could tip the scale at 157. He weighed himself, and when the scale only registered 149 refused to pay the bet. According to three brothers, Hermann, Charles and Henry Hoops, who comprised the balance of the party, Harms attacked Preusch with his fists, and when driven to bay Preusch drew a pocket knife and stabbed Harms in the windpipe.

Harms died on the way to St Mary's Hospital. The four others in the party were arrested while attempting to board a ferryboat for New York. Preusch was held by Recorder Stanton on a charge of murder, and the three brothers, Hoops, were held as witnesses.

Wilson Held For Trial.

Roy Wilson, the 18-year-old farmhand arrested for attempting to pass a raised check at Harry Werner's clothing store Thursday night, acknowledged the crime before Judge Runyon this morning, and asked for a speedy disposition of his case. He was held for the grand jury on a complaint sworn out by William F. Biggs, of Greenbrook, who drew the check. Bail was fixed at $200.

Fined $200 for Sunday Selling.

New Brunswick, Sept. 28.—Frank Yeagher, who pleaded guilty to Sunday selling in this city, was fined $200 and costs yesterday by Judge Booraem. Yeagher's place was raided last spring. He later moved to Pennsylvania, where he is working as a laborer, but returned yesterday for sentence. Judge Booraem said the sentence must not be considered as a precedent.

EXERCISES OF RALLY DAY

First M. E., Crescent Ave., Park Ave., First Baptist and Others Observe It.

IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney Makes An Address at the First M. E. Services.

Rally day services were held in a number of churches yesterday. At the First M. E. church in the afternoon the program consisted largely of promotions in the Sunday-school among the various departments. There were a few recitations by the smaller children, and Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney made an interesting address to the school. It was decided to return to the former time of holding the Sunday-school in the afternoon, for after a year's trial the noon hour session was not considered a success.

The promotions are as follows:

Beginners to upper primary—Mildred Swick, Loren Pope, Dorothy Plum, Frank Rowley, Myrtle Dunn, Alfred Little, Elizabeth Hicks, Norman McGee, Collins Moore, Lemuel Woolston, Reba Cline, Edwin Mackey. Mrs. Thamos McDonald is the teacher. Primary to Intermediate—Miss Nan Wilson and Miss Helen Whitney teachers—Margaret Thorn, Muriel Coursa, Ruth Lynn, Louise Reed, Clarence Skiff, Howard Woolston, Hildra Lane, Gertrude Dyer, Harvey Thorn. Intermediate to Junior—Miss Ethel Pryor teacher—Hazel Apgar, Zeta Voorhees, Catherine Bingaman, Myrah Hutin, Ida Hartpense, Ethel Clarkson, Robin Becker, James Carson, Hoyt Tomkincon, Joe Sutton, Roy Vail, William Knight and Arthur Slade.

Park Avenue Baptists.

An attractive program was presented at the rally day exercises held at the Park Avenue Baptist church in the afternoon. George E. Hall, the superintendent, was in charge. The program included selections by an orchestra comprising Miss Arline Brown, Miss Marjorie Brown, Arthur Mosher, Whitney Frazee and Ernest Higham; three vocal selections by the intermediate department; vocal solo by R. Coles Treadwell and hymns by the Sunday-school. There was a novel roll call of the entire membership of the school By Superintendent Hall and all present received a card bearing a picture of the church.

Monroe Avenue M. E.

Rev. E. E. Roberson, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, made an interesting address upon the subject of "Child Training." The Sunday-school rooms were attractively decorated with flowers. A part of the exercises included the promotion of several children from the primary department to the higher grades. Superintendent Hall presented the diplomas.

First Baptist.

An informal rally-day program was enjoyed by the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church in the afternoon, marking the change in the time of holding the session from morning to afternoon. Appropriate remarks were made by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor; Superintendent George H. Batchelor and the singing of rally-day songs by the school and violin solos by Miss Florence Wohlfert. The roll of the school membership was called and it was shown that it has increased during the past year.

Crescent Avenue Church.

Two interesting addresses marked the rally day exercises of the Crescent Avenue church Sunday-school yesterday. The school met at 12 o'clock noon, the primary department meeting with the church main section upstairs for the opening. There was a large attendance, parents and friends of the pupils swelling the numbers.

After the opening exercises, the primary pupils went to their room downstairs, where Miss Carrie Dewey, for years the pianist of the department, told of her trip to Europe in the summer. She was sent on the trip by the teachers and pupils of the department as a testimonial to her splendid service.

Upstairs Rev. James B. Cochran, brother of Henry Cochran, superintendant of the school, a missionary in the Chinese field, spoke on his experiences in the Celestial kingdom. Supt. Cochran also spoke.

Dr. Gardner Spoke.

Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Gardner, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, spoke at the Y. M. C. A. meeting yesterday afternoon. There was a good attendance in spite of the weather. Philip Van Arsdale sang bass solos with fine effect.

HOME-MADE JUSTICE BY ITALIAN LABORERS

MOVED SWIFTLY BUT IRREGULARLY; LED TO COURT IN THE END.

A crippled water-boy on one of the Italian construction gangs housed in the shacks on Lake street complained, with tears and other signs of grief, to his fellows Saturday night that $20 of his savings had been stolen from his blouse as he worker. The men of the gang have made a pet of the cripple, and they organized a detective service as soon as they heard of his loss.

Suspicion fastened on Luigi Pavone, a shrivelled little old man, who is said to have been the only one at work near the boy when the money disappeared, and Saverio Vallorano was delegated to search him.

Saverio found $29 in bills tied up in a rag in Luigi's blouse pocket. Despite the old man's fervid protestations that the money was all his, Saverio took $20 from the greasy little bundle, and proffered the remaining $9 to Luigi. The latter would have all or none, and carried his story of the affair to the police. The latter understood it to be a bold sort of a hold-up until this morning, when Saverio was arraigned in court. The cripple's part in the case came out then for the first time, and Chief Kiely asked for a day's adjournment to investigate the affair further. Saverio and Luigi were released under the recognizance to appear tomorrow morning. The police hold the $29 pending developments.

Presbytery to Meet Here.

The regular meeting of the Elizabeth Presbytery will be held in the First Presbyterian church, tomorrow morning and afternoon. Dinner will be served in the chapel at noon by the women of the church.

—Edward Schafer, of this city, has taken a position as foreman in a machine shop at Waterbury, Conn.

SYNODICAL SOCIETY WORK

Presbyterian Women's Organization to Hold Annual Session, Oct. 10.

SOME LOCAL OFFICERS

Mrs. William E. Honeyman President of Home Department—Mrs. J. H. Manning Treasurer.

The Presbyterian churches of Camden will entertain the Woman's Synodical Society at its annual meeting Thursday, October 10. Mrs. William E. Honeyman, of North Plainfield, is president of the home department, and Mrs. John H. Manning, of this city, is treasurer. The meeting will last all day, the home missionary affairs occupying the morning and the foreign the afternoon sessions. There will be speakers on both subjects, but they have not yet been secured. The annual election of officers will be an important feature of the proceedings.

In the home department the following officers will again be named for the posts which they hold: President, Mrs. W. E. Honeyman, of Plainfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. C. Miles, of Roselle; recording secretary, Miss E. B. Paxton, of Princeton; secretary of literature, Mrs. Wilbur La Roe, of Perth Amboy; secretary of young people's work, Miss Mary Harding, of Bridgeton, and treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Manning, of Plainfield.

The slate of officers for the foreign branch includes: President, Mrs. George W. B. Cushing, of East Orange; recording secretary, Miss Mary Tooker, of Orange; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Walter Condict, of Jersey City; secretary of young people's work, Mrs. W. H. Hall, of Camden; secretary of literature, Mrs. L. V. Coddington, of Murray Hill, and treasurer, Miss H. F. Van Meter, of Salem. These officers are the same that served for the past year.

There are a number of vice presidents in each part of the Synodical Society, one for each presbytery represented, and these will be subject to change this year according to their stands in their own organizations.

FOUR THOUSAND PENNIES STRUNG ON YARD ROPES.

Seen at Seventh-Day Baptist Women's Tea Yesterday.

The Women's Society for Christian Work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church entertained its friends at a tea and social held in the parlors of the church, yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6, at which time the members returned the yards of pennies collected during the summer months. The parlors were decorated in an unique manner. The color scheme was golden, suspended from the chandeliers being strings of new '07 pennies, fastened to yellow ribbon.

The table was decorated in yellow and white, yards of pennies being fastened to a golden rope which was stretched across the mantelpiece and hung like a lambrequin. The otal amount of pennies collected amounted to $40. Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard was in charge of the tea, and Mrs. F. A. Dunham poured. The entertainment and decorations were in charge of Mrs. James E. Kimball and Miss Ernestine Curtis Smith.

There was a short informal program, including a song, "The Dropping of the Pennies," by the Misses Hannah, Helen, Kathryn and Minerva Shaw, daughters of Rev. and Mrs. G. B. Shaw; "The Story of the Pennies," written and read by Mrs. Sarah Wardner, and a vocal solo by Mrs. William C. Hubbard.

Entertainments at Grace Church.

Arrangements have been completed for a sries of high class entertainchurch during the coming winter. The first one will be on Thursday night, October 31, by the Lotus Glee Club. The second will be on December 5, and will be in the nature of a concert. John H. B. Conger organist of St. Paul's M. E. church, Newark, will have charge, and the assisting artists will be William Searles, basso-cantante, of Newark, and Mrs. Elizabeth von Neer, reader. The third entertainment will be given on January 23 of next year, by Mrs. Minnie-Marshall Smith, reader, and Mrs. Annie Louise David, harpist.

Saturday Night Scrap.

Robert O'Neil, Charles Baird and C. Bartseti were arrested in the borough, near the Somerset street bridge, late Saturday night on a disorderly charge. The men had been drinking and were angaged in a scrap when Chief Marshal Weiss came along and arrested the trio. This morning Recorder Dolliver fined each one $2.

Arcanumites' Banquet.

Plainfield Council, No. 711, Rayol Arcanum, will hold its annau banquet on Thursday night, October 10, at Hotel Iroquois.

WHITLOCK DROPS DEAD AT HIS DINNER TABLE

FALLS LIFELESS WHEN ABOUT TO EAT NOON-DAY MEAL.

George Whitlock, the well-known carpenter, died suddenly at noon today at his boarding-house, 308 East Front street. As he sat down at the table to eat his dinner, he gave a groan and fell over dead. A physician was hurriedly summoned, but when he arrived he said that death must have been instantaneous.

Mr. Whitlock was employed as a foreman for Peter Thompson, the contractor, and had been employed on a new house Mr. Thompson was building on Martine avenue. He decided not to go to work this morning, but send word to Mr. Thompson that he would be on hand at 1 o'clock this afternoon. During the morning he had complained of not feeling well, but he said he thought thate he would be all right after he had had his dinner.

He had been a resident of Plainfield for a great many years and was one of the best known carpenters, having worked for all the leading contractors. For a time he was a walking delegate for the Carpenters' Union and was quite active in looking out for the interests of the trade. The announcement of the funeral will be made later.

STATE SCHOOL TAX RAISED BOROUGH RATE

REASON FOR ADVANCE—MUNICIPALITY WILL GET MONEY BACK.

County and State taxes, especially the latter, are at the bottom of the high rate—2.48—on which the North Plainfield tax bills will be figured this year. The property owners who feel inclined to find fault with the rate must turn disapproving glances, if they turn them at all, at county and State offices and not toward the home administration.

The advance springs mainly from the State school tax. Local improvements and work are not at the bottom of it. More than that, the borough will get all the State school money back, and more. The borough's share of the school tax is figured on the assessment levied, and its share of the State school fund will be apportioned on the number of school days. The latter reach a total greater than in most other places, so North Plainfield will come in for a goodly share of the fund, and receive considerably more than it pays out to the State.

It is to be remembered also that the borough assessment is not on a basis of 100 per cent. The valuations are only about seventy-five per cent., and this figures in the rate-making.

Fought In Lunch Wagon.

Daniel Driscoll, one of the owners of a lunch wagon, and John Grafton were arrested Saturday night for fighting in the eating place. Driscoll told Judge Runyon in the city court this morning that Grafton had refused to pay for what he ordered, and followed the refusal by attempting to whip him. He struck back, and cut Grafton's face. The latter said he was very drunk and couldn't remember what he had or had not done. Driscoll told the judge he didn't want to press a charge against Grafton, and the magistrate suspended sentence.

Common Council Meets Tonight.

G. W. Wilbur, who has had a part of the contract for the construction of the Southside sanitary sewer, has encounted an unusual amount of water in excavating in that part of the city and now wants to give up the contract. There will be a special meeting of the Common Council tonight when steps will be taken to meet the existing difficulty and Mr. Wilbur will probably be released. It is the intention of the city to complete this part of the work by the day instead of in a lump contract.

Woodcock Was Wise.

Jefferson Woodcock, of High Bridge, went into the station house Saturday night and asked to be locked up. He was full of whiskey and said the thirst was too much for him. He said locked doors were what he needed to keep him from rum until the fire in his system went out. Judge Runyon approved of Woodcock's good sense in the city court this morning, and suspended sentence.

Weekly Dances at Saengerbund.

A dance will be given every Wednesday night in Saengerbund Hall under the auspices of Messrs. Baldwin and Diamond, who helped to make both of the shirt-waist dances a success. Prof. Charles M. Suhr's orchestra will furnish the music for the dances.

SOMERSET CONVENTIONS

Democrats to Nominate Candidates at Somerville on Wednesday, Oct. 9.

FOLLOW REPUBLICANS

G. O. P. Convention Four Days Earlier—Democrats' Slate Includes Demond and Ross, 'Tis Said.

Somerset's Democrats will hold their county convention on Wednesday, Oct. 9, that date having been decided upon at a meeting of the county committe at Somerville on Saturday. The Republicans will nominate their ticket four days previously, Saturday, Oct. 5, having been announced as the time for the gathering of the G. O. P. clans.

The Democratic convention will be held at Somerset hall, Somerville, the same place where the Republicans will assemble. The probable chairman has not been announced, but it is said that former State Senator S. S. Childs will wield the gavel and decide upon questions of parlimentary law. An effort is being made to have Gubernatorial nominee, Frank S. Katzenback, make a speech and it is believed that he wil accept the invitation sxtended by the county committe

It is said that the slate has been fixed in this fashion: For surrogate, William J. Demond, of Bridgewater township; for sheriff, Frank Ross, of Bridgewater township. Demond is the present incubent of the surrogate office and ther seems to be bnt little opposition to his proposed renomination. Ross has made a hard canvas for the shrievalty and it appears likely that he will land himself on the ticket.

INTERSTATE FAIR PROGRAM.

Opens Today at Trenton and Will Last All the Week.

The Interstate Fair's nineteenth annual exhibition was opened this morning at Trenton, and for the first time in the history of the organization will be continued for a full week, Saturday being devoted to the finish of a twenty-four-hour automobile endurance test, which will be run throughout the night before over a well-lighted course.

Today is automobile day; tomorrow, children's day, when school children are admitted free; Wednesday will be farmers' day; Thursday, politicians' day, with Fort and Katzenbach, the Gubernatorial rivals, and a host of other political lights present; Friday, as usual, will be get-away day, although this year it will mark the beginnings of the auto endurance run.

Mrs. Ellick Must Move.

Mrs. Mary Ellick, of 620 West Third street, was arraigned before Judge Runyon in the city court this morning, charged a second time within a month with annoying and abusing her neighbors. She was accused, among other things, of throwing hot water at a colored neighbor with whom she had had trouble. She said the water was cold and was aimed at a dog. She also denied threatening the colored woman with a pin and a kitchen knife, as was charged. Judge Runyon told her she was a troublemaker, and gave her forty-eight hours to move from the neighborhood.

Races Postponed to October 12.

More than 200 people gathered at the Plainfield Driving Park Saturday afternoon to witness the races under the auspices of the Fair Acres Riding and Driving Association, and it was a great disappointment that the rain interfered with the program. Miss Adele von Ohl was present and ready to give an exhibition of fancy riding on "Aristocrat" and "Rifle," but it was decided that the grounds were too wet. The officers of the association announced to the crowd that the races would be held on Saturday, October 12, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Found Part of Old Liberty Pole.

While excavating in Park avenue this morning for the brick pavement, the laborers unearthed the base of a liberty pole erected at the corner of Second street in front of the Hotel Iroquois, during the 50's by Jacob Thorn, who also built the hotel, which in those days was known as the Mansion House. Mr. Thorn was the father of Edward P. Thorn, formerly of this city, but now of Westfield.

Tennis Matches Postponed.

Not only did the rain on Saturday prevent the playing of the local baseball games and the holding of the trotting meet, but it interferred with the championship tennis matches scheduled at the Plainfield Country Club and the Park Club. The courts were water soaked and the constant rain made it impossible for the contestants to play. All the matches were put over for one week.

BRING HOME STRING OF HORSE SHOW RIBBONS

MISS HOOLEY AND MESSRS. BUTTFIELD AND M'CUTCHEN LUCKY.

The Morristown Horse Show closed Saturday afternoon with the judging of nine classes. The collapse of the flooring in a section of the boxes amid a downpour of rain marred the pleasure of hundreds of spectators. A mild panic which followed was soon quelled.

The afternoon's judging started with the award to Miss Mabel B. Hooley of the blue for her entries in the pairs of harness horses. Miss Hooley also captured a blue in the class for saddle horses, her black mare, Delight, taking the first award. Her string, as well as those of W. J. Buttfield and C. W. McCutchen was very successful in winning prizes throughout the three days of the show. The Plainfield horses winning prizes on Saturday follow:

Class 35—Pairs of harness horses over 15 hands and not exceeding 15.2 hands, won by Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Quaker Maid and Dorothea, Charles W. McCutchen's Piccadilly Sweetheart and Pickinniny Sweetheart, third.

Class 2—Pair of Roadsters—Won by W. J. Buttfield's Miss Banahan and Miss Westcott. Class 46—Saddle horses 15 hands or over—Won by Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Delight. Class 44—Pairs of harness horses—Won by Miss Mabel B. Hooley's Quaker Maid and Free Quaker.

MR. AND MRS. RYNO WARMLY CONGRATULATED

WITH FRIENDS THEY CELEBRATE 15TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno observed the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding on Codington avenue, Saturday night, and despite the disagreeable weather fifty friends from Newark, Orange, Elizabeth, Somerville and Plainfield joined in the celebration. The home was attractively decorated with golden rod and ferns, the arrangement in the hall and parlor being particularly effective.

During the evening there was an informal program of vocal and instrumental selections, including piano solos by Miss Emma Hazel Ryno, daughter of the host and hostess, and vocal solos by Mrs. Thomas J. Lynch and the singing of popular selections by others. Refreshments were served. The couple received many handsome and useful gifts, including a number of pieces of cut-glass.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryno were married on September 28, 1892. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, officiated, assisted by Rev. Elias Thompson, of Satskill, N. Y., a cousin of the bride, and Rev. John Thompson, of Trenton, an uncle of the bride. The couple moved from Duer street to Grandview avenue and then to Codington avenue, their present home. Mr. Ryno has been connected with The Daily Press for many years, and both he and his wife enjoy the friendship and esteem of a large circle of friends. Congratulations and regrets were received from relatives and friends in Naugautuck, Conn., Phillipsburg, Philadelphia and many other places.

RESUME MUSICAL SERVICE.

First One of the Fall at Front Street Presbyterian Church.

The first monthly musical of the fall at the First Presbyterian church, East Front street, was enjoyed last night by a large congregation. All the numbers were splendidly rendered and the solo parts were sung with particular effectiveness. Miss Miss Jassamnne Burd, the contralto, rendered the offertory solo. The other numbers were quarettes.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, the pastor, preached a short sermon on "The Socilaism of Jesus." He will elaborate the theme and make comparisons between the Lord's socialistic ideal and the socialistic thought of today next Sunday.

Funeral of J. C. Duryee.

The funeral service of Joseph C. Duryee, who died on Friday at the home of his son, Joseph A. Duryee, 315 Lee place, was held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock from that residence. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, officiated, and the burial was in Hillside cemeterl. Mr. Duryee was a Civil War veteran and had been living at the Soldiers' Home in Kearny. It was while on a visit to his son here that he was taken ill and died.

Exempts Banquet.

The Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association will celebrate its twentieth anniversary banquet night, 01r tieth anniversary on Mrnday night, October 7 with a banquet.

HE GOT LIMIT OF LAW

Grinley's Promises of Reform Fell on Deaf Ears in City Court.

HAD ABUSED HIS WIFE

Judge Runyon Knew How Undependable He Was, and Counsel's Eloquent Plea Availed Not.

Richard Grinley, a machinist, arrested for abusing his wife Saturday night, was sentenced to the limit of the law in the city court this morning. Counsel's earnest plea for leniency and his own sniffles proved unavailing, because Judge Runyon had knowledge of the prisoner's record and character.

Grinley had abused his wife in drunken fits for ten years. He returned from the county jail, where he served sixty days, last week. He went to Judge Runyon and Rev. E. E. Roberson almost as soon as he returned, and asked them to help him effect a reconciliation with his wife. He made all sorts of promises to be good, and was in the magistrate's office to repeat them Saturday afternoon.

Counsellor S. S. Swackhamer appeared for him this morning, and told Judge Runyon that his client wanted a chance to show that he was through with drink and desired to turn over a new leaf. He was ready, the lawyer said, to agree to turn over all he earned, either through the court or his counsel, to his wife.

"I cannot place any dependence on this man's word," said the magistrate. "I know that for ten years he has made the life of a good wife and a faithful mother a hell on earth. He was in my office Saturday afternoon to repeat his promises of good behavior and then went out and did the same old thing. He has forfeited all claim to consideration. I sentence him to pay a fine of $100 and to sixty days in the county jail."

FIREMEN GET A SCARE.

Joker Impersonating Councilman Mellick Rakes Them Over the Coals.

Some joker had a lot of fun with Firemen Kelly and Fitzgerald, at the West Fourth street engine house Saturday night. The joker called up the house on the telephone, and, pretending he was Councilman George P. Melick, gave Kelly and Fitzgerald, one after the other, stern rebukes for allowing three lengths of the city's hose to be used in separating fighting bulldogs on Saturday morning, as averred by a humorous writer in The Daily Press.

The firemen were fooled, and agitatedly explained how innocent of wrongdoing they had been. When "Mr. Mellick" rang off, Kelly called up Chief Doane and told him of the "councilman's" vexation. The chief lost not time in calling up Mr. Mellick's house, and learned that he hadn't been in the city for a week. If Kelly and Fitzgerald had known Mr. Mellick at all they wouldn't have been fooled; some of the language the "councilman" used was decidedly undressed. A friend of the firemen heard of the hoax shortly after it was played, and told them of it. They are looking for the joker.

Lamp Sets Fire to a Bed.

The upsetting of a lamp set fire to a bed at W. K. Wilson's home, 238 East Fourth street, at 11:38 o'clock, last night, and caused an alarm of fire to be sent in from Box 21, at North and Watchung avenues. The department responded and had but little difficulty in extinguishing the blaze. The damage amounted to $25.

Funeral of Mrs. John Motley.

The funeral services of Mrs. John Motley were held this morning at 8:15 from the late residence, 167 Manning avenue, and 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's church. Rev. W. H. Miller, pastor, officiated. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Michael Hickey Buried Here.

The remains of Michael Hickey, who died at his home in Raritan, on Friday, aged sixty-five years, were brought to this city this morning for burial in St. Mary's cemetery. T. A. Moore, the undertaken, was in charge of the burial.

Disorderly In Theatre.

Patsy Toyoulu, an Italian youth, was arrested at the theatre Saturday night for raising a rumpus in the gallery. Judge Runyon fined him $5 in the city court this morning.

Church Sociable Planned.

A sociable will be held at the Christian church Thursday night. Miss Nellie Bittle is chairman of the committee in charge.

—All bills against the city must be in the hands of the city clerk by Wednesday night to insure payment at the October meeting of the Common Council.

FLOWER SUPERSTITIONS.

If you point at buds they will blight.

To plant a flower hedge is to bring good luck.

To burn faded flowers is a sign of coming sorrows.

If you pull a flower to pieces you will die of consumption.

To hand a flower reversed to any one is to bring bad luck.

To have flowers wilt quickly in the hands denotes ill health.

If some one gives you a yellow flower you are going to have money.

If a person smells flowers gathered from the cemetery he will lose his sense of smell.

If any one asks for the flowers pinned on your dress and you refuse you will have immediate ill luck.

If a person wears flowers with the stems upward it is a sign that he or she is in love, but does not know it.

If some one gives you a purple flower you are going to have tears and trouble.—New York Tribune.

COLLEGE AND SCHOOL.

In the six great Swiss colleges there are now 2,193 women studying.

Following German and French examples, the University of Florence arranged this year for the first time a summer course of studies, especially in the Italian language and literature.

Alfred Hayes, Jr., has been appointed to a professorship in the Law school of Cornell university. He graduated from Princeton in 1895 and from the Columbia University Law school three years later. He has taught in the Columbia Law school for the past five years.

Boston has inaugurated a girls' high school of practical arts to correspond in purpose with the commercial high school for boys. The school will attempt to teach girls practical courses to fit them as homemakers. Among the studies will be housefurnishing, decoration, housekeeping, cooking, sewing and millinery.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

It is always open season for the man who is hunting trouble.

Some people constitute themselves a grievance committee and hold a session every day.

Have you noticed that there are very few old people these days? It is said to be going out of style to grow old.

Don't imagine you are the only person in the world who has annoyances. There is so much trouble in the world that there is plenty to go around.

A man without a very active imagination can bring tears to his eyes any time by thinking of the great sorrow that will overcast the wide land on the day of his funeral.—Atchison Globe.

A Quaint Custom.

The marriage customs of nations are quaint. Here is one which is decidedly barbarous: A Hottentot widow marrying again has to cut off the joint of a finger, which she gives to her new husband on their wedding day. Each time she becomes a widow and marries again she has to sacrifice one finger joint.

YOUR GOLD COINS.

See if Any of Them is Stamped With the Letter L.

"I got hold of a gold coin a short time ago, and it was marked with a letter L, which I supposed had been stamped upon it by some one who wished to keep watch as to whether he ever had it in possesion again. I passed it along, to my landlord, I think, and thought nothing more about it for several months. Then I found out that I had been passing 'light' coin."

"How is that?" was the question of a listener.

"All coins, whether gold or silver, upon which a large L is stamped are light weight. When you get one of these stamped coins, the only thing to do is to take it to some assayer, who will weigh it and pay you about 10 per cent. less than the face value of the coin for it. He will then place it in a crucible to be melted into gold bullion.

The government itself mutilates thes coins and in so doing turns the ruined currency right back into circulation, where some innocent party will become victimized by them.

"When the light coins are tendered for duties on imports they are weighed at the custom house, quickly stamped L for light and returned to the importer. If the latter cannot pass the coin off, he must take it to the retort to be melted.

"The light coins may be rendered light in the ordinary course of abrasion in circulation or they may have been sweated by parties who sell the gold ust thus bruised off the coin. The common mode of sweating is to place a number of gold coins in a sack and shake them up for a long time, when the gold dust will gather at the bottom of the sack."—Utica Observer.

COUNCILMEN ARE PERPLEXED.

Westfield Borough Fathers in Quandary Over Money.

Wstfield, Sept. 30.—The Town Council, with Engineer Van, last night made a survey of the Osborne avenue bridge, which the Central Railroad Company built at the request of the Council. It was completed about six months ago, but has never been in service, by reason of the failure of the Council to provide approaches.

The railroad company now urges the Council to provide the necessary approaches. The bridge crosses the tracks, and either end at present is twenty feet above Osborne avenue. It is estimated that 7,000 yards of filling and retaining walls will be necessary before the bridge can be used. This will cost about $5,000, and the Council is in a quandary as to where to secure the money.

The railroad company is insistent that the town fulfill its contract and that the bridge be placed in service. The Council is perplexed, as no account had been taken of the approaches or their cost, and all energies were bent to compel the company to build the bridge.

Bleeding to Death.

Thomas Strahle, a farmer living at Hall's Corner, nearly severed his foot while cutting wood in the woods near his home. He pulled off his boot and with strips of a horse blanket made a tourniquet, and, lashing the animal into a gallop, raced to Spotswood, where Dr. Denelsbeck gave the man medical attention. He will probably recover.

The Praying Wheel.

A traveler thus describes the praying wheel of Tibet: "A barrel eight inches long holds 1,400 thin leaves, on each side of which the prayer is printed, say, ten times. This gives 28,000 prayers, all of which are put to the worshipper's credit in the world to come if with a touch of his finger he makes the barrel revolve once."

A writer says that whipping a boy is liable to make him stupid. It may be so, but it is more likely to make him smart.

Support After Man's Death.

The legal representatives of South River Borough and East Brunswick Township, Middlesex county, argued before Judge Booraem in the Middlesex County Court yesterday morning the question of which district was responsible for the support of Conrad Sebolt, an aged indigent, and both counsel and court were unaware that Sebolt died in South River a week ago yesterday and has been buried. It was some hours later that newspaper reporters called their attention to the fact. East Brunswick wants to be reimbursed for the money it has paid for the man's support.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

On Saturday, October 19, the Middlebrook Country Club, of Bound Brook, will send its team to the Park Golf Club for the third and deciding match. Each team has won a game and considerable interest will be shown in the forthcoming one.

Now that C. B. Macdonald has been named to represent America on the St. Andrews rules committee it remains to be seen what action the United States Golf Association will take in the matter. The act of the foreign golfers was entirely on their own responsibility, and before Macdonald can really represent this country he will have to be officially appointed by the United States Golf Association. He will in all probability be selected, however, as he served as chairman on the two former rules committees in this country.

The foreign committee on rules consists of the following: Captain W. H. Burn, chairman; the Rev. R. A. Hull, H. C. Everard, John L. Low, H. G. Hutchinson, Leslie Balfour Melville, E. R. H. Blackwell, H. G. Holt, J. Cunningham, J. O. Fairlie, W. E. Fairlie, R. H. Johnston, J. E. Laidlay, Robert Maxwell and R. B. Sharp.

In the opinion of Messrs. Chauncey, Macdonald and other well known amateurs in this vicinity, there is no occason for anything radical in the way of changes. Attention has been called to the fact that out of the 212 questions on rules submitted to the committee since the last revision of the code, in 1902, none has had its origin from a championship contest.

FOOTBALL.

Scrimmaging was continued at Princeton Saturday, and the varsity faced two distinct teams for a couple of halves. The men were worked harder than at any time before. A twenty minute half was quite a tax on the players, but this followed by ten minutes more proved a sufficient dose to send the whole bunch off the field pretty well used up. Head Coach Roper gave orders for fast work and Quarterback Eddie Dillon drove the varsity along at a rapid rate. While neither eleven played particularly brilliant, the first string put it over the scrubs, scoring twice. Captain McCormick was powerful on the defense in the afternoon, and riddled the opposing line without much trouble.

Four men have been lost from the New York City College eleven. Frank at quarter, Gilbert at right halfback, Panaroni at right guard and Hubert at right tackle. The place at right quarterback is well provided for in the three candidates, Mullen, Brisotte and Gluck. For the halfback Wagner and Baum, Townsend Harris Holl players, show up well. Cohn, another man from the same place, who weighs 215 pounds, will amply fill the position of right guard. For tackle the college has a find in Ford, a 190-pound player from Vanderbilt Prep. A new man, Schultz, has come out for centre and will make Gordon, last year's player, hustle to keep his place. He is from Yonkers High School and weighs 225 pounds.

Director Baird of the Athletic Association today received a letter from Dartmouth asking for a football game at Ann Arbor on November 25. However, as Michigan's season closes with the Pennsylvania game on November 16, Director Baird considered that a game with Dartmouth a week later would be an anti-climax and declined the offer.

The Amherst squad has been in daily practise under the direction of Coach Hubbard, '07, and Captain Gildersleeve for the past week. Shattuck, who was quarter on the '05 and '06 elevens has returned to college and is trying for the back field. The most promising freshmen among the forty candidates are Keough, of Williston Seminary, and Buck, the big lineman. Of the veterans who are among the list of aspirants for the varsity are Atwood, Kilbourn, Kating, Leadbetter and Mulry. It is expected that the team will be much heavier than last year's aggregation, providing several of last season second string men can overcome the academic eligibility rules.

At New York University the candidates for the football eleven are working hard on Ohio field daily. H. P. Olcott, Yale '99, is coaching the teams, and sends them at their work in snappy fashion. The regulars of last season who have returned to college are Captain Mowen, right half; H. Brown, left half; W. Brown, quarter; Decker, centre; Bernstein, right end; Arnold, left end; Auffant, left end, and Freberg, left tackle. A good proportion of last year's scrub team is on hand and a number of husky men in the freshman class promise to make good material. The first game will be against St. Stephens on Ohio field, October 5. The other games will be: Stevens at Hoboken, October 12; Haverford at Ohio Field, October 19; R. P. I. at Troy, October 26; Rutgers at Ohio Field, November 5; Lehigh at South Bethlehem, November 9, and Union at Ohio Field, November 23.

PUBLIC SCHOOL FADS.

In banishing the silly, unnatural and impractical system of vertical handwriting from the public schools, the Newark Board of Education has taken a wise course; one that will meet with approbation, particularly among business men. There never has been the slightest excuse for the fad. Penmanship of the sort is both stiff and characterless. Its advocates have been among a class who have little to do with the business world and, therefore, have not fully realized under what disadvantage a young man or woman drilled in such absurd style has been placed. More than one youth fresh from school has failed to obtain a position simply because of his inability to use the natural, graceful and common-sense slanting style of penmanship.

Vertical handwriting is but one of the fads in public schools. The policy of tutoring children in Latin and Greek before they are well grounded in the rudiment is another. But happily, it appears that a return to reason is fast approaching and the average youth will be able to spell, read and write correctly and will have a good knowledge of the world's map and history before he is made to study Latin and Greek roots.

Nominee Katzenbach should bring his overcoat along when he pays his promised visit to the local Democrats next Saturday afternoon.

POLITICAL NOTES

At Democratic State committee headquarters in Jersey City this letter from Prof. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton College, was given out yesterday:

"I have kept your kind letter of September 20 a day or two out of sincere desire tao accept the kindly invitation which it conveys, but I find unhappily that it is literally impossible in view of universitiy duties which come at the same time. Pray express to the Democratic State committee and to the committee of Hudson county my appreciation of their courtesy of my sincere hope that Mr. Katzenbach will be elected Governor of the sette. He seems to me a most admirable choice." The letter was in reply to an invitation sent him by the auxiliary Democratic committee to address the mascsemeeting to be held under its auspices at Grand view Park, this city, next Friday night.

OBITUARY.

John Humphrey Griffith.

John Humphrey Griffith, aged seventy-four years, died on Saturday at the home of his son, Harold A. Griffith, 69 Sandford avenue, following an illness of nearly three months with liver trouble. Mr. Griffith was born in New York and for many years was employed at the Singer Works in Elizabethport. He had been a resident of Plainfield about one year. For a number of years he was a member of the Baptist church, Bayonne. He is survived by a wife and six children. The children are Mrs. Charles Smith, of Brooklyn; Clinton Griffith, of Tenafly; Mrs. John Jones, of Bayonne; Harold A. Griffith, Miss Josephine Griffith and Arthur Griffith, of this city. The funeral service will be held from the residence, 69 Sandford avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock and Rev. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church, will officiate. The burial will be in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Miss Pauline Denton, of Washington avenue, is visiting relatives at Belmar.

William Cuzen, of New York, who has been spending a number of weeks with his brother, James Cuzen, of West End avenue, has returned to New York, where he has an excellent position at the Players' Club.

GOLF CUP COMPETITIONS

Play for Greens and Golf Committees and Autumn Cups at Country Club.

DEFY THE DOWNPOUR

During the Heavy Showers, on the Links at Both Club Were Many Enthusiasts.

While the heavy rain on Saturday caused a postponement of the matinee races and the baseball games, it did not stop the play of golf on the local links. During the heaviest of the downpour both the courses at the Plainfield Country Club and the Park Golf Club were well occupied. Many, however, were unable to complete the eighteen holes and but a limited number of cards were returned in the various events.

At the Country Club, Dudley H. Barrows won first honors for the Golf Committee cup, with a net score of 76, Charles A. Stover finished second with a 77, while Julius Erickson came in third with an 84. The leading scores posted follow:

Dudley H. Barrows, 74 plus 2—76; Charles A. Stover, 86, 9—77; Julius E. Erickson, 91, 7—84.

The point winners for the Green Committee cup were E. A. Cruikshank with an 85, George S. Clay, a new-comer, with a 91, and George E. Cathcart with a 100. The scores:

E. A. Cruikshank, 101, 16—85, George S. Clay, 113, 22—91; George E. Cathcart, 104, 4—100.

In the play for the Autumn cup, Class A, the two who qualified were Julius E. Erickson, 91, 7—84; W. Lester Glenney, 83, plus 3—86. George S. Clay, with a score of 113, 22—91, was the only one to qualify for the Autumn cup, Class B, and this means that some will have to draw a bye. In the playoff of the tie of September 14 for the Autumn cup, Class A, Dudley H. Barrows, with a score of 74, plus 2—76, and Charles A. Stover, with a score of 86, 9—77, qualified for match play next month.

While there was a good field out at the Park Golf Club, only four players returned their cards in the weekly competition for the President's, Golf Club cups and the September trophy. Thus far W. V. Byard has qualified for match play for the monthly cup, and the tie between R. V. Carpenter and C. B. Morse will be played off this week to determine who shall play with Mr. Byard.

L. R. Thurlow, with a net score of 96, won first honors for the President's cup and the September cup. Charles A. Reed received second honors, while C. B. Morse and W. V. Byard were third and fourth. For the Scratch cup, the point winners were Charles A. Reed, C. B. Morse and L. R. Thurlow.

Tre leading scores posted were as follows:

Charles A. Reed, 101, 12—89; Leon R. Thurlow, 110, 14—96; W. V. Byard, 106, 5—101; Charles B. Morse, 110, 7—103.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The Jeffersons in "The Rivals" at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Jimmy Rosen, who plays Buster Brown this year has fully demonstrated that he is the right little comique in the exact spot, for he is so immersed in and imbue with the spirit of Mr. Outcalt's character that those who have seen him declare that he is not playing a part, that he is the typical Buster himself. New and elaborate scenery and costumes grace the production this season, together with all the new music and popular sonsg. It will be seen here October 20, matinee and night.

GRAVES NOW MADE LEVEL.

Radical Change in Cemetery Arrangements Meets With Approval.

Modern cemetery ideas that run contrary to deep-seated sentiment usually create dissatisfaction when they are first introduced. Just now, says Park and Cemetery, the lot holders in Cedar Grove cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y., are agitated over the rule providing for the leveling of all grave mounds. Many of the lot holders who are now paying for annual care of their lots object to a notice to the effect that mounds on lots for which annual care is not paid would be leveled. Some resent it as "a mean outrage." Other cemeteries have had similar experiences. In Lakewood cemetery, Minneapolis, when a new law went into effect regarding the lowering of grave mounds there were many protests, but in less than a year when the changed appearance of the sections made apparent the marked improvement in the landscape by lowering the mounds to an almost imperceptible rise over the graves lot holders began requesting this treatment of their lots and within a short period of time several thousand grave mounds had been lowered, the cost of annual care materially reduced and the general appearance of the grounds greatly improved.

FOR HAPPY MARRIED LIFE.

Good Manners Go Far to Preserve Peace and Concord.

A great many people seem to think that the marriage ceremony absolves them from all further courtesies and attentions to the person whom they have wed. After that they are always in negligee, both as to manners and clothes, when they are at home. This is a fatal mistake. Because a woman is married is no excuse for her going untidily about the house, and telling her husband home truths that hurt his vanity. Because a woman is his wife gives a man no right to say things to her he would not dare to say to any other lady who possessed a big, ablebodied brother. Good manners are the preservation of peace and concord, and are warranted to keep happiness in any climate. The problem of how to be happy though married is really no problem at all. No mystery should ever have been made of it. It is merely fair dealing in fair partnership—giving the other party the privileges and perquisites you assume for yourself, and allowing the person you love as much consideration and civility as you would show a stranger.—New York Weekly.

Mixed the Infants Up.

At Southport, England, some years ago, births took place in two families living in the same house. In one case twins arrived, and a single in the other. The three children were being washed and dressed, and the father of the twins coming in, the three were placed in one bed with the idea of leading him to believe that his wife had given birth to triplets. The joke, for that was all which was intended, succeeded to the full—for the time at least—and then came the question of separating the infants and restoring them to their respective mothers. Here a difficulty presented itself, and the women in attendance were shocked to find themselves unable to say which was which. A Liverpool paper says the identification has not yet been satisfactorily established, and it is a case in which even a Solomon might be puzzled.

Keep Bills.

It is well to keep every bill, paid or not, for an indefinite period. One never knows when mistakes may occur or when dishonesty may be attempted. The steel bill files are all very well, though they are not remarkable for their neatness or order, but a better way is to use a large scrap book and paste the bills in alphabetical order, according to the names of those by whom they are preferred, therein. If possible, it would be well to prepare the leaves like those of an address book, so that it would be easy to find any bill at any time. Of course, this is only a cheaper home-made substitute for a regular letter file, which is the very best thing for the purpose.

"All In" Judicially Defined.

In the case of state vs. Hennessey, 90 Pac. Rep. 221, the Nevada supreme court gives a definition of the slang phrase "all in." The question came up in connection with the admission in evidence of a dying declaration, the declarant's statement that he was "all in" being relied on to show that he was under a sense of impending death. The court said: "The expression, 'I am all in' is one frequently made use of in this western country, and when used under the circumstances in question may, we think, be taken to have meant that the speaker considered his life was practically at an end."

How the Professor Was Affected.

"There's not a particle of ventilation in this room," said the professor, suddenly stopping in his talk and looking about him. "Can you boys tell me what it does to a man to be in a room when there is no ventilation?" "I should say it filled him with hot air, professor," replied one of the daring ones.

Womanly Enough for Him.

Miss Graduate—"What is your definition of the term 'womanly woman,' father, dear?" Her Father—"A womanly woman is one who is capable of manufacturing a pie like those your grandmother used to turn out."—Stray Stories.

Sale of Lands for Unpaid Taxes

Collector's Office, City of Plainfield, New Jersey.

Notice is hereby given that the subscriber, the Collector of the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, pursuant to the authority of the statute in such case made and provided, will on at two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, at the said Collector's office, No. 151 North Avenue, in said city, expose for sale and sell the several tracts or parcels of land hereinafter specified, or any part or parts thereof severally sufficient for the purpose, on which taxes for the year nineteen hundred and six remain in arrears, to such person or persons as will purchase the same for the shortest term and pay the tax lien thereon, including interest and costs of sale, or in fee where no one will bid for a shorter term.

Wednesday, October, 23, 1907,

This sale is made under the provisions of the act of the Legislature of this State, entitled: "An Act for the assessment and collection of taxes," approved April 8, 1903, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Further particulars of the land to be sold, as shown on the City records, may be obtained at the office of the subscriber any week day prior to the day of sale, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., except holidays and Saturdays, and on Saturdays between 9 a. m. and 12 noon.

The following is a list of the several tracts and parcels of lands to be sold, which shows the names of the delinquents, the supposed owners thereof as the names of the delinquent owners appear on the books of the taxing district, together with a statement of the wards of the city wherein said lands are respectively situated, and the street in which each lot is situated, the block and lot number of each lot as they appear on the Official Assessment Maps of the City of Plainfield, on file in the office of the City Collector, and the amount due from each of the said lots respectively. To the amount due on each lot and parcel as hereinafter designated, there will be added interest at the rate of ten per centum per annum from the twentieth day of December, 1906, to the day of sale, and the fees provided by said act of the Legislature, viz.: for preparing and publishing notices of sale twenty-five cents for each parcel of land advertised; and for selling twenty-five cents for each parcel sold; and for each certificate of sale, fifty cents, besides necessary disbursements for printing, postage, affidavits and acknowledgements, which are hereby estimated at three dollars for each item of arrearage, and the City Clerk's fee for recording report, ten cents for each parcel of land sold, and all said fees and expenses shall form part of the tax lien and be paid by the purchaser at the tax sale.

he said no; that a dead man was between us."

"Is that all you know?"

The younger man bent his head, his face grave and perplexed. "Practically all."

Hampton wet his dry lips with his tongue, his breath quickening.

"And in that she was right," he said at last, his eyes lowered to the ground. "I will tell you why. It was the father of Naida Gillis who was convicted of the murder of Maj. Brant."

"Oh, my father? Is she Capt. Nolan's daughter? But you say 'convicted.' Was there ever any doubt? Do you question his being guilty?"

Hampton pointed in silence to the hideous creature behind them. "That man could tell, but he has gone mad."

Brant endeavored to speak, but the words would not come; his brain seemed paralyzed. Hampton held himself under better control.

"I have confidence, Lieut. Brant, in your honesty," he began, gravely, "and I believe you will strive to do whatever is best for her, if anything should happen to me out yonder. But for the possibility of my being knocked out, I wouldn't talk about this, not even to you. The affair is a long way from being straightened out so as to make a pleasant story, but I'll give you all you actually require to know in order to make it clear to her, provided I shouldn't come back. You see, she doesn't know very much more than you do—only what I was obliged to tell to keep her from getting too closely entangled with you. Maybe I ought to have given her the full story before I started on this trip. I've since wished I had, but you see, I never dreamed it was going to end here, on the Big Horn; besides, I didn't have the nerve.

"You see, Brant, I feel that I simply have to carry these dispatches through. I have a pride in giving them to Custer myself, because of the trouble I've had in getting them here. But perhaps I may not come back, and in that case there wouldn't be anyone living to tell her the truth. It seems to me that there is going to be a big fight somewhere in these hills before long. So I want to leave these private papers with you until I come back. It will relieve my mind to know they are safe; if I don't come, then I want you to open them and do whatever you decide is best for the little girl. You will do that, won't you?"

He handed over a long manila envelope securely sealed, and the younger man accepted it, noticing that it was unaddressed before depositing it safely in an inner pocket of his fatigue jacket.

"Certainly, Hampton," he said. "Is that all?"

"All except what I am going to tell you now regarding Murphy. There is no use my attempting to explain exactly how I chanced to find out all these things, for they came to me little by little during several years. I knew Nolan, and I knew your father, and I had reason to doubt the guilt of the captain, in spite of the verdict of the jury that condemned him. In fact, I knew at the time, although it was not in my power to prove it, that the two principal witnesses against Nolan lied. I thought I could guess why, but we drifted apart, and finally I lost all track of every one connected with the affair. Then I happened to pick up that girl down in the canyon beyond the Bear Water, and pulled her out alive just because she chanced to be of that sex, and I couldn't stand to see her fall into Indian clutches. I didn't feel any special interest in her at the time, supposing she belonged to Old Gillis, but she somehow grew on me—she's that kind, you know; and when I discovered, purely by accident, that she was Capt. Nolan's girl, but that it all had been kept from her, I just naturally made up my mind I'd dig out the truth if I possibly could, for her sake. The fact is, I began to think a lot about her—not the way you do, you understand; I'm getting too old for that, and have known too much about women,—but maybe somewhat as a father might feel. Anyhow, I wanted to give her a chance, a square deal, so that she wouldn't be ashamed of her own name if ever she found out what it was.

"About that time I fell foul of Murphy and Slavin there in Glencaid. I never got my eyes on Murphy, you know, and Slavin was so changed by that big red beard that I failed to recognize him. But their actions aroused my suspicions, and I went after them good and hard. I wanted to find out what they knew, and why those lies were told on Nolan at the trial. I had an idea they could tell me. So, for a starter I tackled Slavin, supposing we were alone, and I was pumping the facts out of him successfully by holding a gun under his nose, and occasionally jogging his memory, when this fellow Murphy got excited, and chasseed into the game, but happened to nip his partner instead of me. In the course of our little scuffle I chanced to catch a glimpse of the fellow's right hand, and it had a scar on the back of it that looked mighty familiar. I had seen it before, and I wanted to see it again. So, when I got out of that scrape, and the doctor had dug a stray bullet out of my anatomy, there didn't seem to be any one left for me to chase excepting Murphy, for Slavin was dead. I wasn't exactly sure he was the owner of that scar, but I had my suspicions and wanted to verify them. Having struck his trail, I reached Cheyenne just about four hours after he left there with these dispatches for the Big Horn. I caught up with the fellow on the south bank of the Belle Fourche, and being well aware that no threat or gun play would ever force him to confess the truth, I undertook to frighten him by trickery. I brought along some drawing-paper and drew your father's picture in phosphorus and gave him the benefit in the dark. That caught Murphy all right, and everything was coming my way. He threw up his hands and even agreed to come in here with me and tell the whole story, but the poor fellow's brain couldn't stand the strain of the scare I had given him. He went raving mad on the Powder; he jumped on me while I was asleep, and since then every mile has been a little hell. That's the whole of it to date."

They were up with the pack-train by now, and the cavalrymen gazed with interest at the new arrivals. Several among them seemed to recognize Murphy, and crowded about his horse with rough expressions of sympathy. Brant scarcely glanced at them, his grave eyes on Hampton's stern face.

"And what is it you wish me to do?"

"Take care of Murphy. Don't let him remain alone for a minute. If he has any return of reason, compel him to talk. He knows you, and will be as greatly frightened at your presence and knowledge as at mine. Besides, you have fully as much at stake as anyone, for in no other way can the existing barrier between Naida and yourself be broken down."

Insisting that now he felt perfectly fit for any service, the impatient Hampton was quickly supplied with the necessary food and clothing, while Murphy, grown violently abusive, was strapped on a litter between two mules, a guard on either side. Brant rode with the civilian on a sharp trot as far as the head of the pack-train, endeavoring to the very last to persuade the wearied man to relinquish this work to another.

"Foster," he said to the sergeant in command of the advance, "did you chance to notice just what coulee Custer turned into when his column swung to the right?"

"I think it must have been the second yonder, sir; where you see that bunch of trees. We was a long ways back, but I could see the boys plain enough as they come out on the bluff up there. Some of 'em waved their hats back at us. Is this man goin' after them, sir?"

"Yes, he has dispatches from Cheyenne."

"Well he ought ter have no trouble findin' the trail. It ought ter be 'bout plain as a road back in God's country, sir, fer there were more than 200 horses, and they'd leave a good mark even on hard ground."

Brant held out his hand. "I'll certainly do all in my power, Hampton, to bring this out right. You can rely on that, and I will be faithful to the little girl."

The two men clasped hands, their eyes filled with mutual confidence. Then Hampton touched spurs to his horse and galloped swiftly forward.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Fight in the Valley.

Far below, in the heart of the sunny depression bordering the left bank of the Little Big Horn, the stalwart troopers under Reno's command gazed up the steep bluff to wave farewell to their comrades disappearing to the right. Last of all, Custer halted his horse an instant, silhouetted against the blue sky, and swung his hat before spurring out of sight.

The plan of battle was most simple and direct. It involved a nearly simultaneous attack upon the vast Indian village from below and above, success depending altogether upon the prompt co-operation of the separate detachments. Scarcely had Custer's slender column of horsemen vanished across the summit before Reno's command advanced, trotting down the valley, the Arikara scouts in the lead. They had been chosen to strike the first blow, to force their way into the lower village, and thus to draw the defending warriors to their front, while Custer's men were to charge upon the rear.

A half-mile, a mile, Reno's troops rode, with no sound breaking the silence but the pounding of hoofs, the tinkle of accoutrements. Then, rounding a sharp projection of earth and rock, the scattered lodges of the Indian village already partially revealed to those in advance, the riders were brought to sudden halt by a fierce crackling of rifles from rock and ravine. Men fell cursing, and the frightened horses swerved, their riders struggling madly with their mounts, the column thrown into momentary confusion. But the surprised cavalrymen, quailing beneath the hot fire poured into them, rallied to the shouts of their officers, and swung into a slender battle front, stretching out their thin line from the bank of the river to the sharp uplift of the western bluffs. Scarcely 150 white troopers waited to stem as best they might that fierce onrush of 1,200 battle-crazed braves.

For an almost breathless space those mingled hordes of Sioux and Cheyennes hesitated to drive straight home their death-blow. They knew those silent men in the blue shirts, knew they died hard. Upon that slight pause pivoted the fate of the day; upon it hung the lives of those other men riding boldly and trustfully across the sunlit ridges above. "Audacity, always audacity," that is the accepted motto for a cavalryman. And be the cause what it may, it was here that Maj. Reno failed. In that supreme instant he was guilty of hesitancy, doubt, delay. He chose defense in preference to attack, dallied where he should have acted. The observing savages, gathering courage from his apparent weakness, burst forth in resistless torrent against the slender, unsupported line, turned his flank by one fierce charge, and hurled the struggling troopers back with a rush into the narrow strip of timber bordering the river.

The whole narrow valley seemed to swarm with braves; they poured forth from sheltering coulees and shadowed ravines; they dashed down in countless numbers from the distant village. Custer, now far away behind the bluffs, and almost beyond sound of the firing, was utterly ignored. Every savage chief knew exactly where that column was, but it could wait its turn.

In leaderless effort to break away from that swift-gathering cordon, before the red, remorseless folds should close tighter and crush them to death, the troopers, half of them already dismounted, burst from cover in an endeavor to attain the shelter of the bluffs. The deadly Indian rifles flamed in their faces, and they were hurled back, a mere fleeing mob, searching for nothing in that moment of terror but a possible passageway across the stream. Through some rare providence of God, they chanced to strike the banks at a spot where the river proved fordable. They plunged headlong in, officers and men commingled, the Indian bullets churning up the water on every side. The loss in that wild retreat (which Reno later called a "charge") was heavy, the effect demoralizing; but those who escaped found a spot well suited for defense. Even as they swung down from off their wounded, panting horses and flung themselves flat upon their faces to sweep with hastily leveled carbines the river banks below, Benteen came trotting gallantly down the valley to their aid, his troopers fresh and eager to be thrown forward on the firing-line. The worst was over, and like maddened lions, the rallied soldiers of the Seventh, cursing their folly, turned to strike and slay.

A line of skirmishers was hastily thrown forward along the edge of the bluff, while volunteers, urged by the agonized cries of the wounded, endeavored vainly to procure a supply of water from the river. Again and again they made the effort, only to be driven back by the deadly Indian rifle fire. By three o'clock, although the majority of the savages had departed down the river, enough remained to keep up a galling fire, and hold Reno strictly on the defensive.

As the men lay exposed to the continuous sniping fire, above the surrounding din were borne to their ears the reports of distant guns. It came distinctly from the northward, growing heavier and more continuous. None among them doubted its ominous meaning. Custer was already engaged in hot action at the right of the Indian village. Why were they kept lying there in idleness? Why were they not pushed forward to do their part? They looked into each other's faces. God! They were 300 now; they could sweep aside like chaff that fringe of red skirmishers if only they got the word! Officer after officer, unable to restrain his impatience, strode back across the bluff summit, amid whistling bullets, and personally begged the major to speak the one word which should hurl them to the rescue. They cried like women, they swore through clinched teeth, they openly exhibited their contempt for such a commander, yet the discipline of army service made active disobedience impossible. They went reluctantly back, as helpless as children.

It was four o'clock, the shadows of the western bluffs already darkening the river bank. Suddenly a faint cheer ran along the lines, and the men lifted themselves to gaze up the river. Urging the tired animals to a trot, the strong hand of a trooper grasping every halter-strap, Brant was swinging his long pack-train up the smoke-wreathed valley. The outriding flankers exchanged constant shots with the skulking savages hiding in every ravine and coulee. Pausing only to protect their wounded, fighting their way step by step, N troop ran the gantlet and came charging into the cheering lines with every pound of their treasure safe. Weir of D, whose dismounted troopers held that portion of the line, strode a pace forward to greet the leader, and as the extended hands of the officers met, there echoed down to them from the north the reports of two heavy volleys, fired in rapid succession. The sounds were clear, distinctly audible even above the uproar of the valley. The heavy eyes of the two soldiers met, their dust-streaked faces flushed.

"That was a signal. Custer's signal for help!" the younger man cried, impulsively, his voice full of agony. "For God's sake, Weir, what are you fellows waiting here for?"

The other uttered a groan, his hand flung in contempt back toward the bluff summit. "The cowardly fool won't move; he's whipped to death now."

"Reno, you mean? Whipped? You haven't lost 20 men. Is this the Seventh?—skulking here under cover while Custer begs help? Doesn't the man know? Doesn't he understand? By heaven, I'll face him myself! I'll make him act, even if I have to damn him to his face."

He swung his horse with a jerk to the left, but even as the spurs touched, Weir grasped the taut rein firmly.

"It's no use, Brant. It's been done; we've all been at him. He's simply lost his head. Know? Of course he knows. Martini struck us just below here, as we were coming in, with a message from Custer. It would have stirred the blood of anyone but him—Oh, God! it's terrible."

"A message? What was it?"

"Cook wrote it, and addressed it to Benteen. It read: 'Come on. Big village. Be quick. Bring packs.' And then, 'P. S.—Bring packs.' That means they want ammunition badly; they're fighting to the death out yonder, and they need powder. Oh, the coward!"

Brant's eyes ran down the waiting line of his own men, sitting their saddles beside the halted pack animals.

Brant Was Swinging His Pack-Train Up the Smoke-Wreathed Valley.

He leaned over and dropped one hand heavily on Weir's shoulder. "The rest of you can do as you please, but N troop is going to take those ammunition packs to Custer if there's any possible way to get through, orders or no orders." He straightened up in the saddle, and his voice sounded down the wearied line like the blast of a trumpet.

"Attention! N troop! Right face; dress. Number four bring forward the ammunition packs. No, leave the others where they are; move lively, men!"

He watched them swing like magic into formation, their dust-begrimed faces lighting up with animation. They knew their officer, and this meant business.

Do You Realize
that Your Old Square or Upright Piano is Growing Less and Less in Value Every Day.

Naturally you hesitate to spend anything on it for tuning and Repairing; you can use it but very little, if at all, and as time passes on it goes from bad to worse.

Why not put in its place a new, modern instrument that will add to the beauty and happiness of your home?

We will give you a liberal exchange valuation on your old piano. The balance you can pay in payments of from $5 to $10 monthly.

In the purchase price of each instrument we include a stool, scarf or cover, one year's tuning and free delivery to your parlor.

Why not decide to get a new piano now?

The Tanner's Art.

It is impossible to say when the tanner's art was originated. We know that leather was early known in Egypt, as well as in all the ancient nations. The celebrated "Gordian knot," that Alexander the Great "untied" with his sword, was made of leather.

GOLF.

There was not a single local representative in the East Jersey Golf Association tournament held last week. Most of the crack players are busy now and others did not care to play in the tournament.

Visitors and members made up a field of more than forty in the tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association on Friday. This is an unusual number of women in a golf tournament.

TENNIS.

Miss Barbara Fleming defeated Mrs. S. F. Weaver, 6-3, 6-4, 7-5, in the finals of the women's single tennis tournament on Saturday at the Park Club.

ELKS' GAME POSTPONED.

Contest at Somerville to be Played Next Saturday—Crowd Disappointed.

After turning up for the battle, the Elk nines of this city and Somerville were washed from the field before they could engage in the struggle at the Somerset county capital Saturday afternoon. The Plainfield team had had about ten minutes of practise and were beginning to feel like world's champions when the weather man turned the hose on. There was a let up in the rain after a bit and hopes of a contest revived, but the faucets were turned on full again and the flood chased the athletes to cover.

The downpour brought disappointment to a big crowd. The game will be played next Saturday, and it will be all the better for the delay, because both inies will use the time to practice.

Cannot Play Rahway This Season.

Because the rain interferred with the baseball game scheduled between Clinton avenue and Rahway for Saturday afternoon at Crescent Oval, it will be impossible for these clubs to meet again this season, as Rahway has completed its schedule and is through. There was every indication of a big crowd at the oval, when the rain came down in torrents and compelled the call-off of the contest. Next Saturday Clinton Avenue will play Scotch Plain at Crescent Oval

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold an entertainment at the Casinlo on Thusday night, October 10. Plans for the affair will be completed at the meeting to be held Thursday night.

Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., will hold regular communications tomorrow night and Tuesday night, October 15. The master mason degree will be conferred on three candidates tomorrow night. On October 15 the district deputy, Right Worshipful John Zulauf, will make his annual visitation. The district deputy will hold lodges of instruction on the evenings of October 5 and 26 at 8 o'clock.

Funeral of Mrs. Pound.

The funeral service of Mrs. Josephine L. Pound, widow of George R. Pound, was held at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the Friends' meeting-house on Watchung avenue. There was a large attendance of Friends, a majority being numbered among the oldest members of the society. Henry G. Adams was the only speaker. He referred to the life and character of Mrs. Pound when she was an active member of the society. The remains were placed in the cemetery back of the meeting-house, beside those of Mrs. Pound's husband. The bearers were Charles E. Vail, Henry G. Adams, Clarence B. Vail and Ephraim M. Vail.

"FOR WILLIE"

Bit of Humor That Won Joe Jefferson's Son $4,000

When William Winter Jefferson, who with his brother, Joseph Jefferson, presents "The Rivals" at the New Plainfield Theatre tonight, was scarcely out of his teens, he suddenly found himself heir to a legacy of $12,000 bequeathed by a fond aunt. When the executor had handed him over a check for the amount, his father, the great Joseph Jefferson, turned to him and said:

"Willie, what are you going to do with all that money?"

"Governor, I've packed away $10,000 of it in bank and with the rest I'm going to see the world."

A couple of weeks later, the son landed in London with $2,000 in his pockets. He had hardly been abroad a fortnight when the man who made "Rip VanWinkle" famous received this cablegram addressed to him at Buzzards' Bay:

"Send me two thousand."

Not understanding what use the boy could have for the money when he had only left a shrt time before with a like amount, Mr. Jefferson cabled back:

"What for?"

The next day brought this reply:

"For Willie."

The bit of humor won the old man's heart and instead of cabling $2,000 he doubled the amount.

TOLD OF HIS WORK.

Rev. R. A. Stout Talks At Trinity Reformed Church.

Rev. R. A. Stout, a student in the Theological Seminary at New Brunswick, addressed the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed church, yesterday afternoon, it being the quarterly meeting of the Sunday-school Missionary Society, of which Elmer Wheeler is the president. He presided and introduced Mr. Stout who told of his experience in Oklahoma and Indian Territory last summer while engaged in mission work.

He lived in a tent and while in the west made a religious canvas of that particular section. A Sunday-school was organized. The first Sunday five persons were present, and when Mr. Stout left there were thirty-five people identified with the school. He described the work as being encouraging.

TO PROTECT GAME IN JERSEY.

Gun Clubs Will United for Prevention of Killing Migrating Fowl.

George Batton, president of the Montclair Gun Club, recently sent a letter to all the gun clubs of New Jersey calling upon them to combine for the purpose of urging legislation to protect the water fowl during their spring migrations for their breeding grounds in the far North. The response was almost unanimous for cooperation, and the result will be the formation of a State confederation of gun clubs at Montclair on Oct. 12. The meeting will be addressed by Dr. A. K. Fisher, of the Biological Survey, Washington.

A shoot at which silver prizes will be given will be held in the morning. The delegates are eligible for this contest. In the evening the club will give a dinner.

WARNING FOR GIRLS.

New Market Minister Tells Them to Avoid Worldly Young Men.

In a sermon to young women, Rev. George H. Gardner, the new pastor of the New Market Baptist church, warned the girls of his congregation last night to beware of encouraging attentions of young men not identified with a church. He said marriages of church girls and worldly young men were too apt to prove unhappy.

He spoke strongly against the idea of marrying a young man to reform him. He advised the girls to let careless young man reform themselves before they trusted their lives to them.

Drove Suffering Horses.

Frank Deal, driver for F.T.Ostrom, an ice dealer, was arrested Saturday afternoon by Detective-Sergeant Flynn, for driving a team that was suffering from ugly harness galls. Mr. Ostrom said in court this morning that the driver had taken the team, a hired ont, without authority. Sentence was suspended with a warning.

—The October meeting of the borough council will be held Friday night, when it is expected that there will be further action regarding the sewer report.

Only 20 per cent. of the murders committed yearly in America and Europe are ever found out.

Trinity Commandery, No. 18, K. T. will hold a regular conclave tonight.

TRAIN AND TRACK.

Heat expansion makes the rails of a 400-mile railway 340 yards longer in summer than in winter.

The railway mileage of the two South African colonies, Orange River and the Transvaal, has doubled since 1898. It is now over 2,500 miles.

Civil Engineer Knorre, one of the largest contractors for public works in Russia, has obtained the concession for building the Polar-Ural railroad, the project that was recently approved by the Russian commission on new railroads.

It is anouncedt hat soon a train de luxe will run daily between Tokyo and Europe. The route selected passes through Japan to Simonoseki, thence by large ferries to Fassau, in the south of Korea, through Korea to Mukden and Harbin and thence through Siberia.

STATE LINES.

There are 1,500,000,000 people in the world. They could all be set down in the State of Texas, and each person could be given one-ninth of an acre of ground on which to live.

New York has for many years been one of the few large States in which persons could marry without first securing a license. The Legislature has lately passed a law, to go into effect on January 1, making it a misdemeanor for any authorized person to solemnize a marriage unless the parties to it have first obtained a license from the proper officers.
